THE sentence of death passed by court-martial upon Gunner Kelly, of R-3 R.A., stationed at Dinapore, for the murder of Sergeant-Major Burton on the 29th June last, has been confirmed, and only awaits arrival of the warrant to be put in execution.

THE PUNJAB CHIEF COURT.—The Lahore paper writes:—"The appointment of Mr. E. W. Parker as Registrar of the Punjab Chief Court is one which will command the approval of all who have marked the energy and ability which Mr. Parker has displayed in the many arduous duties which have been from time to time imposed upon him; especially, recently in connection with the inquiry into the income-tax assessment and levy in the Punjab. This task, which necessitated not only the examination and versification, but the practical collection of all the statistics on the subject has brought to light many curious and anomalous features with regard to the income-tax in the Punjab, whose remedy should make a considerable financial difference to the Government.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL W. J. BAX, Assistant Adjutant-General, Allahabad Division, goes home on a year's leave in October next.

MAJOR H. YATES and LIEUTENANT H. HARRISON, R.A., are granted twelve months' leave to England.

AN exchange of battalions has been sanctioned between Captains Milton and Wisherby, Yorkshire Light Infantry.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. MOORE, General List, Infantry, retires from the Service on the 13th November next.

MAJOR ROWAN HAMILTON, A.D.C. to Lord Dufferin, goes home on short leave very soon, returning to India towards the end of the year to take his place on the new Viceroy's Staff. Major Hamilton had contemplated retirement from the Service; but, owing to a certain ruling regarding Staff service not qualifying for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, he has abandoned his intention.

THE tenure of the appointment in the Ordnance Department held by Major C. H. Scott, Royal Artillery, Superintendent of the Gunpowder Factory, Ishapore, has been extended, and that officer is about to proceed to England on deputation duty in connection with the department. Lieut. A. L. Carroll, R.A., will act for Major Scott during the absence of the latter from India.

MR. J. COOPER, A.V.D., at present employed on special duty in the Berars, proceeds to Europe at once under orders of Government to attend a course of lectures on the treatment of hydrophobia by M. Pasteur, at Paris. On his return to the country, the Government of India will doubtless utilise Mr. Cooper's newly-acquired knowledge to some beneficial purpose.

THE following is an abstract from the order by Col. Harvey, commanding at Sabathu, relative to the death of Lieut. Rorke, of the Wiltshire Regiment:—"The Commanding Officer unites with all ranks in the Battalion in deploring the sudden death of this excellent officer and keen soldier. His very thoughts were for the reputation and welfare of the Wiltshire Regiment in which he had served seven and a-half years, of which two years and four months were as Adjutant of the 1st Battalion. Officers will wear mourning until the 28th inst."

THE troopship programme for the forthcoming season has undergone some modification. The dates of the sailings from Bombay as now fixed are the 14th and 25th October, the 4th and 18th November, the 30th December, the 13th and 30th January, the 10th of February or early in March, the 17th and 31st March, and the 7th April.

It is expected that a change will be made in the final settlement of time-expired men and invalids before the next trooping season commences. A new system of settlement has been tried at Deolali depot during the past two trooping seasons with fair results, but no decision has yet been arrived at on the subject by the Government of India.

It has been decided that gratuities and pensions on account of wounds and injuries, when paid in Indian currency, are to be converted at the Government rate of exchange for the year.

THE Government has decided that the Reserve office allowance for Native regiments of Rs. 30 per mensem shall not be paid unless a regiment has fifty or more Reservists on its register.

ALL officers proceeding on field service will be allowed an advance of pay and Indian allowances only for the month in which they quit their stations and for the following month. Command allowances, contract, office, or staff allowances of any kind cannot be taken up as an advance, but must be drawn in the ordinary way when they fall due.

GUNNER KELLY, of R-3, R.A., who murdered Sergeant-Major Burton at Dinapore a few weeks ago, has been hanged.

THE following appointments have been made:—

Major T. H. Goldney, 25th Punjab Infantry, to officiate as second in command of the 32nd Pioneers, vice Lieutenant-Colonel C. W. Hodgson, who is appointed in the same capacity to the 34th Pioneers.

Lieutenant A. W. Warden, 27th Punjab Infantry, to 3rd Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent, as officiating squadron officer.

Lieutenant F. G. B. Smerdon, 7th Dragoon Guards, to be adjutant of the regiment, vice Captain C. W. Thompson, resigned.

Lieutenant J. W. Fitzgerald, 43rd Gurkha Light Infantry, to be Quartermaster, vice Lieutenant J. W. Cowley, resigned.

Lieutenant J. M. Capendale, 8th Bengal Cavalry, to officiate as Assistant Judge Advocate, Allahabad Circle.

Captain Appleton is transferred from Chakrata to the Mooltan Division Military Works, vice Major Moore, who goes to the Quetta Division.

The following postings are ordered:—

shire Regiment; and Second Lieutenant S. H. Clino, Border Regiment.

To 2nd Battalions: Lieutenant J. G. King and Second Lieutenant H. St. C. Wilkins, Royal West Surrey Regiment.

The following officers have been granted leave of absence:—Captain W. H. Rycroft, 7th Dragoon Guards, till the 19th September; and Lieutenant E. W. N. Pedder, 17th Lancers, till the 16th October.

Lieut.-Colonel W. Hailes, Wing Commander 4th Bengal Infantry, who was severely wounded on the Manipur-Tumnu frontier in 1886, and who has been incapacitated from duty since, has had his wound pension of £200 a-year renewed for a further period of twelve months.

THE SIKKIM EXPEDITION.

All the reinforcements have now arrived at Gnatong. The weather has been very wet and tempestuous. This may possibly have influenced the Tibetans in postponing the threatened attack. Colonel Graham will proceed at once to adopt offensive operations and attack the fortified positions of the Tibetans, with the view of immediately expelling them from Sikkim. This change of policy has been rendered very necessary by recent incursions into the Japhu Valley, which runs at right angles to the Jelep and Pomeroy Passes. The military operations, although henceforward active instead of merely defensive, will be strictly confined to Sikkim. At present no intention is entertained of carrying the war into the enemy's country. If hereafter the authority of China and Tibet prove still impotent, and the Tibetans persist in continuing their present attitude of insolent and unprovoked aggression, our hands may be forced, and the Government, in absolute self-defence, may be compelled to countenance a campaign in Tibetan territory. The campaign in Sikkim has given Colonel T. Graham, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, claims, says the Broad Arrow, to an appointment on the brigade staff of the Indian Army, which will, no doubt, be duly considered and entertained. In a service of over thirty years this is practically Colonel Graham's first chance, as although he served with a mountain battery in the Black Mountain campaign of twenty years ago, and was also in Afghanistan as a battery commander, he has never hitherto enjoyed the chances now afforded him. Those who know "Tom" Graham are confident as to his ability to successfully carry out the operations entrusted to him.

The Chumbi Valley, where 15,000 Tibetans are said to be collected with the object of expelling the British troops from Sikkim, is, says the St. James's Gazette, a lofty promontory of Tibetan territory, jutting out to the south and intermediate between Sikkim and Bhootan. The Jelep Pass, where the high road leading from Darjeeling to Lhasa crosses the dividing range, was visited by Mr. W. T. Blanford and Captain Elwes in the month of August, 1870, and their description is worth recalling at a time when the spot may form, almost at any moment, the meeting ground of the two opposing forces. "On the crest of the ridge some twenty Tibetans were posted to oppose our passage; they were quite unarmed, except with their knives, and remained seated around the pile of stones which marks the frontier, their jong, or captain, a round-faced rosy Tibetan with by no means an intelligent countenance, in the centre. He appeared to take no notice of us, and seemed solely occupied in muffling himself in his huge cloak to keep off the wind, which blew piercingly over the exposed ridge we were on. These Tibetans, we subsequently learned, were merely villagers ordered up to guard the frontier." The English travellers sat down and breakfasted, but could not get the Tibetans to recognise their existence; so, to teach them a lesson in politeness, Captain Elwes walked rapidly across the frontier and began descending the opposite side. The continuation of Mr. Blanford's account is amusing. "The men were utterly taken by surprise. They stood up and crowded around me; then, with one accord, rushed after Elwes, scrambling rapidly over rocks despite their long cloaks, and, finding that exostulation was useless, they flung themselves down in the path before us, beseeching us to return, and expressing to us by most emphatic gestures that all their throats would be cut if we persisted in entering Tibet. With all this there was no attempt at violence or threats; they got in our way as much as they could, but that was all. Hereupon we halted and explained to them as well as we could through a very bad interpreter that it was not polite to sit and stare at strangers without taking any further notice of them. I believe that this little incident had an excellent effect, for in all subsequent visits to frontier-posts we were received with the greatest civility and politeness; and I am convinced that we rose in the estimation of the Tibetans by insisting on their treating us with proper respect." The inhabitants of the village surrounding the fort of Phari Jong own large herds of yaks and sheep, and engage exclusively in the carrying trade. Two Jong Pons, or fort masters, the farmers of the taxes under the Lhasa Government, bear rule here for periods of three years. Their duty is to guard the road and levy taxes equal to one-tenth the value on any merchandise which passes, and to decide cases of a civil or criminal nature. How far beyond the Chumbi Valley hostilities may extend it is impossible to foretell. It will in any case be a novel experience for British troops to be campaigning at a height of 13,000 or 14,000 feet above the level of the sea; and it is to be hoped that the fighting may be speedily concluded and not prolonged into the winter months.

The office of Examiner of Medical Accounts is to be transferred from Madras to Poona, and the office of Examiner of Fund Accounts will be incorporated with the office of Pay Examiner. The transfer will be effected from October 1.

EXTENSION OF AGE FOR SERVICE.—A Calcutta paper says:—"Hitherto ministerial officers could only be retained in Government service after the age of 55 years with the permission of the Local Government. But the Bengal Government has recently issued a circular, delegating to all Heads of Departments, District Officers and Judges the power of declaring any ministerial officer subordinate to them to be efficient, and of permitting him to remain in the service for a definite period up to, but not beyond, the age of 60 years. Each subordinate's case is to be gone into on his attaining the age of 55 years and after each extension of service. If the officer is not considered efficient the case is to be reported to Government for orders. Extension of service beyond the age of 60 years can only be granted by the Local Government. This new rule should save the Appointment Department of the Secretariat a good deal of correspondence."

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I.,

PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. 8vo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY,
1857–8, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleison's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA
from 1746 to 1849 inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are not giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. 20s. Cloth. With a Portrait and 4 Plans.

FOUNDERS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE—
CLIVE, WARREN, HASTINGS, and WELLESLEY
Vol. I.—LORD CLIVE.

"Unquestionably the best life of Clive that has appeared."—VANITY FAIR.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA
AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kossair to Cairo in 1801.

Colonel Malleison is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. With Map. 18s.

A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1877.

"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleison's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

8vo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY.
From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years' War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleison's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a Description of some of the most famous instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleison has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skilful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

8vo. Price 8s.

HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleison is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his literary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF
INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS,
COLD, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This system is necessary, as many persons have purchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. —The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON. REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SKIRKS & CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1884. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances of the infirmity of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell St., W.C.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.
We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. — We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURERS. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Russell St., W.C.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour. — Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name. — J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims. — Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India. — Westminster Review.

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 28th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 26th August; and from Calcutta to the 25th August.

MR. H. M. DURAND, Foreign Secretary to the Government, leaves Simla on the 1st October and proceeds at the head of a mission to Kabul at the request of the Amir Abdur Rahman. His Highness has expressed a wish for the deputation of a trustworthy official to Kabul to discuss certain matters of importance on which he has doubts. The members of the mission will be the Amir's guests for the ten days or a fortnight they will be at Cabul, and are expected to be back in India on the 1st November.

SIR D. MACKENZIE WALLACE accompanies Mr. Durand to offer his Excellency the Viceroy's compliments and farewells to his Highness the Amir, while the other officers will be Lieut.-Colonel Neville Chamberlain; an officer to be chosen from among the Punjab frontier officials; Lieut. Manners Smith, military attaché in the Foreign Office; and Dr. Owen, who was Staff Surgeon to Sir Frederick Roberts in Kabul in 1879-80. Sirdar Afzar Jung, of the Nizam's army, and one or more Native officers of the Indian Army familiar with Afghanistan, will also be attached to the mission. The 18th Bengal Lancers will furnish the escort, Captain G. A. Money being in command, with Lieutenants Eardley-Wilmot and K. Chesney as his subalterns. The mission will rendezvous at Lundi Khana, and will thence proceed in ten marches to Kabul. Heliographic communication will, if possible, be established along the route by parties of signallers from Native Regiments.

MR. MAHOMED ASLAM KHAN, C.M.G., the Kazl in the Foreign Office, Mr. Merk, Deputy Commissioner of Peshawur, Ressaldar-Major Bahauddin Khan, Central India Horse, and Ibrahim Khan, late of the Punjab Police, accompany the Cabul Mission.

IN the Supreme Legislative Council, on August 22nd, Mr. Scoble obtained leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Succession Act of 1865, the Court Fees Act of 1870, and the Probate and Administration Act of 1881; also a Bill to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Presidency Small Cause Court Act. The Hon. Mr. Westland obtained leave to introduce a Bill to facilitate the collection of debts on successions, and the Bill to regulate the payment of duty on salt was referred to a Select Committee.

THE offices of the Government of India close in Simla on the 3rd November and open in Calcutta on Monday, the 19th.

THE District Magistrate of Poona, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution in the Hanmantrao case, decided to frame charges under section 162 or 163 of the Indian Penal Code, and adjourned further hearing to give accused full opportunity of answering them.

THE Bombay Government have made formal application to the Government of India to nominate three Commissioners to investigate the charges against Mr. Crawford. The whole of the papers in connection with the case are thus likely to be passed in review at headquarters before any further steps are taken.

THE Punjab Chiefs who have been invited to send representatives to Simla to discuss the reorganisation of their forces are Jhind, Nabha, Bahawalpur, Patiala, and Kapurthala. The Maharajah of Ulwar has applied for the services of a British officer to advise and assist him in putting his army in a thoroughly efficient state, his offer to aid in the defence of the frontier having been accepted by the Government of India. Major Melliss has left Simla for Jammu, where he will consult the Maharaja of Kashmir personally on the question of utilising the State troops in the scheme of Imperial defence. Kashmir is better off than other States, as the Government of India granted the Durbar several thousand stand of Snider rifles some years ago, but the existing army is in a position to benefit by an improved system of training in the use of them.

THE re-arming of the Native army this year will be on a larger scale than was at first anticipated. Not thirty but at least sixty-five regiments in the three Presidencies will receive the Martini-Henry by January 1st. This includes the Native Cavalry, to whom the Martini carbine will be issued.

THE Government of India are about to develop a scheme for providing employment for Native soldiers who may pass into the Reserve. Colonel S. Leigh Hunt, Superintendent of Family Payments and Pensions, Madras, has been placed on special duty at Simla in connection with the scheme.

THE management of horse-breeding operations in India has been definitely transferred from the control of the military authorities to the Revenue and Agricultural Department.

THE matter of strengthening the overworked staff of the Financial Department by the addition of a deputy secretary is practically settled. Mr. J. F. Finlay, now at home, is to be the first appointment.

COLONEL GEORGE ROWLANDSON, Assistant Adjutant-General, Hyderabad Subsidiary Forces, has been offered the command of the Wellington District, vice Colonel Hodding.

ON Friday morning, Aug. 24th, a severe storm passed over Calcutta, assuming a cyclonic character at dawn. A deluge of rain fell for twenty hours, three-fourths of the city was under several feet of water, traffic on the river was completely stopped, and very few shops in the town were opened. Great damage was done to the Native part of the town. The steamers Retriever and Research were held in readiness to proceed to sea in case any casualties occurred.

A SERIOUS collision in the river Hooghly took place on Aug. 21st. The British India steamer Simla ran into the Tyrone, which at the time was moored to buoy and was swinging to tide. The Simla had just left dock, and passing through the Hooghly Bridge, came dead on, striking the starboard of the Tyrone, and making a hole in the latter vessel only five inches above water. The Commander of the Tyrone pumped the water out of her boilers and prevented her from sinking. The Simla was in charge of Harbourmaster Wheeler.

THE sailing ship Champion, which left Calcutta on the 19th August for Australia, in tow of the Clive, had to return. Both sustained damages in the late cyclone. The former parted with her anchors, and at almost the same moment the hawsers of the Clive were cut, and were rendered helpless. In the midst of a severe gale the steamer Rescue took the Champion in tow. Just as she was on the point of being beached the steamer Research, while coming down the river to look out for shipwrecked sailors, collided against the Hooghly Pontoon Bridge and sank. Two lives were lost.

THE Viceroy will accompany Lady Dufferin to Lahore on the occasion of the opening of the Lady Aitchison Hospital on Nov. 15th, and it is probable that his Excellency will then meet such of the Punjab Chiefs as may take the opportunity of his visit to the capital of the provinces to bid him farewell. Their Excellencies will also very likely attend the festivities connected with the wedding of the Maharaja of Patiala. His Excellency arrives in Calcutta on the 1st December, and leaves by the mail steamer for Brindisi on the 14th.

CABUL news, dated the 19th Aug., states that the Ameer's troops sent from Sherpur have reached Bamian on the road to Afghan-Turkistan. They confirm the news that the Balkh people and the troops garrisoned there decline to be misled by Ishak Khan, even though he declared himself the Ameer. The story goes that recently a rumour was spread in Jellalabad that Abdul Rahman was dead, but that his officers were carefully concealing the fact, while making their plans to secure the succession for his son. This story gained such credence that the Commander-in-Chief, Gholam Hyder Khan, had some difficulty in disproving it. He, however, swore on the Koran in open Durbar that the report was absolutely false, and he then set himself to work to punish those who had caused the mischief. Two men were arrested, and the evidence against them being quite clear they were promptly executed. They were blown from guns in the presence of the troops and a great concourse of people. There was nothing to connect these men with Ishak Khan, but it is known that the latter has sent emissaries into Eastern Afghanistan to excite discontent against Abdul Rahman.

No fresh cases of cholera in any corps have been reported from Rawal Pindi since the 18th August. But six cases occurred at Ghurial in the Royal Sussex on the 18th and 19th, and the disease still lingers in the stations of the Derajat. Captain Shirres, R.A., at Bannu, was seized, but recovered, and is progressing favourably.

THE death is reported from Bombay of Major Carter, R.E., Inspector of Submarine Defences in India.

NOTES.

THE P. and O. are winning fresh laurels, owing to the speed of their new steamers. Thanks to that of the Arcadia the present Overland Mails have arrived a day sooner than expected. The letters would have been delivered in London several hours earlier but for a delay en route between Brindisi and London.

WITH the exception that Calcutta has narrowly escaped another serious cyclone there is little news of importance to chronicle which has not been anticipated by the telegrams. News of the revolt in Afghanistan had just reached Bombay before the mails left, and had created some excitement, the fear being that the Ameer would not be able to hold his own; but news by the latest wire states that he is doing so. The mission from Simla to Cabul may, however, under present circumstances, be postponed.

THE "Crawford Case" still lingers. The Madras Mail says in view of the loss of time, temper and money likely to ensue ere the Commission of Inquiry is concluded, that if the Government would but appoint Mr. Crawford to be a member of the mission to Cabul, and make a present of him to the Ameer, a great deal of worry and expense would be spared to all parties.

ALTHOUGH the English Press in India has, hardly without exception, written against the course of action taken by the Bombay Government in the Crawford case, a correspondent writes to us that there is "another side" to the story in the shape of a local theory which holds amongst not a few persons of position in Bombay, and others who claim to think for themselves in an independent manner. The local theory is this: That as soon as Mr. Crawford knew that trouble was brewing, and he found himself threatened with the prospect of an official inquiry before a Special Commission which would be vigorous and inflexible, and whose report might ruin him, he made a pretended escape, hoping to force the hands of the Government by making them arrest him, and bring him for trial in an ordinary criminal court before the evidence was complete. An acquittal under these circumstances would have barred further inquiry and have saved his pension, if not his position. But the Bombay Government discovering this dropped the proceedings before the magistrate, and applied to the Government of India for a Special Commission.

THE theory is ingenious, if not ingenuous. It certainly "extenuates nothing," but we are not quite so sure that it follows the remaining portion of Othello's advice. Our correspondent writes to us:—"I do not vouch for the soundness of the theory, but I submit it to you vultus quantum. The Indian Civil Service has been a purely conducted body ever since its pay was made adequate, but it is a great deal too much in the habit of considering itself above the law; and any Governor who tries to do his duty in opposition to this bureaucracy is sure to bring a hornet's nest about his ears."

Granted: but we cannot help thinking that the Government of Bombay would have acted with sounder judgment had it armed itself with all necessary evidence before taking the first step it did in the matter—not in consideration of the position of the suspected official only, but in consideration of its own position. Its action in the beginning appears to have been not only hasty, but indiscreet.

ONE of the secrets of the influence of English officials in India in dealing with the Princes and Chiefs of that country is a knowledge of their language as spoken in courtly Native circles, not as delivered in commands to one's kutmulgar or bearer. "Jan Larrance's" command of vigorous expressions in the Native dialects gave him no little power in more than one durbar. Lord Dufferin comes from a more finished mould, perhaps, but he has shown diplomatic insight by making himself conversant with Persian, in which language it is said that he conversed fairly fluently and correctly with Sir Asman Jah and the members of his suite during their visit to Simla. A Viceroy's intervals of leisure for linguistic studies are few and far between in India, and it argues not a little in favour of Lord Dufferin's industry and energy that he should have made such good use of such scanty leisure.

HOWEVER, his lordship's efforts would appear to have been eclipsed by that so-called thought-reader, Mr. Cumberland, who has lately been contributing some dreary, but very "self-satisfied," papers to the Echo on his art. The following is a gem shining with truth and modesty:—

The most superstitious of the Indian Native Princes is the Maharajah of Cashmere; and I shall never forget the expression of awe with which he regarded me when I succeeded in reading his thoughts.

His Highness thought of a word in Dogra (a Cashmerian hill patois)—a language of which, needless to say, I knew absolutely nothing, yet I experienced no difficulty in writing the word on the wall of his palace in Dogra characters. His Highness was very anxious to secure my services for his State, and he seemed to be quite disappointed when he found that I was altogether unable to accept the post which he was desirous of conferring upon me. It appears that he had little or no faith in his advisers, and his great object in retaining me was that I might be able to read their thoughts, and tell him when they lied, and if they were becoming unduly rich at his expense.

To be absolutely ignorant of a language and yet be able to write it (in its own peculiar character too) on a monarch's wall, throws the triumph of Daniel before Belshazzar into the shade.

THE Madras Mail, in noticing the fact that during the year 1887-88 the net imports of gold into India were valued at 299½ lakhs, and of silver at 922 4-5th lakhs of rupees, says:—"Between one-eighth and one-ninth of the world's yearly supply of gold is attracted to India—and remains here. This is one of the most important causes of the scarcity of the metal. Gold in this country being a luxury might be appropriately taxed for revenue purposes, or for the good of the country at large. An import duty of 5 per cent. would have yielded the Government about 15 lakhs last year. But the Government has hitherto professed to be shocked by the proposition to tax gold, and prefers to tax incomes, notwithstanding the warning words of several Finance Ministers and other economists. If India were not so hungry for the gold which she can, but which the outside world cannot, dispense with, there would be greater ease in the market for gold, and India would derive benefit in the rate of exchange from the fact. Therefore, if a tax on gold were to check the importation, good would accrue to India by the outside world having more of the metal for its use; but if, as we expect, it would not appreciably check the imports, the Government might be the richer by several lakhs a year."

CAN pure unadulterated Indian tea be obtained in London at a rate which housekeepers would call cheap? Any quantity of tea is being advertised and sold as Indian for prices which forbid the belief that the article can be real. A writer in the Standard calls attention to the so-called China tea which is being disposed of by certain grocers as low as 1s. per pound. He bought a sample, and tells the result of the "brew" he made from it. "Before infusion it smelt like shoe leather; after infusion it had a strong flavour of tallow, and the infused leaves had a most unpleasant smell." This is the tea which it is said that the poor drink, but we imagine not the poor only, for "cheap" tea is much sought after amongst classes which ought to be able to pay a fair price for a fair article. The grocer who sold the tea in question declared that he gave 4½d. per pound for it in bond. The writer then makes the following calculation:—

He then has to pay 6d. per lb. duty, and carriage possibly another farthing. This leaves him a profit of only a penny per lb. Now, this tea has been sold to him by a London merchant at certainly not less than a halfpenny per lb. profit, more probably three-farthings or a penny—say a halfpenny. We thus have this tea sold in Mincing-lane at 4½d. per lb.; some is sold at a lower figure even than that. Out of this the grower has to pay an export duty, in China, of not less than 1½d. per lb., leaving 2½d. to grow the tea, get a profit, pay freight, insurance (if he insures), warehousing, and other expenses in England, and brokers' charges for sale by auction. Let the public ask themselves whether this can be done, so that they can get a tea fit for a human being to drink. Can it even be done at 1s. 3d. or 1s. 4d. per lb. retail, for it must be remembered that the more a grocer gives for tea the more profit he expects to get out of it?

All this refers, as we understand it, solely to "cheap" China tea. But what about advertised "cheap" Indian tea?

To coin new words for future English writers and speakers has been chiefly an American task, but a Bengali Baboo has lately shown at Calcutta that he, too, can improve upon the lexicography taught him by the British Government through the local University. Weary of life and its troubles he determined to destroy himself, which he did with prussic acid. But before he died he wrote on a piece of paper, which was found beside his body, an explanation of his action. It was comprised in one word—"Suicided."

A JOYLESS PLACE.—A correspondent writes from Jeddah to a Bombay paper:—"There are no liquor shops to be found here. If there are some, they import the liquor for their own use, and sell privately. Nothing seems to be exported from Jeddah except mother-o'-pearl shells and hides. The business here is dull for nine months and steady for three months, which is the Haj season. A few years ago, when Osman Pasha was Governor-General here, he tried to bring spring water through pipes to Jeddah from Waziriah, a place about seven miles from here, and after great trouble he succeeded in doing so. Now the spring does not yield a good supply. His Majesty the Sultan has sent a Pasha to examine and to put the pipes in good order at his Majesty's expense, and by receiving one dollar as fee from each pilgrim. Nobody is allowed to import tobacco or cheroots into this country. Everyone is bound to purchase tobacco from the tobaccoists, who sell the tobacco in packets signed and sealed by the Government. In case a poor pilgrim imports 3lbs. of tobacco for his own use, the preventive officers confiscate the tobacco and fine him heavily. The Custom duty is 8 per cent. on everything imported and exported."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 9.

The Indian Government have yielded to the request of the Bombay Government and have appointed the following commission to investigate the charges preferred against Mr. Crawford:—Mr. Justice Bayley, Bombay High Court; the Hon. J. W. Quinton, member of the Board of Revenue, North-West Provinces; and Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, Judicial Commissioner, Central Provinces. The accused has been most unjustly treated in being deprived of the trial claimed by him in a legally constituted criminal Court. However, the present tribunal appears to be most fairly constituted, and, as a makeshift Court, is unexceptionable.

The Maharajah of Jeypore was recently installed as Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India by Colonel Walter. In the course of his speech the Maharajah, alluding to the recent marriage reforms, said:—

"The marriage law reforms lately inaugurated at the meeting you convened at Ajmere in March last will be related in our annals, and will be an enduring record often quoted as an instance of your kind care for the well-being of the Rajpoots. Each chief, no doubt, had felt for a long time the pernicious consequences of the exorbitant expenses of marriages and funerals, but none had the courage to come forward and remedy the evil, owing to the fear of being made the butt of the obloquies of the Bhats, Charuni, and others, who derived undue advantages from it. All waited to see what the others would do, and so nothing in fact was done till you had recourse to the wise measure of convening a committee of representatives of different States, and showing them the way to effect the necessary reforms. These wise rules will, I have reason to hope, be appreciated and followed by Rajpoots. With care the condition of Rajpootana will be materially improved. It is a great gratification to know that the marriage rules have been highly eulogised in the House of Lords. This fact affords a fresh proof that Her Majesty's Home Government is equally interested in the welfare of Rajpootana, and in spite of distance the hearts of all benevolent persons in both countries beat in unison to remedy human misery."

The Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition at Poona was opened on the 3rd inst. by the Duke of Connaught. The Duchess and Lord and Lady Reay were present. The Duke said this year showed an increase in the number of exhibitors among soldiers and women, but a falling off in children's work, compared with last year. Notwithstanding this drawback the exhibition was satisfactory.

On the 2nd inst. the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition was opened by Sir Charles Elliott in the presence of the Viceroy and Lady Dufferin, whom he congratulated on the success of their daughter in winning a prize.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 9.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the despatch of the Black Mountain Expedition to punish the tribes for the death of Major Battye and Captain Urnston and for the attack on British troops in British territory. The fighting strength will amount to about 8,000 men. The troops will assemble at Oghi and Darband and start early in October.

The force comprises five regiments of British infantry, nine of Native infantry, one of Native cavalry, one company of Sappers, three batteries of artillery, and is constituted as follows:—Staff.—Major-General Commanding, J. W. M'Queen, C.B.; Aide-de-Camp, Lieut. J. S. W. Western, 1st Punjab Cavalry; Orderly Officer, Captain C. R. Burn, 1st Dragoons, aide-de-camp to the Governor-General of India; Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, Colonel Gatacre; Assistant Adjutant-General, Major Egerton; Assistant Quartermaster-General, Major Elles; Field Intelligence Officer, Captain Mason.

First Brigade.—Commanding, Brigadier-General G. N. Channer, V.C.; Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Major O'Gorman; Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Major Money. 1st Column.—Commanding, Colonel Sym, 5th Goorkhas; Brigade-Major, Major Watson; troops—Northumberland Fusiliers, 1st Battalion 5th Goorkhas, 3rd Sikhs, half a company of Bengal Sappers and Miners, No. 3, headquarters. 2nd Column.—Commanding, Colonel R. H. O'Grady Haly, of the Suffolk Regiment; troops—Suffolk Regiment, the 40th Bengal Infantry, a wing of the 34th Pioneers, the 45th Sikhs.

Second Brigade.—Commanding, Brigadier-General Galbraith; Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Major Barlow; Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Captain C. H. H.

Beley; Orderly Officer, Captain Lord Binning, of the Royal Horse Guards; Brigade-Major, Captain Daniel. 3rd Column.—Commanding, Lieut.-Colonel Sunderland, Sussex Regiment; Brigade-Major, Major Irwin; troops—the Sussex Regiment, the 14th Sikhs, the 24th Punjab Infantry, half a company of the Bengal Sappers and Miners, No. 3. 4th Column.—Commanding, Colonel Crookshank; Brigade-Major, Major Cave, Suffolk Regiment; troops—Royal Irish Regiment, 4th Punjab Infantry, 29th Punjab Infantry headquarters' wing, 34th Pioneers, and 241 of the Scottish Division Royal Artillery. Artillery.—Commanding, Lieut.-Colonel Deshon, 2nd South Irish; No. 4, Hazara Mountain, 3rd Scottish. Engineers.—Commanding, Colonel Lovett, C.S.I.; Field Engineers, Captains Grant and Abbott; with the 15th Bengal Cavalry, the Seaforth Highlanders, and the 2nd Sikhs.

Colonel Channer, commanding the First Brigade, is a very distinguished officer, and was the hero of the Malay campaign of 1875, where he won his Victoria Cross by a very brilliant feat of gallantry, which resulted in the practical termination of the campaign.

The large number of troops has caused some surprise and comment, more especially as it is stated that the Government have no intention of annexing the territory, and the punitive operations will be short and decisive. The sole object is to deal out effectual punishment to the Khan Khel Hassanzais and Akazais, and return to British territory. The equipment is very light. Three of the columns take five days' supplies, and the fourth column seven, while thirty days' supplies will be collected at Oghi and Darband respectively. Over 5,000 mules are required.

THE AFGHAN REBELLION.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

SIMLA, SEPT. 12.

The Ameer's troops are attacking Ishak Khan, the rebellious Governor of Afghan Turkestan, from three quarters.

A force under Abdulla Jan, Governor of Badakshan, is advancing against him by way of Khinjan; another body of troops has been sent from Cabul via Kamard, while a third army is operating in Western Turkestan from the direction of Maimana.

Ishak Khan occupies a central position around Tash-Kurgan and Mazar-i-Sharif, the bulk of his force being at Haibak. The Afghan troops from Maimana had a skirmish with his cavalry outposts at Belcherig on Sept. 4, and routed them. It is also reported that several skirmishes have occurred near Kamard and Khinjan respectively, in which Ishak's troops were uniformly repulsed.

It is expected that a decisive battle will be fought shortly near Haibak.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

CAN ENGLAND HOLD HER OWN IN ASIA?

The Pioneer, replying to Mr. Demetrius Boulger's pessimistic article in the Asiatic Quarterly, in which he sounds what he evidently conceives to be a new alarm, and assumes indirectly that the guardians of India are sleeping at their posts, says:—

In India we have long understood the enormous strategic advantages which Russia would gain when her railway communications had been extended from the Caspian to Merv, Chaharjui, Bokhara, and Samarkand. All the world now knows that a good solid railway has been built, and that special provision has been made for military requirements along its whole length. But when Mr. Boulger puts down the strength of the Russian Turkistan garrison, with the military colonies attached to it, at 70,000, and adds, "it is clear that Russia could in a very few weeks despatch a force of 50,000 men to the Oxus or Herat," we think he is a little too hasty in his conclusions. Our own information, based on authority which we are convinced is trustworthy, is that the true military strength of Turkistan is only about 30,000 men; and that of these not more than one-third would be available for operations on the Hari Rud or the Murghab. Russia dare not denude Bokhara and the districts eastwards of many troops, while every man sent from Merv and the Akhal Tekke country would have to be replaced by a soldier from Russia: 40,000 men, therefore, would have to be sent from the Caucasus across the Caspian, and thence railed to Merv or Chaharjui before an advance could be made. Now the despatch of such an army, properly equipped and provided with munitions of war, would occupy a considerable time; and before the first troop train was started there would have to be massed at the front an immense number of transport animals, to say nothing of food supplies, full forage, and reserve ammunition. The country to be operated in is a very poor one and the daily requirements of an army of 50,000 men are not easily satisfied. Months and not weeks would elapse before an army of this strength could commence its campaign. Of course, if all the necessary preparations had been made at the advanced depots, the coup of a sudden invasion might be tried; but we should have due warning of what was impending, for Central Asia is not a sealed book to our Intelligence Department. It would be idle to deny that, in case of war, Russia could effect a diversion in North-Western Afghanistan: that is one of the contingencies which enter into all the calculations of the English military authorities, but it does not inspire any particular alarm, in India at least, where every preparation is being made to meet it. Mr. Boulger may think that such a diversion would paralyse England's military operations in Europe: it would do nothing of the kind, for the war thus begun would really be one for supremacy in Asia, and England would put forth her whole strength in the struggle with Russia. Such minor points as the temporary fall of Herat and Balkh, and the attitude of this or that tribe beyond the Hindu Kush, need scarcely be considered. The war would be of such magnitude that not one but a series of campaigns would probably take place, and the Russian diversion against Afghanistan might end in a counter-stroke from India delivered with such force that the Czar's power in Central Asian khanates might be rudely shaken.

In such an undertaking the fate even of Afghanistan would, for the moment scarcely be more than a minor factor in the question: the war would be fought out with the knowledge that the victors could settle that point at their leisure when the last shot had been fired. It is desirable, of course, that our ally the Amir should be true to his pledges, but his loyalty or treachery would not materially influence the action of England in the long run. An open enemy is less to be feared than a doubtful friend: and if Abdur Rahman were to declare for Russia he might really simplify matters a good deal, though temporarily hampering our offensive movements in Central Asia. In considering such a great question as a war with Russia we must not be led astray by side-issues, such as Mr. Boulger raises. The one point to be kept in view is that whatever side may be taken by the Amir of Afghanistan, the Shah of Persia, or any other Oriental ruler, the final issue must depend upon the two great Powers themselves. It is here that the question of European allies comes in, and this is, indeed, of more concern to us than the attitude of Abdur Rahman or the Shah. We cannot undertake to say how events would develop in Europe if Russia forced a war upon England; but in Asia at least we could more than hold our own. Mr. Boulger scarcely thinks so: but he should not forget that England has enormous offensive as well as defensive power at her disposal, and that some of this can be diverted towards Central Asia if Russia invites attack. In India we are completing our military preparations quietly, but effectively; in England much the same thing is being done, though with some noise and confusion. Yet a little time and our preparations will be complete: but even now we can face Russia confidently enough, for with all her strategic advantages in Central Asia she has many weak points in her armour, and her internal debility is increasing year by year.

A ROUNDABOUT SYSTEM.

(Bombay Gazette.)

A curious example of the way in which the immense and complicated machine of Indian Government is adjusted to the performance of infinitesimal tasks is to be found in the voluminous correspondence which has taken place between the Director of the Indian Marine, Captain Hext, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State, on a question of pension amounting to Rs. 7-8 per mensem. It appears that in February, 1886, a certain driller, Merwan Dada, employed in Her Majesty's Dockyard in the city of Bombay, at a monthly salary of Rs. 27-8, was compulsorily retired on a gratuity of six months' pay on the ground that he was unfit for further service, a Medical board having found that he suffered from debility. He had served Government continuously for twenty-nine years, and only wanted eleven months of the twenty-five years' service which would have qualified him for a pension. During the twenty-nine years he had worked in the dockyard when the expeditions to China, Abyssinia, Malta, and Afghanistan were getting ready night and day, and had never taken sick leave. When suddenly retired without being allowed to complete his time for pension, he got himself examined by Drs. Sydney Smith, W. Gostling, Khory, and Da Cunha, and they testified that he was perfectly fit for his duty as a driller, his physical health and eyesight being sound and good. Armed with these opinions he memorialized the Director to be allowed to reappear before the Medical Committee, but this was refused, the Director having no power to reopen the question. He then petitioned to be allowed to work for the eleven months necessary to qualify for pension, or else to have the short period still standing against him condoned in view of a long service of nearly thirty years. The Director of Marine was asked to forward the petition to the Government of India, but the request was refused, on the ground that there were no circumstances warranting a recommendation to Government for a consideration of the case. The petition was then forwarded to Sir Mackenzie Wallace, requesting him to call the Viceroy's attention to it, and forwarding copies to all the Members of Council. The Government of India were unable to comply with the prayer of the petition, but it was forwarded to the Secretary of State with a recommendation that the pension should be granted. At Simla, 12th August, the Marine Department has notified that the Secretary of State in Council had on the 17th June, written a dispatch, stating that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, Merwan Dada had been granted a pension of Rs. 78 per mensem in lieu of the gratuity of Rs. 162. In due time this order of the Secretary of State was transmitted to the Bombay Dockyard, and a copy sent to Merwan Dada "for information." What a light is shed by the facts of this poor driller's case upon the circumlocution which makes the Secretary of State in Council the sole arbiter as to a stipend of Rs. 78, earned by thirty years' good service under Government! Is it for such work as this that the India Office is kept up at a cost of £250,000 per annum?

COERCING FRONTIER TRIBES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It can no longer be pleaded in extenuation of delay in a decision with regard to the Agror border that the Government are awaiting the report and recommendation of the Punjab Government, for the latter sent in its final opinion on the measures which should be taken on the Agror border to the Government of India. The suggestion, too, that the Punjab Government will reluctantly consent to the use of force is scarcely fair to Sir James Lyall, who has from the first been of opinion that affairs on the border could not otherwise be set straight. Prior to the deaths of Major Battye and Captain Urmston, it was the Government of India who objected to the employment of force; and on whose recommendation it was decided to seek reparation for the outstanding offences of the Hassanzai, Akazai, and Puriari Sayads by the procedure of blockade. The Government of India may have been converted to the view of the Punjab Government by the disaster to which we have referred; but it by no means gives the true state of the case to represent the Punjab Government as having the casting vote. The decision, of course, rests with the Governor-General in Council exclusively; the Punjab Government merely referring such matters for orders to the Government of India. The expression of its views now before the Supreme Government, no doubt, shows clearly enough that Sir James Lyall adheres to his original opinion, and we trust that the dismal logic of recent facts will have brought the Supreme Government to his views.

HINDUISM AND CHRISTIAN MISSIONARIES.

(Hindu.)

The current number of the Nineteenth Century contains a remarkable article on this subject well worthy of careful consideration and reflection from our readers, both Hindu and other. Sir William Hunter is the author. While holding strongly that Christian Missionaries have been the means of raising immediately the educational status of the country, we beg leave strongly to contest Dr. Hunter's assertion that the shaking off of some of our old trammels of superstition is an indication of Missionary influence, properly so called. That is due to the progress of knowledge and correct ideas among the people, not to the influence of Christianity. The great mistake made by Christian Missionaries and advocates is to attribute the progress of civilization and knowledge in Europe and elsewhere to Christianity. On the other hand, it is the progress of civilisation and knowledge that has powerfully contributed to the purification of the Christian religion in Europe. The reformation was one of the direct consequences of the great Renaissance movement. The tendency to enlightenment and progress is also to a large extent independent of religion, though religion is also a great and powerful factor in contributing to the movement of the human mind. The second point on which we are at issue with Dr. Hunter is his opinion as to the effects on Hinduism of the polemical aid which the Christian Missionary has secured in the new study of comparative religion. No doubt the Missionary has had a great advantage in his earlier acquaintance with the study. But the educated Natives of India can have recourse, and have already largely had recourse, to that study in combating the dogmas of Christianity. Great organisations are springing up throughout the country with the object of studying the comparative merits of Hinduism and Christianity by the light of the knowledge of the religious development of mankind afforded by the science of comparative religion. Dr. Hunter says that the supernatural claims of Hinduism have suffered in consequence of the aid which historical criticism has afforded to the Missionary. We know also how absolutely true it is that to many of our educated fellow-countrymen this very influence has been the means of converting them into ardent and enthusiastic upholders of their own national religion. So the gain is not all on one side. The conditions of the country have changed; and conversions from the higher classes promise to be rarer than ever. The supernatural claims of Christianity as well as those of our own religion form subjects of deep and earnest inquiry; and, as a matter of fact, the former have as often suffered in the estimation of the educated Native as the latter. Dr. Hunter characterises our religion as the religion of self-resignation and despair, and Christianity as the religion of effort and hope. This may be effective as an antithesis, but it is far from the truth. Our religion has been, indeed, more efficacious in promoting the passive virtues of human nature than the active. On the other hand, it may be advanced against Christianity that its essentially combative character has been instrumental in promoting the active, at the expense of the passive, virtues. Besides, the mere fact of European conquest and enterprise ought not to make us believe that their religion has been the main cause of spurring them on to adventure. It appears to us due more to racial characteristics, climatic conditions, and social and historical cases, than to the influence of religion. If the Christian religion was indeed the predominating influence in inducing this spirit of aggression, adventure and enterprise, so much the worse for that religion, as, according to Dr. Hunter himself, in the articles now under notice, "during three hundred years the white man had been the despoiler, the enslaver, the exterminator of the simpler races" before he began to think of improving, civilising, and converting them.

THE CIVIL SERVICE LIMIT OF AGE.

(Times of India.)

The statement made by Sir John Gorst in the House of Commons that there is no intention to raise the limit of age for candidates for the Indian Civil Service will create considerable regret, for everyone expected that one definite good which would result from the labours of the Public Service Commission would be the restoration of the old limits of age which were fixed when the Indian Civil Service was first converted into a Competitive Service. The Commission unanimously and strongly recommended that the maximum age limit for Native candidates should be raised to that originally in force, viz., twenty-three years, and that the minimum should be raised to nineteen years. The Sarvanik Sabha, a few years ago, pointed out that "a low limit of age necessitates that Native youths should be sent to a foreign country at a time of life when, under existing circumstances, no Indian parent or guardian will trust them to live alone in the midst of strangers." If it were practicable to send Native lads at an early age to public schools at home, this, of course, would be the best training for them, but if they cannot go at twelve, it is better that they should not go till they reach twenty. At that age they could proceed from an Indian College direct to Oxford or Cambridge, where engagements are made for looking after Indian students. The instructions to the Commission precluded it from making any suggestion regarding English candidates, but it significantly noted that, "in making its previous recommendation, it does not contemplate any differential treatment in this respect of the two classes." The majority of Civilians, who first came out, were men who had taken good degrees at our Universities, and India got the services of men like Peile, Pedder, Richey, West, Aitchison, and Crosthwaite. In 1861 the maximum age of admission was reduced to twenty-one, and University men who had finished their college career were debarred from competing, and the reign of cram began. To check cram Lord Salisbury, contrary to the opinion of the Indian Government, Lord Northbrook, and the Master of Balliol, fixed the minimum of age at seventeen and the maximum at nineteen. The lowering of the age did not check cram, but introduced it about, among young boys to the detriment of their school education. The standard of age was also lowered in order to enable candidates to go forward to the Universities after they had passed the Competitive Examination. To enable them to do this they are allowed a certain sum for maintenance. However, a young man who goes to the University after he has gained a provision for life, gains but little from the intellectual and social benefits of the training. There is no stimulus for him to engage in the University curriculum of studies, and he associates only with a particular set of men. These views we have often expressed during many past years, and we thought the battle was won when they were supported by the unanimous recommendation of the Public Service Commission. But the India Office has chosen to disregard the recommendation of the Commission. It will be interesting to learn what recommendation they have adopted.

CAVALRY IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

It is a very common complaint with the Bengal Cavalry officer nowadays that he and his men are being turned into dragoons, and that cavalry camps and forced marches are fast robbing his service of all its individuality. Perhaps it is only natural that a force, some of whose proudest traditions are associated with its exploits in detached bodies of irregular cavalry, should be disposed to grumble at having its horses hammered to pieces in the rapid movement of cavalry reviews and the brigaded evolutions of modern warfare. When it is considered that Native cavalry are for the most part self-supporting, there is much in all this, or at any rate in the feeling that it indicates, that is not undeserving of sympathy. Nothing, for instance, would be more undesirable than that the various regiments should be deprived of their distinctive characteristics. These we feel sure the authorities will always be anxious to preserve as far as possible, provided efficiency is not interfered with in any way. But while admitting the advantage of retaining, among other things, for example, the differences of colour and peculiarities of costume as they are at present, there can be no question that as regards the all-important matter of equipment, Native cavalry might do well to imitate more closely the simplicity and uniformity of British cavalry. It is of course right and proper, inasmuch as the men of the Native cavalry regiment have to pay for their own equipment, that it should be open to the commanding officer to adopt whatever kind and pattern he may consider the most suitable. But judging from the variety that at present obtains, great difference of opinion must exist as to which really is the best. The subject is one, in short, that seems to have afforded a favourable opening to fads of all kinds, and fads have in consequence had full play. Yet whatever be the respective merits of the different kinds of equipment, of wood and iron saddle arches, of newar and leather girths, and so on, with all the hundred and one details which are at present the subject of controversy, the advantages of uniformity are admitted by all concerned. It is almost unnecessary to point out how the labours of regimental committees would be lightened and simplified, or how it would be possible, in purchasing equipment, to secure both greater cheapness and better quality for the men; with what ease excess stocks might be got rid of, or with what rapidity deficiencies might be rectified, provided interchange between regiments was once for all made feasible. All this and more could soon be brought about were commanding officers content to yield in some degree their private opinions and preferences in favour of a cause which, as they themselves would be quite ready to admit, would certainly result in the improved efficiency of all. The question is for obvious reasons not one in which Government would be disposed to interfere in any way. But if regiments themselves were inclined to take the initiative, a representative committee might easily be got together which surely would be able to fix upon some pattern of equipment acceptable, in all essential respects, at any rate, to everybody. This once done, it is not at all unlikely that Government would find itself in a position to make some concession to the overtaxed sowar which might be counted in addition to the advantages already enumerated.

PRESSURE OF POPULATION IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

War, pestilence, and famine have up till quite recently prevented India from being so much oppressed as it probably would have been otherwise by the too multitudinous swarming of the human family of this planet. In our day, however, India has advanced far, and is still advancing at a rapid rate on the path of modern civilisation. The population is growing with unexampled rapidity, and there is no outlet for the surplus population of this Empire to be compared with the outlet afforded to Europe by America and the Australian colonies. What is going to happen now that the pressure of population is beginning to be felt in India as an altogether new phenomenon—a hitherto unfamiliar problem of Indian administration? If we accept the mere testimony of figures, Oudh and Bengal already exhibit the phenomena of an overcrowded population in as striking a manner as any part of Germany, and in a very much more striking manner than any part of Ireland. But the Natives of India are not so quick to resent crowding as the more ambitious workers of Western States. They live, moreover, upon less—partly because the climate helps them (in spite of characteristics which we do not like), and partly because they are free as a nation from the extravagant vice of the European and American lower classes. But no matter how frugal they are, and how content with being huddled up together, the time is rapidly approaching as material civilisation exerts its inevitable tendency on this country, when the Indian population also will become too crowded, and when some colossal problems of sociology will present themselves to the future Governments of India accordingly. We are not proposing in a half-a-dozen words to prescribe a nostrum that will meet the impending difficulty. But in passing—and chiefly to emphasise the reality of the menace we may be called upon to deal with—it is worth while to note that the mere existence in India of great tracts of country that are sparsely populated, even though the land is good, will not be a complete solution of the difficulty when the older haunts of Indian life become congested beyond all bearing. Yet how are we to get the mass of the Indian population under the influence of considerations such as we have mentioned? Their traditions and customs, their very laws and religion as they have come to be interpreted, are all in the opposite direction. The average Mahomedan or Hindu would seldom dream of delaying the date of his marriage through fear of not having enough to eat for himself and his family, or through a desire to live more comfortably than he has hitherto done. The Native's habits and ways of thinking will require to be revolutionised before considerations of this sort can be expected to modify his conduct. To say this is no doubt to admit that the population problem in India is peculiarly hopeless; but it is not, therefore, useless to discuss it.

REDISTRIBUTION OF INDIAN COMMANDS.

(Pioneer.)

The scheme for the redistribution of military commands in India will, we understand, be definitely put into effect on November 1st. A good deal has had to be done in connection with minor details affecting the Staff, but the main points as regards Bengal is that the changes in Divisions and Brigades can be made with the least disturbance by waiting until the Quetta District falls vacant. Brigadier-General Sir Oriel Tanner will vacate his command there on November 1st, on completion of his five years' term, and with this vacancy to be absorbed no General Officer will be ousted from his appointment. It was originally intended to transfer Major-General MacFarlan and the Sirhind Staff from Umballa to Quetta, as the latter becomes a 1st Class District; but this intention has been somewhat modified. The Sirhind Brigade will still be a very strong one, though shorn of the troops at Jullundur, and two staff officers will still be required at Umballa. These will probably be Colonel T. A. Cooke, at present officiating as Assistant Adjutant-General at Army Head-Quarters, and Captain P. A. Buckland. Captain Sherston, Brigade-Major at Umballa, will be transferred to Rohilkhand. As regards the general officers affected by the changes, we have already stated that Brigadier-General Galbraith, now commanding the Saugor District, will be posted to the Sirhind District. The Quetta and Allahabad Divisions will then have to be filled up. In the ordinary course Major-General MacFarlan would go to Quetta, but as he will have to vacate any command he may be holding on April 1st, owing to promotion to Lieutenant-General, it is likely that as a matter of personal convenience he may be posted to Allahabad. The filling of the Quetta command will then depend upon the duration of General White's stay in Burma. If he remains there during the cold weather Major-General Sir John Hudson will, we believe, take up the officiating command in Biluchistan; whereas, if he returns to India in November, he will be posted direct to Quetta, General Hudson succeeding him at Mandalay.

THE REVOLT IN AFGHANISTAN.

(Times of India.)

If the rumour be true that Ishak Khan, Governor of Afghan Turkestan and cousin of Abdul Rahman, has revolted against the Ameer, the news is gravely serious. It could mean but one thing, namely, that Ishak has thrown himself into the arms of Russia, and is willing to turn his province into a dependency of the Czar. Our readers will be interested in identifying exactly who this powerful Afghan chieftain is. Afzul, Azim, and Shere Ali were three sons of the famous Dost Mahomed. The two former were the offspring of an inferior wife; on Dost Mohamed's death, in 1863, Shere Ali, son of a full wife, in accordance with Afghan custom, assumed the Ameer'ship, not without fighting, however, Afzul, Azim, and another brother, all disputing his accession. The present Ameer, Abdul Rahman, is the son of Afzul; and Ishak Khan, about whom our present disturbing news is, is the son of Azim. Yakoob Khan and Ayub Khan, other cousins, we need hardly mention, are the sons of Shere Ali. When, after various ups and downs, Shere Ali was acknowledged as ruler of Afghanistan, Abdul Rahman, having taken a formal oath of allegiance, was entrusted with the administration of Afghan Turkestan, with his headquarters at Balkh. He, however, soon threw off his fealty, and joined Azim in fighting against Shere Ali. Azim's death in 1863, while fleeing with Abdul Rahman after a severe defeat, drove Abdul Rahman from the country, and made him a twelve years' pensioner of Russia at Bokhara, his exile being shared by Ishak, Azim's son. When Abdul Rahman became Ameer in 1880, Ishak returned with him, and, being appointed Governor of Afghan Turkestan, took up his residence at Balkh, whence he has exercised his powers of satrap ever since. Ishak Khan, during these intervening years, has not been much spoken about. He has been, on the whole, thoroughly loyal to Abdul Rahman, and has up to the present shown decided proclivities against the Russians. When the work of demarcating the Afghan frontier brought our Commissioners into his province, they were received with marked cordiality by the Governor of Afghan Turkestan. There can be no doubt, however, that the relations between Abdul Rahman and Ishak Khan have never been thoroughly cordial or based on mutual confidence. We are undoubtedly on the eve of stirring events. Fighting in Northern Afghanistan would be a serious matter for Abdul Rahman, for the Czar, and for the Government of India.

THE POLICE IN BURMA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It is by no means a satisfactory account which the police authorities of Lower Burma have given of their administration in 1887. There was an increase of nearly six hundred in the strength of the force, bringing it up 9,480, the additions made being almost exclusively in the military police. As to the Indian police it may be stated at once that their conduct was, as a whole, exceedingly good, and that the severe things which Sir Charles Crosthwaite has had to say concerning the force do not apply to them. Considering that they are a foreign force, with many temptations to behave with a high hand, this is creditable and noteworthy. Of the rest of the force, however, the record is distinctly unfavourable. The desertions, it is true, were fewer than in 1886, but there were more resignations, more dismissals for misconduct, and more fines inflicted upon the members of the force. Sir Charles Crosthwaite naturally looks upon the record as most unsatisfactory, and finds in it evidence that the deterioration which has been going on in the force for some years past is not only unchecked, but is becoming more rapid. This is a disquieting account of matters in a province supposed to be settled, and in reading it one at first instinctively questions whether it does not relate to the more recently annexed part of Burma. Of the police of the Thayetmyo district it is reported that, efficient and thoroughly disciplined though they were two or three years ago, they are now disorganised, the well-trained and steady men of former years having left the force, leaving their places to be filled by men of inferior stamp. It remains to be seen whether the application to the Burma police of the Military Police Act, which puts the force under a stricter discipline, and exacts a three years' service, will mend matters. When the peace of the country depends upon the police so largely as it does in Burma, a more abiding tenure must be ensured, for anything more unsatisfactory than the renewal of a quarter of the force in a single year, as was the case in 1887, cannot well be imagined. Sir Charles Crosthwaite addresses the superior police authorities on the condition of the force in terms which might be easily translated into a reminder that only bad workmen complain of their tools. He refuses to admit that you cannot make a good policeman out of the Burman. Evidently you can make a very bad one, so bad, indeed, that it is sometimes difficult to tell where the policeman ends and the dacoit begins. But there are districts in which the Burmese police do face dacoits, and give good accounts of them. Perhaps another state of things would be brought about if the police interchanged districts a little more often than they do, so that there would be less danger of the Sepoy and the dacoit being on speaking terms. Sir Charles Crosthwaite believes that there is nothing in the nature of the Burman which unfits him for police work, and he has asked a committee of experienced officers to report upon the causes of the present unsatisfactory state of things. While the regular police of the province are thus unfavourably reported upon, nothing but good is again told of the Karen levies who, as in former years, have been a terror to evildoers. The Government seem to think that there is no further occasion for their services. They know, but it is not unreasonable to suppose that a leavening of the force at large with these men might be of some service in preventing the deteriorations to which the report bears such disquieting testimony.

BENGAL.

It is stated that the Calcutta Municipal Bill will receive the Viceroy's assent as soon as a short Act is passed to extend or ratify the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Small Causes Court in appeals under the assessment sections of the new Municipal measure.

THE Government of India has definitely refused to make over to the Calcutta Corporation the Howrah Bridge surplus for the construction of the Central Road. The Englishman states that it is a mistake to suppose that the East Indian Railway ever advanced any claim to the money; all it did was to oppose the use of it for the road scheme.

ABOUT a lakh of rupees is wanted for the proposed new Zenana Hospital in Calcutta, under the Countess of Dufferin's Fund, and of this sum Rs. 42,000 has been subscribed by six gentlemen. Lady Dufferin has expressed a wish to lay the foundation-stone of the building when she is in Calcutta in December. There ought to be no difficulty in obtaining the required balance for an object in every way so commendable.

THE Behar Herald hears that Mr. Kirkwood, before leaving Patna, made over a cheque for five hundred rupees to a Native member of the Bar, with the request that it should be invested in the best way possible, and the proceeds thereof utilised for the support of Budhia, the girl whose examination he ordered. Any portion of the sum, Mr. Kirkwood adds, may be used to bring the girl back to her caste, should such a step be deemed feasible.

A FEW days ago, states a Calcutta correspondent, about 2,000 villagers breached a canal in the suburbs, flooding one village, and threatening others with destruction. The report of these proceedings reaching the District Magistrate he deputed a Native Magistrate to visit the scene with a strong police force, armed with muskets, and supplied with ammunition. Seeing matters coming to a crisis the mob retired, and allowed the police to mend the breaches. The next morning a mob of 4,000 persons collected, armed with shovels, pick-axes, and other implements. The police charged them, and the crowd, instead of attacking or dispersing to their homes, surrendered unconditionally. Seven hundred of them have been charged with rioting, and are being sent up in batches for trial. Had the police arrived a couple of hours later there would have been fearful loss of lives and property.

THE negotiations between the Bengal and North-Western Railway Company and the Government of India for the transfer to the latter of the Tirhoot system of State Railways on a working lease, which has been in progress for nearly two years, has fallen through, states a contemporary, for the present at any rate, the Bengal Government, in whose hands the Tirhoot lines are, declining to come to practicable terms. The history of this negotiation furnishes yet another instance of the ineptitude of the method by which the India Office and the Indian Government working on different principles, or perhaps none, and so often pulling in opposite directions, continue to muddle the railway business of the country. In this case the solitary compensation for such an enormous waste of time and labour will go to the Government of Bengal, who appear to have learnt some useful lessons from the management of the private company in the art of working railways economically, which they will probably be more ready to apply than to acknowledge.

MADRAS.

It is understood that the Hon. Mr. P. Hutchins succeeds Sir Charles Aitchison in the Viceroy's Council in October.

THUS both seats in the Madras Council are likely to become vacant shortly.

JUDGMENT was delivered Aug. 24 in the Tellicherry bribery cases. In the first case, Kungin Menon, Sub-Judge, was convicted on all the counts, and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 10,000 fine, in default to nine months' additional imprisonment. The second accused, Kunhi Paki, was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment. In the second case, the Sub-Judge was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 10,000 fine, in default to nine months extra, the second sentence to take effect after the expiration of the first. Sunkanni Nair, the second accused, was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment and Rs. 1,000 fine, in default to six months' further imprisonment. The third accused, Kannan Nair, was acquitted.

A NOTIFICATION in the Gazette of India lays it down that in Burma a licence-holder shall not sell arms and ammunition to any Asiatic without the permission in writing of a district magistrate, and not more than 3lbs. of gunpowder to any person without the same permission. This prohibition does not, of course, apply to respectable Europeans and Eurasians.

THE investiture of his Highness the Maharaja of Travancore with the Star of India has been postponed from November to December. After his installation recently the Cochin Raja, addressing his officials, concluded his remarks as follows:—"I will bring my speech to a close with the words, a little altered to suit the occasion, of the veteran officer, Admiral Nelson, before the memorable Battle of Trafalgar, namely, that the Cochin State expects every one of its officers to do his duty conscientiously and to the best of his abilities, and honestly try to contribute, in return for the good each has received from the late Maharaja, my beloved brother, to the welfare of the State, and thereby gain credit to himself and satisfy the Sovereign he serves." Messrs. Grant, of London, have preferred to the Travancore Government proposals to raise capital to open a railway from Tinnevely to Quilon, provided the latter guarantees interest on the Travancore line for an indefinite period.

A LITTLE disagreement between a Calicut and a Cochin paper about what goes on in the Palace at Trevandrum has just led to this delightful deliverance on the part of one of the disputants:—"As regards the imputation about gin bottles and the 'champion, groggy and breathless on the ropes,' we can quite understand how our contemporary was induced to make those remarks respecting us in his recent issue. It is a popular belief that all newspaper men are given to an undue adoration of Bacchus, and the editor of the Spectator, speaking probably from experience, thinks himself justified in supposing that we too are fond of indulging in alcoholic beverages to excess. But there are exceptions to every rule, and the man who drives the Calicut paper has erred in judging other people by his own standard. We don't generally take a pride in telling the public of our domestic habits, but the circumstances of the present case demand that we should make a statement to the effect that we do not drink, if only for the information of the gentleman who penned the article in the Spectator now under notice."

THE health of the Hon. Mr. Master, Senior Member of Council, Madras, continues to improve. It is expected he will not vacate his seat in the Council until January, when his five years' tenure of office expires.

BOMBAY.

THE Manora breakwater red light has been carried awry, and will be replaced after the monsoon.

SURGEON A. V. ANDERSON, I.M.S., has been allowed leave out of India on private affairs for one year.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL (Brevet-Colonel) SIR ORIEL VIVEASH TANNER, K.C.B., has been entitled to the Colonel's allowance from the 19th August.

THE services of Lieutenant H. D. Merewether, 4th Bombay Infantry, have been placed at the disposal of Government for employment in the Civil Department.

MR. F. B. YATES has been permitted to resign the service of Government, with effect from the date of his giving over charge of the office of District Superintendent of Police, Sholapur.

THE case in which Mr. Ommanney, Inspector-General of Police, summoned Mr. Spiers for using insulting language in connection with the part Mr. Ommanney had taken in the Crawford case, was withdrawn, the defendant having apologised.

THE matter of strengthening the over-worked staff of the Financial Department by the addition of a Deputy Secretary is, a contemporary asserts, practically settled. Mr. J. F. Finlay, now at home, is likely to be the first appointment.

THE REV. A. C. LOCHEE, M.A., Chaplain of Neemuch, has been granted furlough to Europe for thirteen months and five days. The Rev. J. H. Beck, M.A., acts for him. The Rev. C. H. Badham, B.A., is to be Chaplain of Ghorpuri.

CAPTAIN A. WAPSHARE, Staff Corps, has been appointed to be Cantonment Magistrate at Deesa, vice Captain Newnham-Smith.

TELEGRAPHIC intelligence has been received in Bombay of the death of Noor Mahomed Ebram, the senior partner of the firm of Ludha Ebram and Co., of Bombay and Poona, which took place on the 20th August, at Mecca, where he had gone on a pilgrimage. The deceased gentleman was well-known in Bombay, and was much esteemed by all with whom he came in contact.

THE Indian Daily News writes that the Bombay Government does not seem to have been conspicuously successful in arriving at the juste milieu of excise taxation, which represents the maximum of judicious control with the minimum of vexatious oppression. Wherever there is an excise duty levied, attempts will be made by unprincipled people to profit by evading it. But that is not quite the same as driving people wholesale into defiance of the law by making the duty prohibitive.

MR. T. D. MACKENZIE, the Collector of Broach, has been appointed by Government President of the Broach Municipality, in succession to Mr. Wilson. In this district the question of the advisability of having official or non-official presidents of mofussil Municipalities has been fought out with considerable animation, and this appointment is a distinct triumph to those who have advocated the official side of the controversy.

THE appointment of Mr. C. B. Pritchard as Commissioner of Sind in succession to Mr. H. N. B. Erskine is gazetted.

THE following appointments will also have effect from the date of retirement of Mr. H. N. B. Erskine, C.S.I.:—Mr. W.

H. Probert, C.S., to be First Grade Commissioner; Mr. J. G. Moore, C.S., to be Second Grade Commissioner, and Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium, and Abkari, and Reporter-General of External Commerce, continuing to act as Commissioner, C.D., till further orders; Mr. W. A. East, C.S., to be Collector and Magistrate of the district of Poona and District Registrar and Political Agent, Poona; Mr. J. R. Middleton, C.S., to be Collector and Magistrate of the district of Dharwar and District Registrar and Political Agent, Dharwar; Mr. J. McL. Campbell, C.S., to be Senior Collector, Mr. E. J. Ebdon, C.S., to be Junior Collector and Collector and Magistrate of the district of Bijapur, and District Registrar and Political Agent, Bijapur; Mr. H. Woodward, C.S., to be First Assistant Collector, and Mr. E. C. Morrisson, C.S., to be Second Assistant Collector.

THE Governor in Council is pleased to make the following appointments, consequent on the transfer of Colonel W. H. Wilson:—Mr. C. M. McIver to be First Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. R. H. Vincent to be Second Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. C. E. Coles to be Third Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. H. N. Alexander to be Fourth Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. L. H. Spence to be First Grade Assistant Superintendent of Police; and Mr. C. F. G. Lester to be Second Grade Assistant Superintendent of Police; and to make the following appointments, consequent on the resignation of Mr. F. B. Yates:—Mr. M. Kennedy to be Fourth Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. D. Davies to be Fifth Grade District Superintendent of Police; Mr. F. H. Warden to be First Grade Assistant Superintendent of Police; and Mr. E. A. Bulkley to be Second Grade Assistant Superintendent of Police. These appointments and all consequential acting and substantive pro tem. promotions are to have effect from the date of Colonel Wilson's appointment to be Commissioner of Police, Bombay, and Mr. Yates' resignation, respectively.

THE following appointments have also been made:—Mr. H. J. Henderson to be District Superintendent of Police in the Nasik District; Mr. H. M. Gibbs to be District Superintendent of Police in the Surat District; Mr. G. W. Cotgrave to be District Superintendent of Police in the Sholapur District, continuing to do duty as Personal Assistant to the Inspector of Police till the return of Mr. Cox; Mr. J. B. W. Biddle to act as District Superintendent of Police in the Sholapur District till relieved by Mr. Cotgrave; and Mr. D. Davies to be District Superintendent of Police in the Upper Sind Frontier District, continuing to do duty as District Superintendent of Police in the Khandesh District till the return of Captain T. R. M. Macpherson.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB

CHOLERA has appeared at Sealkote and Peshawur. It has apparently been directly imported by those who fled from Murree.

THE outbreak of cholera at Murree and Rawal Pindi, remarks a contemporary, has been freely attributed to the presence of Ayub Khan and his followers in these two stations. Careful inquiry, however, it adds, goes to prove that the Afghan colony had no more to do with the epidemic than any other section of the community. As regards Murree, the track of the disease is identical with that taken by the epidemic of 1879. It appeared first among the Kashmiri coolies, coming in from districts which had been infected for months; then spread to the depôt, and afterwards to the quarter where Ayub and his household chanced to be living. The exaggerated statements about the mortality among the Afghans have already been contradicted; there were a certain number of deaths, it is true, but as the greatest attention had from the first been paid to sanitary matters, the mortality was not unduly great. As to the outbreak in Rawal Pindi itself the Afghans who left Murree cannot be held responsible for it, inasmuch as since their arrival from the hills they have been living in the city, where the disease has not appeared. The in sanitary state of Murree and the want of a good water supply, coupled with the presence of infected Kashmiri coolies, are sufficient to account for the original outbreak; while the absence of all quarantine arrangements, when residents in Murree fled in panic to Rawal Pindi made its reappearance in the latter station a matter of certainty.

WE (Pioneer) noticed some time ago the report of an attack made by certain Afghans near Chaman upon a party of Hazari coolies, engaged on the railway extension over the Khojak. The affair was said to have arisen out of a dispute as to the ownership of sand needed for the railway works; but highway robbery pure and simple was really at the bottom of it all. Some Hazaras who had earned large sums by many months' hard labour on the line started for their homes with their savings about them, and no sooner had they crossed the frontier than they were waylaid and robbed. They naturally made a sturdy resistance, and blood was pretty freely shed. An investigation into the robbery has led to suspicion attaching to men of the Atchakzai tribe located within our own borders, and not to the tribesmen beyond Chaman. It is believed that the robbers were well acquainted with the movements of the Hazaras, and knew also that they were laden with rupees, hence the attack. Hazaras, as a rule, are quite equal to holding their own against Afghans, but in the present instance the little party of coolies were outnumbered, and suffered severely in consequence. In future the labourers who make their "pile" on our frontier railways will probably travel homewards in compact bodies, ready and able to repel any attack which Atchakzais or other tribesmen may make upon them.

If the Government of India would like to retaliate in a way for their discomfiture in connection with the working of Mr. Duff-Bruce's Umballa-Delhi line, they have only, observes the Allahabad paper, to sanction a proposal put forward by the Bombay-Baroda Company for a straight line from Jagadri to Phalera junction. That would tap the downward traffic from a point between Umballa and Saharunpore, and divert it to Bombay instead of Calcutta. But the temptation seems likely to be resisted. By the way, another and almost equally immoral project recently put forward by a great financial house in London, though not by either of the two greatest houses, has been declined. The projectors offered, in consideration of a 2½ per cent. guarantee, to raise a capital of three millions sterling, and construct a railway from Benares to Burrakur. It would probably have paid the promoters very well, whilst playing havoc with the earnings of an important section of the East Indian line.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

TO GIBRALTAR AND BACK IN AN 18-TONNER.*

From a logical point of view nothing can be more idiotic than yachting. This somewhat sweeping assertion may fitly be illustrated by the charming account just published of a journey to Gibraltar and back in an 18-tonner. Let the author speak for himself:—"You can always feed more comfortably when your boat is at anchor than when she is thrashing to windward. In the one case, although the table may be dodging about in a very lively manner, you can generally manage to put away the greater part of the contents of your plate; in the other, at one moment the table may be, and very often is—constantly in our case—above your head, and next moment considerably below your waist. Nearly all your time is spent in trying to prevent the dishes and bottles from being emptied into your lap, and, while thus employed, your plate of food gently glides on to your knees and thence to the floor." But it may, perhaps, be argued this is fine fun; it is tantamount to enjoying the discomforts of a picnic. So be it; but there is "more to follow." "Smack! and some thirty or forty gallons of water were racing aft, pouring down the fore-castle, wetting all the men's bunks, then down the main companion, while the rest disappeared through the scuppers, scarcely free of one wave before another was on top of us. Go forward to shift the sheets, and you got a wave over you which wet you through in spite of oilskins. Hold on to the shrouds and you got a wave which came to your middle, and when you did your kick at the tiller you never knew the moment you would be washed to the other side of the deck, like your deck cushion, which was constantly washed from under you."

These quotations go far to make good the assertion as above, and yet we should be the last to pen a word in discouragement of yachting. And why? Just for the reason that it is a pastime which combines in the highest degree the characteristics of fun and danger, and at the same time tends to develop those qualities of daring and endurance which have raised England to the highest pitch of national greatness. British pleasures are typical of British virtues. When, if ever, tame, quiet, insipid, "safe" games and pursuits take the place of the two grand pastimes, "yachting" and "cricket," then, but not till then, may it be inferred that the Anglo-Saxon race is on the high road to effeminacy and decadence.

Were space sufficient it would be far from difficult to dip at length into the very agreeable account of a very agreeable trip, with all its pleasures and all its dangers, but we refrain. Readers must enjoy the "dainty dish" for themselves. One quotation will form a fitting finis. "A well-built and well-found yacht of from 17 to 20 tons, properly handled and navigated, will go anywhere, and, with the exception of the risk you run of being washed overboard, you are safer on board a little yacht than a big steamer. The danger proper of yachting can be summed up in one word—steamers."

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA.*

"This volume contains the story of the conquest of the several races of India by our countrymen." Such are the words with which Colonel Malleon ushered in the first edition of his most charming and fascinating volume. And what a story it is which he proclaims to the world! History is replete with deeds of daring; not a nation but what can point with the finger of pride to great deeds and doughty actions, but envy is silent in face of the tales of heroism, of courage, and of dash which the history of India has proclaimed to an astonished and well-nigh incredulous world. No peoples in the universe can furnish such a record—a record of successes undreamt of in the wildest flight of imagination; fancy pales in abject despair at the bare idea of a handful of Europeans laying the foundation of an Empire which now possesses more than two hundred millions of souls. How was such a thing achieved? How came it that a few settlers subdued Prince after Prince? How was it that rival European Powers, after shaking the pagoda-tree, were forced to bow the knee of submission to their more fortunate rivals? The answer is told in a few words. The English of the seventeenth and the first two decades of the eighteenth century were possessed of pluck and valour; with them there were no nice scruples as to the "whys" and the "wherefores." They found themselves in the midst of certain circumstances, and were not too careful to inquire as to the ins-and-outs which resulted in these eventualities. There were in those days no negotiations and diplomatic arrangements, no attempts to throw dust in the eyes of others, no absurd questions in the House of Commons, revealing the stupidity and ignorance of the inquirers, and the hopeless imbecility of a people which in these latter days thinks to govern Asiatics on Western principles. Then nations fought, now they wrangle; then Empire was extended, now infatuated "doctrinaires" proclaim that it is too big, and is cumbersome; and so it was that a couple of centuries built up an edifice of monarchy which the succeeding age seems destined to demolish and lay in dust. What our ancestors did that we are trying might and main to undo.

This is the tale which Colonel Malleon proclaims in so far as concerns the winning of the prize. He has said his say in his usual masterly manner; his style is vigorous, his narrative clear, and interest never flags. The book may be read and re-read with advantage and profit; it is a glorious record gloriously recorded. No wonder that the work has passed through two editions, and has now reached its third revision. So long as England loves pluck and scorns cowardice, so long as national greatness commands national enthusiasm, so long will the record of India's battles find a place in the home of every true son of Albion.

The Century Magazine for September, which was accidentally overlooked at the time of its receipt, contains a highly appreciative article on "Uppingham School," which will well repay perusal, and a further instalment of Mr. G. Kennan's most able and interesting articles on "Russian Tyranny in Siberia." All who desire to learn what the Colossus of the North is when the veil of hypocrisy is torn aside, and she stands revealed in all her ghastly cruelty and sickening inhumanity, would do well to read this stirring article. Amongst the illustrations may be mentioned with approval the series of "Doves," which are graphic and picturesque.

A TALE OF THE SEA.—A Calcutta paper, in the course of an account of the survey operations of the Investigator, gives a tale of the sea that might supply a chapter in a nautical novel:—"Three years ago a barque, with sixty men on board, was wrecked at the mouth of the Gulf of Cutch, and seven of the crew scrambled into a wooden water-tank, in which they tossed about for ten days, with neither food nor drink. Their sufferings must have been frightful, and the marvel is that ten days passed before the first death occurred. On each successive day one of the crew died, until on the evening of the sixteenth day only one survivor was left—a lonely, famished mortal, left to pass the night in this floating coffin, with a dead shipmate for company. Every day previously the dead had been put over the side, but there is reason to believe that the sixth dead man was allowed to lie where he died. Next day the tank was cast up on the Cutch coast, and the survivor managed to crawl ashore, and eventually found his way to Jakao. The Investigator, while surveying off the Laccadives in the present season, discovered what Commander Carpenter believes to be the identical wooden tank, and in the bottom of it was a man's skull. The tank had drifted away south, almost the entire length of India, urged along by the southerly current that relieves the pressure of the sea on the Sind coast during the south-west monsoon."

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1888.

THE CLEANSING OF INDIA—III.

If good intentions could ensure success the Resolution of the Government of India on which we have been commenting would be a perfect practical sanitary measure. It certainly means well, and all the platitudes in it—and they are many—are penned with the praiseworthy object of cleansing every town and village in India. If verbiage and foolscap could do this, no more sweeping (to use that word in its housemaid sense) measure could have been introduced into the country. No one can call into question the excellence of the hints and the recommendations contained in the following paragraphs:—

In orders issued by the Home Department on Municipal and Local Board reports for 1885-86, cited in the preamble to this Resolution, the Governor-General in Council took the opportunity of laying down the general lines on which, in his opinion, future action of local bodies should be directed in promoting sanitary reform. The principle which he had in view was, that action should be preceded by an accurate ascertainment of the requirements of each locality. Accordingly, it was suggested to various Local Governments that a sanitary survey of each municipality and rural area should be undertaken with as little delay as possible, and that plans and estimates should be prepared of all the improvements necessary to provide each town or village with an efficient system of water supply, drainage, and conservancy. The most important of these requirements, and that which, in the opinion of the Government of India, may at first be dealt with most effectively, and with the greatest chance of the active assistance and sympathy of the people, is the provision of pure water. Drainage—especially in those localities in which the construction of public works, such as railways and canal embankments, have interfered with the natural flow of water, and may have injuriously affected the people's health—is also a matter calling for early attention. But, while thus indicating the directions in which sanitation can be best promoted, there is on the part of the Governor-General in Council no desire to limit the discretion of local and provincial authorities as to their choice of action. That can best be determined by a knowledge of local requirements. In the orders in question it was added that plans, when once fixed, should be executed from year to year as funds became available, the object aimed at being persistently kept in view until it was completed.

What a delightful vista of sanitation the above discloses! Every town and village in India provided with "an efficient system of water supply, drainage and conservancy!" If the writer of the Resolution be in earnest, and the document can hardly be considered as "jokative," notwithstanding the great unconscious humour it contains, the prospect of such a change in the condition of India is enough to paralyse the members of the Council of India in London and render them utterly unfitted to advise or instruct the Secretary of State for that country. The India of the Resolution will not be the India that they have any recollection or experience of. India thus suddenly "spinning down the ringing grooves of change," will be to them a new world altogether, and they will have to echo the confession in the Tennysonian day-dream:—

"We are the ancients of the earth,
And in the morning of the times."

But perhaps the cleansing change will not come so soon—over India's present waking reality of dirt as the day-dream of the Resolution fancies it will. There are a few difficulties in the way of arriving at the perfection aspired to. There will be found, we fear, a want of the proper men to carry out the work, and, worse still, a want of funds to do it with. What is everybody's business, the proverb has truly said, is nobody's business; and with so many persons expected to take the brooms in hand, and no particular person to be responsible for the sweeping, the cleansing of India may get no further than the recommendations of the Resolution. But more serious even than this reflection is the sorry thought that there is no money to work the cleansing spell with. The experiment of giving to India local municipalities on the elective system has resulted in those institutions representing only debt and inefficiency, in addition to Native ignorance and obstinacy. The advice tendered of old, "Physician, heal thyself," was an excellent one, but although it came from the East, it has unfortunately no chance yet of being acted upon in India. "Baboo, be clean," says the Government of India, but Baboo prefers to go in the way of his forefathers, and cherish dirt in all his surroundings as they did. What, then, is the course which the Paramount Power rightly insisting upon cleanliness should adopt? Surely not to leave the Natives to make their own sanitary arrangements, and, taking away all real power from district English officers, yet hold the latter responsible for all shortcomings. Yet this is what the Resolution tends to do. The multiplying of Boards will only end in vanity and vexation of spirit. A Resolution which encouraging decentralisation in one paragraph insists upon centralisation in another is only likely to make confusion worse confounded. Local sanitation in India will not be carried out quickly or effectively unless the hands of the European District Officers be strengthened by the Government, and not weakened in deference to the sentimental clamour for "Native representation." Where talk only is required let the Native element be represented to the fullest extent; but where practical work, such as sanitation, is wanted, let it be carried out by the autocratic authority—discreet, but firm—of the Englishmen who are responsible for the spread and maintenance of English influence in India.

THE following story is going the rounds of the Indian press:—At an up-country station in Madras, in the absence of the major commanding a battery, a parcel of new swords for the men arrives. The captain in charge tests them, and returns about seventy as defective. Promptly the department assents to the verdict, but proffers a bill for £30. The swords had already passed all the prescribed tests, and the officer had no right to test them on his own account. It is said that the money was paid.

THE MORTALITY OF MANDALAY.—According to the Mandalay correspondent of the Rangoon Times, the death-rate of Mandalay, assuming the daily death-rate to be as stated, must prove it about the unhealthiest town in the Empire, the rate being about 98 per mille. The paper says:—Could the Municipality count up the funerals for a stated short period—this could be done through the cemetery durwans, &c.—and publish some reliable figures, as the subject is of importance to those with friends either in or about to proceed to Mandalay.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

In a General Order just issued, the Commander-in-Chief says:—"Two fatal accidents have occurred in battalions of British infantry within a short period, in both of which investigation has shown that the Regulations were in a greater or less degree disregarded. On the 14th July last, the Commander-in-Chief drew attention to the disregard of Regulations for the conduct of target practice. His Excellency finds it necessary to reiterate this order, and to notify that he will hold commanding officers personally responsible that no departure from the Regulations is made with their sanction, and that if a departure from the Regulations not sanctioned by them occurs, the officer or soldier who is responsible for the act or neglect is dealt with adequately according to the degree of his offence."

The Civil and Military Gazette writes:—"The rearming of the Goorkhas with the Martini-Henry is a great step in the right direction, but it would be a distinct additional advantage if they could all be armed with a rifle of the size and weight of the present Martini-Henry carbine, but taking the ordinary Martini-Henry cartridge. The great aim of our military authorities should be to have only one kind of small arm ammunition on service; and there is no reason why a special rifle should not be made for the use of Artillery, Cavalry, Engineers, Sappers, and Goorkhas—carrying the one ammunition—just in the same way as we had the 5-grooved Native rifle, the short rifle for sergeants, and the long rifle for infantry; all carrying the same Snider cartridge."

The Pioneer contains the following:—"In military circles at home it was rumoured some time ago that the Duke of Connaught might leave Bombay before his full term of office had expired and take up a command in England. The Aldershot Division was even mentioned as that which would fall to his Royal Highness, but the objection was that it was already occupied by Sir Archibald Alison. Now that General Alison has been appointed to the India Council, and Aldershot is vacant, the rumour is likely to be revived in full strength. If it should prove well founded the War Office, in choosing a successor to his Royal Highness, will probably hesitate between General Hume and General Dillon. The former is a soldier of marked ability, and socially everything that could be desired as a Commander-in-Chief; while General Dillon, it is well known, has that interest which will force his claims well to the front."

MACHINE guns are shortly to be provided for the coast defences. The Government of India has sanctioned twelve for Bombay, seven for the Hughli, eight each for Karachi and Rangoon, and nine for Madras, or forty-four in all. The three Presidencies, together with Quetta, are to have eighty-five machine guns for the land defences. Bengal is to have fifty-six, Quetta five, Bombay and Burma twenty-four, and Madras three. In the Bengal Presidency, Agra, Allahabad, and Benares, will each have four guns, Ferozepur sixteen, Fort William six, Lahore two, Peshawar six, Rawal Pindi ten, with two for reserve. The further distribution is as follows:—Quetta five, Bombay and Burma, Asirghar and Neemuch, each two guns; Belgaum and Mandalay each four guns; and Mhow ten; while three will be assigned to Agram in Madras. Additional guns for the coast defences have been sanctioned.

MILITARY officers when sick in hospital have hitherto been subjected to a stoppage of Rs. 1-4 per day. The rate of hospital stoppage payable in future will be Rs. 2 per day.

THE Government of India have accorded sanction to the issue of return in lieu of single tickets to officers entitled to passages to the Colonies and back at the public expense, as a considerable saving will accrue to the State thereby.

It has been decided to continue to Native troops and followers serving at Quetta and in Biluchistan the family pension privileges laid down by regulation for troops and followers on foreign service. This allows the continuance of pensions to heirs of Native soldiers and followers dying whilst on service in those parts.

THE officers told off for Mr. Udny's escort on the Turi Commission are Captain A. C. Bunny, of the 1st Sikh Infantry; Lieutenant Kennion, of the 4th P.I.; Lieutenant Cookson, R.A.; and Lieutenant Dick, 2nd P.C. and Intelligence Department; also probably a medical officer, who has not yet been chosen.

ALL authorised followers, regimental or departmental, who are paid by the State, and syces and grass-cutters of Native cavalry regiments have been made eligible for the bronze medal which was granted last year to the followers of the Native army.

THE STORM AT CALCUTTA, AUGUST 24TH.

Advancing very gradually up the Hooghly, a storm, which for several days past has been experienced in the neighbourhood of Saugor, reached Calcutta early this morning, and burst upon the city with very considerable force, accompanied by heavy rain. The downpour was unceasing, and in the twenty-four hours ending at eight o'clock 5'01 inches of rain had fallen, while from Chittagong 6'75 inches are reported. From Saugor Island no less than 14'28 inches were registered. The wind at Saugor yesterday morning attained the excessive average velocity of seventy-two miles an hour. Stormy weather prevails in the north of the Bay, and the shipping have been warned of the threatening state of the weather. There has been a temporary stoppage of outward traffic. No shipping casualties are reported in Calcutta. About midnight there came a lull, and it was not till about 4 P.M. that a storm rose, the violence of the wind culminating about two hours later. Captain Petley, Port Officer, has engaged the Retriever to be in readiness to proceed to sea to render any assistance to the lightships or vessels in distress. The ship Champion, in tow of the Clive, proceeded to sea yesterday, and as the tug has not returned to Saugor some uneasiness is felt on that account. The Research is provisioned under orders at Diamond Harbour to be ready to proceed to visit the houses of refuge. As dawn crept over the city the outlook was dismal; the morating storm assumed a distinctly cyclonic character, gusts of winds dashing with great violence upon houses, trees, and shipping. A good deal of damage has been done, chiefly in the Native parts of the town, where the rain and wind have played havoc with the huts and shanties. In Dalhousie-square the telegraph poles have been upset, and trees have been blown down. The maidan has in many parts been converted into vast lakes and swamps. It is flooded in some places waist-deep. The Red-road has a curious appearance, looking like an immense bridge spanning an inland sea, stretching away on one side to the river bank, and on the other covering the whole area from the monument down to the Golf Club. The Dhurumtola and other tanks are filled almost to the point of overflowing. Most of the streets of the town have been inundated; and business people have been seriously inconvenienced. In Old Court House-street, the Esplanade, Dhurumtola, and Dalhousie-square, the water was in many places ankle-deep. The courts, which are generally crowded, were almost deserted. In old Court House-street four trees were destroyed; in Dhurumtola and in the Esplanade half-a-dozen were blown down; and in Lower Circular-road a like number. Nearly all the shops in Chandney Choke, Bow Bazaar-street, Chitpur-road, and Cornwallis-street were closed, and those on a level with the road were inundated. The Chitpur-road, in fact from Lal bazaar to Baug Bazaar, was from two to three feet under water. As for the bye-lanes and gullies they were mere canals of muddy liquid. Many of the cork trees in Cornwallis-street were blown down. One tiled hut collapsed at midday. A tank lying to the south of St. Paul's Cathedral overflowed, and a large quantity of fine fish were seen above shallow waters on the maidan. Crowds of Natives with bamboos, sticks, and nets were to be seen rushing about chasing the fish, of which they secured considerable hauls.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE AGITATION.

An influential meeting of twenty-eight of the leading members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service was held on the 5th August at Kurrachee, when the following resolutions (with reference to para. 7 of the statement drawn up by the association in London on the result of Mr. King's motion in the House of Commons on the 8th June last) were passed. The general feeling of the meeting is:—

- I. That we should continue to agitate and press for a committee of inquiry.
- II. That the members of this meeting bind themselves to subscribe towards the necessary funds, and that the subscriptions when collected be forwarded to the honorary secretary, London Association, through Messrs. King, King and Co., London.
- III. So far as the members present are concerned, as well as those in Sind who are represented by proxy, all are willing to sign a fresh petition to Parliament on the basis of the old petition.
- IV. That the result of the meeting be communicated to the other associations in India.
- V. And that it be also sent to all the leading English papers in India.

UPPER BURMA AND THE INDIA-RUBBER TRADE.

Mr. Warry, of the British Consular Service in China, at present stationed as political officer at Bhamo, has made a report to the Chief Commissioner on the india rubber trade of the Mogoung district.

Rubber was first exported from Upper Burma in 1870, and until 1873 the trade was free to all. Since the latter year, however, the forests have been worked under the monopoly system, five Chinese firms being the joint concessionaires, two supplying the money, and three superintending the work. The price ranged from Rs. 60,000 to Rs. 90,000 per annum, but in the present year the sale of the right produced a lakh of rupees. The forests occupy an extensive Kachin district north of Mogoung and stretching east across the Chinese border. The Kachins are exceedingly jealous of interference with their trees, and although at first they made the mistake of over-bleeding them, they are more careful now, and though the trees seen by Mr. Warry were covered with innumerable small incisions, even up to the tiny topmost branches, they were obviously not drained to the extent of half their power. Mogoung is the headquarters of the trade; four-fifths of the yearly supply is brought in there by Kachins in the employ of Chinese, the remaining fifth is purchased in the district by Chinese agents of the lessees. The practice is for the Chinese manager in Mogoung to make liberal advances to the Kachins to defray expenses during the collecting season; when the rubber is brought in the refund is made by selling the rubber to the manager at half the market price. The travelling Chinese agents who also collect rubber merely travel from place to place, buying such quantities as the Kachins offer, but as the latter have no standard weights they are usually cheated to the extent of about 70 per cent. The profit on this difference of weight more than pays the expenses of the agents. In most cases rubber is the subject of certain transit charges through the Kachin districts, tsawhs, or local chieftains, levying a certain toll—perhaps two or three balls out of a hundred. So long as these charges do not amount to 10 per cent. there is no complaint. Whatever the toll, the Chinese manager and Kachin owner bear the loss in equal shares; but the latter is amply compensated by being housed and fed at the expense of the Chinese during his stay in Mogoung. Last year a new district was opened, and a Chinese capitalist employed 400 Chinese and Shan labourers to work the forests in the neighbourhood of the amber mines. The local Kachins objected to the inroad and insisted on their right to the forests. A compromise was reached, 200 of the labourers being sent back at once, the remainder collecting rubber under Kachin supervision, to whom 10 per cent. was to be paid, and 200 Kachins, paid at the current rate, took the places of the 200 dismissed coolies.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—Accounts from the indigo districts in Behar are now more favourable, the weather having improved. Some factories in Tirhut and Chumpanan will soon close their first manufacture, and the estimated outturn is about 50,000 maunds, which is less than that of last season. The Khoonties, however, promise well, and may make up any deficiency in the total outturn. In most parts of Bengal there has been but little improvement in the produce, which is very poor. But in Purneah the outturn is expected to be about double that of last year, while Bhagulpur will give about the same return. The total produce for Bengal is not expected to exceed 20,000 maunds.

SUICIDE OF A CHILD WIFE.—Tae, a Hindoo girl, aged ten years, committed suicide by throwing herself into a pond at the back of a house in DeLisle-road, Byculla. About three years ago Tae was married to one Raghoo, a mill hand. Recently a woman in the keeping of Raghoo had a quarrel with the girl about some household affairs, and when Raghoo returned home from work he struck Tae, who afterwards went to her parents' house for protection. Raghoo went to his mother-in-law's to fetch his wife home, but the girl, through fear, refused at first to go with him. After some persuasion, however, Tae volunteered to return, and on reaching her husband's house took her meals and afterwards went out, saying she was going to the pond at the back of the house, and would be back in a few minutes. As she did not return a search was made, and a copper pot belonging to her was found at the side of the pond. Information was given to the police, who had the pond dragged, and the body of the unfortunate girl was recovered. At an inquest held by the coroner, the jury returned a verdict that deceased committed suicide.

NATIVE JOURNALISM IN BENGAL.—The Deccan Standard writes:—"The Government of India is indeed long-suffering and slow to anger. When Lord Lytton provided a gag for the Native Press, long and loud was the outcry. But now one is almost tempted to ask whether the measure was not a wise one, and what other less drastic procedure can effectually suppress the sedition, the abuse, and the scurrility of a certain section of the Native Press. We need hardly say that Bengal has achieved an unenviable notoriety in this respect. Every conceivable opportunity is seized upon to misrepresent the actions and the motives of the Queen-Empress's representative in this country, and aspersions of the most damaging character are indulged in with the utmost freedom against the highest officials in the land. It is generally conceded that most Native journals in Bengal, in spite of their tall talk and cant, have no idea whatever of what they call 'the liberty of the Press.' Liberty with them means licence of the most reprehensible nature, and rank has become the growth of Bengal journalism that the position of many a tried and trusted servant of Government has become well-nigh intolerable."

A SIMLA correspondent states that the Government of India has approved of the formation of a Railway Service Corps, which will combine the advantages of volunteer military service with the peculiar requirements of a railway in time of war. The idea owes its inception to Colonel Conway-Gordon, R.E., the present Director-General of Railways, who has steadily shielded his bantling from the rough touch of its opponents during the past five years, and now that it has found favour in the eyes of the powers that be, it has been suggested that he should be placed in command of the corps.

SIR GANPAT RAO, the President of the Gwalior Council, died at Gwalior on Aug. 24th. He had been ailing, it appears, with fever for some little time, and had only recently asked Mr. Henvey, the Governor-General's Agent, to postpone his contemplated visit, the main object of which was to report on the progress being made by the youthful Maharaja. A Native of the Deccan, Sir Ganpat Rao's connection with Gwalior dates from 1851, in which year he entered the army of the late Maharaja. The Mutiny of 1857 gave him an opportunity of doing good service, and he received the thanks of Sir R. Meade, the then Political Officer, for what he had done towards restraining the Durbar troops. A few years after, his detection of a great and daring dacoity on the Agra-Bombay road, in which several notable men of the State were mixed up, gave convincing proof of his ability and integrity, and he was soon afterwards made Naib Dewan, and eventually Dewan. In this position he had a principal hand in several important reforms, judicial and executive, especially in improving the process of revenue collection, in recognition of which Sir Henry Daly, who appreciated him as much as Sir Lepel Griffin later on, recommended him to the Knighthood of the Star of India. On the decease of the late Maharaja he became President of the Council of Regency. His death is equally a loss to Gwalior and an embarrassment to the Government of India. He was a man of sterling quality, wholly devoted to the interests of the State he had so long served, which probably contains not one man really fitted to replace him.

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I.,
PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. 8vo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY, 1857-8, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleon's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA, from 1746 to 1849 Inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are not giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. 20s. Cloth. With a Portrait and 4 Plans.

FOUNDERS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE: CLIVE, WARREN, HASTINGS, and WELLESLEY Vol. I.—LORD CLIVE.

"Unquestionably the best life of Clive that has appeared."—VANITY FAIR.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kosseir to Cairo in 1801.

"Colonel Malleon is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. With Map. 18s.

A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1878.

"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleon's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

8vo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY. From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleon's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

8vo. With Portrait of General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B. 18s.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a Description of some of the most Famous Instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleon has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skilful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

8vo. Price 8s.

HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleon is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his itinerary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

THE Tropical Agriculturist:

A MONTHLY RECORD OF INFORMATION FOR PLANTERS OF

Tea, Cocoa, Cinchona, Coffee, Indianrubber, Sugar, Palms, Cotton, Cardamoms, Kola, Coca, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Fibrous plants, and other Products suited for Cultivation in the Tropics.

[Published at Observer Office, Colombo, Ceylon,
on or about the 1st of each month.
Commenced in June, 1881.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English, Indian, and Colonial Press have spoken in commendatory terms of the T. A., as also Directors of Public Gardens, from Sir Joseph Hooker, F.R.S., downwards, and so have all planters.

*. No planter should be without it

Rates of Subscription, including postage, in advance:

£1 Sterling.—Rupees 12;—Dollars 5.

Any one of the Four Volumes completed (1881-2, 1882-3, 1883-4, 1884-5), bound in cloth, lettered, with Comprehensive Index, for £1 10s. (or Rs. 18), carriage prepaid.

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repository of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

*. For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is especially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 4th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 2nd September; and from Calcutta to the 1st September.

THE Viceroy will accompany Lady Dufferin to Lahore on the occasion of the opening of the Lady Aitchison Hospital on November 15th, and it is probable that his Excellency will then meet such of the Punjab chiefs as may take the opportunity of his visit to the capital of the province to bid him farewell.

THE Fine Arts Exhibition at Simla was opened on September 1st by Sir Charles Elliott, the Public Works Member of Council.

THERE are to be great festivities at Patiala on the occasion of the Maharaja's wedding, and the Viceroy and Lady Dufferin will very likely halt to share these on the way down from Lahore. From Patiala to Calcutta the details of the Viceroy's short tour are not settled, but probably their Excellencies will seize the last chance of seeing something of river life on the Ganges by dropping down stream from Rajmehal to Goalundo. The Viceroy is due in Calcutta on Saturday afternoon, December 1st, and will leave India by the mail steamer for Brindisi, which starts from Bombay on December 14th.

SIR CHARLES DILKE will accompany Sir Frederick Roberts on his tour over the North-West and Biluchistan frontiers during the coming cold weather.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab will make no tour this year between Simla and Lahore, but will travel direct to the latter place, arriving on October 14 or 15.

MR. HENVEY, Governor-General's Agent in Central India, has during the past week been at Gwalior, where he had many interviews with the members of the State Council regarding the appointment of a successor to the late Sir Ganpat Rao. But no one as yet knows how the matter will be settled.

SIR GEORGE WHITE remains in Burma till April 1, while General MacFarlan goes to Allahabad, when Umballa becomes a brigade command about November 1. Sir John Hudson will take up the Quetta command until relieved by General White.

THE Inspector-General of Ordnance, Bengal Circle, will leave Calcutta on tour of inspection on November 18th next, and will visit the arsenals at Rawal Pindi, Dera Ismail Khan, Quetta, Ferozepore, Agra, Fatehgarh, Cawnpore, and Allahabad, returning to Calcutta on the 15th of February.

MAJOR R. A. SARGEANT, R.E., will in all probability be the manager of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway when it is taken over by Government as a State line.

MAJOR MELLISS, after discussing matters with the Maharaja concerning the reorganisation of the Kashmir forces, has left Jammu for Srinagar.

MR. MERK, Deputy Commissioner of Peshawur, accompanies the Kabul Mission; as also Ressaldar-Major Bahu-uddin Khan, of the Central India Horse, Ibrahim Khan, late of the Punjab Police, and Mahomed Aslam Khan, C.M.G., the Kazi in the Foreign Office. Mr. Merk did excellent service as a political officer in the Afghan War, and more recently as assistant to Sir West Ridgeway on the Boundary Commission. Ibrahim Khan was with Sir Lepel Griffin in Kabul, and was sent across the Hindu Kush to open communication with Abdur Rahman in 1880.

KABUL news, dated the 19th August, states that the Amir's troops sent from Shirpur have reached Bamian on the road to Afghan-Turkistan. They confirm the news that the Balk people and the troops garrisoned there decline to be misled by Ishak, even though he declared himself Amir.

CAPTAIN DURAND AND DR. ROBERTSON have gone on from Gilgit to Chitral on the invitation of Afzal-ul-Mulk, son of the Chief who gave General Lockhart such valuable assistance when he visited those regions.

It is stated that the question of the transfer of Sind to the Punjab is likely to be left for Lord Lansdowne to dispose of finally. The views of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces on the compensation side of the question will be forwarded to the Bombay Government for their reply, and then the whole matter will be decided on its merits.

THE Nizam has purchased considerable landed property at Simla, known as Summer Hill. It is presumed that his Highness intends to build a residence on it.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will shortly appoint a Committee of officers to consider the question of the office establishments and allowances of Divisional and District Commands.

It has been resolved to hold an annual Staff College dinner at Simla. The first takes place on the 27th inst., Sir Frederick Roberts presiding.

THE Nizam has asked the Viceroy to be permitted to depute Colonel Nevill, of the Hyderabad Service, and also a nobleman of the State, to accompany the Mission to Cabul, in addition to Major Afsur Jung.

THE opinion prevails at Hyderabad that Colonel Marshall will not again take up his appointment of adviser and private secretary to H.H. the Nizam.

OWING to the contents of a confidential police circular having been communicated to the press a special department has been created in the office of the Inspector-General of Police, consisting of a superintendent and a few European assistants. The post of personal assistant to the Inspector-General of Police will merge in that of the new superintendentship. Mr. Tucker, Assistant District Superintendent of Bengal Police, will probably be the first incumbent of the post.

THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT distributed the prizes on August 30 to the pupils of the Female Training College at Poona, and the Governor afterwards made a speech warmly eulogising the work that the institution had done in aid of female education.

A MAN, named Bapu Narayan, who is in custody on a charge of murdering an old man, has made a confession implicating himself and four other men in an attempt that was made six weeks ago to wreck the Jubbulpore mail train by removing a rail on the Nassick Bridge. Their idea was that the train, on being derailed, would be precipitated into the river, and that they might then plunder the passengers—living, maimed, and dead.

INFORMATION reaches the Civil and Military Gazette from Afghanistan that Ishak Khan, the rebellious Governor of Afghan-Turkestan, has prepared for defeat, and has purchased land at Karkacha in Bokhara, on the bank of the Oxus, from one Churai Tukhsawa—Rais of that place—the Shah of Bokhara, with the concurrence of the Russians, permitting its purchase. Ishak Khan sent agents to build a palace there for him, and the work has made some progress. Whatever, therefore, the result of Ishak Khan's venture may be, provided that he escapes with his life, Russia will always have in Bokhara a ready instrument to her hand for creating disorder in Afghanistan.

A SIMLA correspondent writes that Ishak Khan's revolt in Turkestan is not likely to give the Ameer much trouble or to disturb Afghanistan proper. It seems to have been a coup manqué, and even Ishak's boldness in proclaiming himself Ameer cannot possibly do any serious damage. Afghan-Turkestan is away beyond the Hindu Kush, a detached province having no direct influence upon Cabul itself, and the new Pretender cannot make much headway against the central authority, even if he holds two or three towns for a time. The Ameer has never put much trust in his cousin, and he may feel a grim pleasure in driving him beyond the Oxus now that the opportunity offers for such a course of action.

MR. HUGHES, whose services as a geologist were lent to the Deccan (Hyderabad) Mining Company by the Government of India to explore and report on the mineral resources of his Highness's territories assigned to the Company by the concessionaires, has now terminated his connection with the Company. By order of the Government of India, he will proceed forthwith from Bombay, where he has just arrived, from the Deccan, to Batavia, to inspect and report upon the successful methods by which engineers from the Netherlands work the tin mines of that productive region. The ultimate object in view is to utilise in Tennasserim the experience acquired in the Dutch Indies.

THE proposed scheme for the reduction of the establishment of the Public Works Department has yet to go before the Secretary of State. Some little time is, therefore, likely to elapse before the officers affected by it can be communicated with. The reductions proposed are to be compulsory, and will not take the form of inducement to retire in the shape of specially favourable terms which those affected may reject or accept.

ONE of the chief questions which come before the Railway Conference at Simla is with regard to the use of breaks on Indian railways. At present railways in that country are not provided with any special system of breaks such as are used on almost all European lines, depending only on hand-power breaks applied on the engine and break-van. By way of practical experiment three systems of more efficient break power are shortly to be tried at Umballa.

ACCORDING to the latest accounts by mail the troops in camp at Rawul Pindi are now quite free from cholera, and there is a clean bill of health from the cantonments also.

INFLUENTIAL persons in Madras are seriously discussing the project of constructing a railway which will put that city in direct communication with Calcutta. At a recent large meeting held in Madras Mr. Turner, the Collector of Bimlipatam, urged the expediency of securing the co-operation of the Calcutta public in support of the proposal to connect the projected east coast railway with Calcutta by a line from Cuttack. The whole length of this connecting link would be only 260 miles through a country stated to be favourable for the purpose. It is said that the enormous number of pilgrims who would use the line would give to the third-class traffic an impetus altogether exceptional. The officiating Collector of Puri reported at the meeting that the average number of pilgrims visiting that shrine annually is over 200,000, and there is a vast number of shrines on the eastern coast which are constantly in the thoughts of all Hindus.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares yesterday were quiet. Mysore improved 1-16, while Ooregum were a little more offered. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3 1-16 to 3 3-16, Nundydroog 34s. to 35s., Indian Consolidated 7s. 6d. to 8s., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 12s. to 13s., ditto fully paid (£1) 16s. 6d. to 17s. 6d., Ooregum 28s. to 29s., ditto Preference 28s. to 29s., Devala-Moyar 5s. to 6s., Nine Reefs 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 8s. to 9s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 3s. 9d. to 4s. 3d., Indian Glenrock 5s. to 5s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 3-16 to 1 5-16, New South-East Wynaad 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 3s. to 3s. 6d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.

NOTES.

THE most eventful news received from India during the week will be found in the telegrams rather than in the papers which have come by Overland Mail. The rumour wired by Reuter's agents regarding the death of the Ameer is surely a repetition of an old story. Some time ago such a rumour was spread in Jellalabad, and the report gained such credence that Gholam Hyder Khan, his Commander-in-Chief, had to swear in open durbar on the Koran that it was false. He, however, thought it expedient to give emphasis to his contradiction, so he caused two men who were supposed to have originated or helped to spread the rumour to be publicly blown away from guns, "pour encourager les autres."

THE telegraphic despatch said to have been received at Calcutta on Sept. 16th from Teheran, to the effect that Ishak Khan was marching on Cabul, requires, says the Times correspondent, confirmation. We should think it did. From the papers to hand by the mail, the rebellion of Ishak Khan has not created very much alarm in India, although it may have the effect (not one to be altogether deplored) of indefinitely postponing the proposed mission to Cabul. Ishak Khan may mean to measure his strength with Abdur Rahman as near to Cabul as he can get, for a victory there would make him ruler of Afghanistan. But then it must be remembered that the struggle cannot be anything approaching to equal terms. Abdur Rahman has money, artillery, breechloading rifles, and plenty of ammunition. All these things his cousin lacks.

AND again, Abdur Rahman has on his side the prestige of an alliance with the British Government, and this is no small matter, for the Afghans have a growing knowledge of the advantage of such an alliance. British power is better understood and appreciated amongst those amiable people now than formerly. Of course, much depends on the loyalty or treachery of the Ameer's regular army, but so long as his soldiery are faithful to their present salt—and as the treasure is with him—so long has he little to fear. As our Indian contemporary points out, Ayub Khan was a far more dangerous enemy, and yet he could not retain Kandahar when he had captured it some seven years ago. Ishak Khan has already had experience of how little he can rely upon some of his followers when he sent the troops he had subdued to Maimana to raise the revolt there.

THE account given by the Times correspondent of the manner in which the Government of Bombay has dealt with a Native editor for publishing a gross and malicious libel against English officials in high political appointments is an instructive one to read, especially if one bears in recollection the late vigorous letter of Sir Lepel Griffin to the Supreme Government upon this very question of the unbridled license allowed to certain Native newspapers whose existence depends on their scurrility and power of levying blackmail. English readers will hardly believe that any Government would pass over with impunity or with a half-hearted apologetic rebuke such as the Bombay Government is said to have given—so outrageous an attack upon British Political Residents as that contained in the extract quoted by the Times correspondent. We can quite believe with the correspondent that "the result is that the authority of the Government is being rapidly paralysed, while respectable members of the Native community are blackmailed and terrorised in the most open and shameless manner."

THE new club at Simla has been unfortunate in its first habitation at Bentinck Castle, once the residence of the Governor-General of India, but better remembered, perhaps, as the old "Simla Bank" house. Beautifully and centrally situated, the place had many pleasant associations fraught with it in the memories of men and women who in days not long past visited the "mountain" on pleasure bent or duty. Hæc olim meminisse! The Simla Bank has gone the way of many similar Indian institutions, and now the telegram tells us that the building itself has fallen a prey to the great consumer of all things past, present, and to come—fire!

THE Natives of the Punjab, who are great believers in omens, have received a fresh and convincing proof of the validity of their convictions in the fact of the death of the young heir-apparent to the Chamba raj, owing to which event the State of Chamba is now in "great sorrow and consternation." It is an annual cruel custom in that hill State to sacrifice a buffalo to the deity of the Reeve river by throwing the animal into one of its deepest and most difficult parts to escape from. If the animal is drowned the omen is lucky; if it escape, the reverse. But if the latter happens three years in succession then some great calamity will come about. This year the buffalo escaped, and it was the third year in succession such had occurred! The death of the infant Prince following closely upon the escape of the buffalo is looked upon as a sign of the wrath of the gods against somebody. It may be that it will be interpreted as expressing celestial opinion that the Punjab Government supported by the Supreme and Home Governments did a cruel and unjust act when some years ago it ignored the claims of the rightful heir to the Chamba raj (Suchait Singh), and sent him into poverty and exile, where he now is—a foolish follower of another badly treated but foolish Prince, Dhuleep Singh—but who with Dhuleep Singh might have been made a firm and loyal adherent to British rule by the simple exercise of some official tact, sympathy, and fair play.

WE give to-day an account published in the Times this morning of an interview at Hawarden between Mr. Gladstone and the Nawab Mahdi Ali, the representative of the Nizam in the Deccan case. It is charming reading whether one regards the complimentary assurances of the Oriental nobleman, or the gushing sympathies of the great statesman, who told him that he approved of his conduct in attending the funeral of his grandmother. The narrative has been compiled, it is said, for the information of the Nizam's Government, and it is, therefore, supposed to have all the solemnity of an official document. But we fear that it may raise a smile, especially amongst Anglo-Indians who are versed in Oriental interviews and compliments.

THE day of sailing from Bombay of the P. and O. Contract Mail steamers with Overland or Foreign Mails will, at the close of the Monsoon, be altered from Tuesday to Friday. The last steamer sailing on Tuesday will be that leaving Bombay on Tuesday, September 11th, 1888, and the first steamer sailing on Friday will leave Bombay on Friday, September 21st, 1888.

CHERRAPUNJI has a rival for its rainy supremacy in a place in Upper Burma. At least during the closing week of July Kyaupkyu completely eclipsed Cherrapunji, having in seven days received a baptism of no less than twenty-seven inches of rain, or say, at a daily rate of four inches, a downpour amounting to 120 feet in the year. During the same week Cherrapunji could only show a beggarly nineteen inches.

THE CHOLERA IN THE PUNJAB.—The Civil and Military Gazette of the 22nd says:—"The latest reliable returns of the cholera visitation which has so unhappily afflicted the Punjab during this summer show that up to the commencement of this month there had been 11,194 cases, with 5,624 deaths; the percentage of fatal cases being fifty. The disease has been very general, ranging from Umballa to Peshawar. It appeared first in the Shahpur district, from which it has now almost entirely disappeared. It is believed to have come to the district from Kashmir. A peculiar feature of the disease has been its ravages among Mahomedans, while Hindus have enjoyed comparative immunity. It has also been disastrous to the European communities at Rawal Pindi and Murree, there having been ninety-three cases with sixty-six deaths. Murree is said to be overcrowded and to have a bad water supply.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 16.

The Black Mountain expedition will be officially known as "The Hazara Field Force." The transport and commissariat arrangements are being energetically pushed forward. The Government of Cashmere will furnish 1,000 men to watch the frontier near Khagan. The British columns will probably traverse all parts of the country, moving by the Barchar and Sambalbat spurs, the routes taken by the former expeditions, while a column will also proceed along the Indus. The objective will probably be Takot, which was not reached by the expedition of 1868. In this way the whole country will be explored, and the portion of the Indus from Palasi northwards will be surveyed.

A serious crime has been perpetrated in the palace of the Rajah of Mainpuri. The Rajah had recently taken into his service a dewan named Buldeo Singh. During the night some persons entered this dewan's room and killed him, as well as a woman who was with him, with tulwars. The woman, who was found just at her last breath, gasped out the names of certain servants of the household, and these have been arrested. No other important evidence has yet been discovered.

Mr. Justice Wilson, who has been appointed President of the Special Commission for the trial of Mr. Crawford at Poonah, is one of the ablest Judges in India, and his appointment will greatly strengthen the Commission in public estimation.

A recent resolution of the Bombay Government, dealing with certain libellous charges made in a Native newspaper, shows the urgent necessity for arming the Government with larger powers of control over the press. On May 10 last the following paragraph appeared in a Native journal:—

"Something unusual will happen in India in case tyrannical conduct, such as that of Sir Lepel Griffin in Rewah and Indore, of the Resident in Hyderabad, as exposed by the Hyderabad mining scandals, and of the Agents in Kathiawar and other places, is allowed to continue unchecked. Crores of rupees have been taken away from the Nizam of Hyderabad and from Baroda. We have personally seen a bag containing Rs.20,000 placed in the railway carriage of the Political Agent in Kathiawar by a Rajah. As the Government does not take notice of the arbitrary conduct of the Political Agents and Residents, they do not hesitate in taking bribes of lakhs of rupees, and in doing injustice to the people. The results of this injustice are plunders and fighting. The present continued plunders in Kathiawar are fresh instances in point."

The editor, upon being challenged to name the Rajah and the Political Agent referred to and to furnish full details, mentioned the name of a deceased Rajah and a Political Agent who had left India, and stated that the occurrence had been witnessed by two unknown persons. On being pressed still further by the Government for more specific details, the editor turned upon the Government and absolutely denied that he had ever stated in his newspaper anything which would lead any one to think that the money in question was paid as a bribe. Now, instead of laying this person by the heels for a gross and unjustifiable libel, the Government merely administers a half-hearted, apologetic rebuke, and then leaves him not only entirely unpunished, but for all practical purposes master of the situation, and defiant. In the present state of the law there is almost complete immunity for this class of offences. The result is that the authority of the Government is being rapidly paralyzed, while respectable members of the Native community are blackmailed and terrorized in the most open and shameless manner.

There have been recently two more prominent cases exhibiting the evils of child-marriage and the urgent need for reform. In one case a girl-wife, aged eleven, was branded with red-hot irons by her mother-in-law. In the other, a girl aged eleven, of good position, was found by the police dead, her throat having been cut with a razor. Her husband alleges that she committed suicide, but the matter is being investigated. If the native Congress would address itself to the reform of horrible social abuses their efforts would enlist European sympathy in every direction; but no personal capital could be made out of a social reform agitation, and consequently these barbarous customs are accepted apathetically, without the faintest attempt at amendment.

The accounts received of the murder of Mr. Dalgleish in April last showed that there were two or three persons in the tent with Dad Mahomed Khan, the actual murderer. One of these, the Punjabee fakir who was supposed to have been concerned in the crime, has been captured and taken into Ladakh. The Government of India having brought pressure to bear for the arrest of the others, the Wazir of Ladakh has started out with a small body of troops for the purpose of apprehending them.

The main building of the new club at Simla was recently destroyed by fire. Bentinck Castle, as it was called, was erected by Lord William Bentinck, as the Government-house, about 1833, and was one of the oldest buildings in Simla.

Last Wednesday the ferry steamer plying between Calcutta and Howrah collided with a floating crane and sank in mid-stream. The number of deaths has not yet been ascertained, but the steamer carried a large number of passengers.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 16.

The latest reports from Afghanistan are conflicting. The unsettled condition of affairs there renders it doubtful whether the despatch of the Cabul mission will not be indefinitely postponed. The telegraphic despatch received from Teheran, stating that Ishak Khan was marching on Cabul, requires confirmation. According to the latest official news received in India, Ishak Khan was at Kanabad, and the troops sent forward by him in the direction of Cabul had not crossed the confines of his province. At Kamard, on the northern slopes of the Hindoo Koosh, they were confronted by the Ameer's troops and defeated. With regard to the Ameer's health, he was suffering lately from gout, but he has written to say that his recent illness was not serious, and that he has now recovered.

The latest despatches received from the Kurum Valley Mission are to the effect that so far all had gone well. A permanent camp was to be pitched at Buraki, and a meeting was then to take place with the Afghan representatives. The Deputy Commissioner of Kohat represents the Indian Government. His escort consists of 400 Native Indian soldiers. Sherindil Khan, the Afghan representative, is said to be escorted by three cavalry and four infantry regiments, with eight guns. The object of this mission is to settle the disputes which have arisen between Indian and Afghan subjects on the frontier.

THE SIKKIM EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 16.

There is no news of importance from Sikkim. The opposing forces are still engaged in watching one another's movements at a safe distance. The heavy rains continue, and render active operations difficult. In the event of an advance, no tents or followers will be permitted to accompany the troops. Officers will be restricted to baggage not exceeding 20lb. weight each, and each private soldier will have a great-coat, two blankets, and a waterproof sheet. Rations for three days will probably be taken. The telegraph line is now being carried on to the Nimla ridge, whence a ground cable could be laid as the troops advance.

The Tibetans are engaged in fortifying the Natula Pass. The walls have been strengthened and further protected by traps.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 15.

Owing to the recent heavy rainfall extensive inundations have occurred in Lower Burma. In Pegu twenty thousand acres of paddy land are inundated. In the Bassein district, an embankment having burst, a large quantity of paddy has been destroyed, and considerable damage has also been done to the crops in Tounghoo and Tharrawaddy. In Upper Burma, on the other hand, the rainfall has been insufficient, and rain is much wanted in certain districts.

It is reported from Upper Burma that the local myoke, or native magistrate, of Mogoung has been murdered in his house by a party of Kachyens. In Tsagain, one of the most disturbed districts in Upper Burma, some important dacoit chiefs have surrendered. A number of petty skirmishes with dacoits are reported from other districts. On the whole, however, a considerable falling off in the number of disturbances in Upper Burma is shown by the official reports for the last two weeks.

The recent heavy floods will probably delay the opening of the railway from Tounghoo to Mandalay.

MURDER OF A BRITISH OFFICER.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

MANDALAY, SEPT. 18.

Intelligence received here from Htigyaing, in the Shwebo District, states that Lieut. Beevor was found murdered in his bed on the 5th inst.

It is presumed that the deed was committed by dacoits, although a Burmese servant is also suspected.

RUMOURED DEATH OF THE AMEER.

(THROUGH REUTER'S AGENCY.)

ST. PETERSBURG, SEPT. 20.

According to a telegram received here from Tashkend, a rumour is current at that place that the Ameer Abdul Rahman has died suddenly.

SIMLA, SEPT. 20.

Nothing whatever is known here in confirmation of the report telegraphed from Tashkend of the death of the Ameer Abdul Rahman, and the news is discredited.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

QUEER "SWORD EXERCISE."

(Madras Times.)

An instructive story reaches us from an up-country station. A parcel of new swords for the men of a battery arrived, and were to be served out for use over the regulation term of years—a period, we believe, of some twelve years. The major commanding the battery happened to be absent on leave, and the captain, in temporary charge, mindful of the stories which have been current of late years, thought it his duty to test the weapons to his own satisfaction, an operation which he had performed in his presence by a stalwart non-commissioned officer. We have not learned what the precise test used was, but it was such as appeared a reasonable one to the captain. The result was that a number of swords—about seventy, we believe—were returned to the Ordnance authorities as unfit for use. To this, that department made prompt reply: "Yes, we agree with you, the swords are now unfit for use, but you had no right to test them on your own account: they had already been subjected to, and had stood, all the prescribed tests, and—we will trouble you to pay us their value, about £30"! A paper engagement followed, the upshot of which was that the zealous captain has been mulcted in the cost of the swords out of his own pocket.

We are not in a position to offer an opinion as to the merits of the particular case we have mentioned. No doubt a strong man could, if he wished, play havoc with very serviceable weapons if he applied his strength and ingenuity wrongfully to the task, and it may be that the tests used by the authorities, whose business it is to see that proper swords and bayonets are supplied to our soldiers, are all that a reasonable man could ask for before accepting the weapons for use in war. But, on the other hand, it is only an exercise of the most ordinary common sense to ask that, before our rank and file are taken upon active service, there should be no ground for a lurking distrust in their minds that they have not been as properly equipped for their duties as is possible. "Knowledge is power" is doubtless a very true saying, but the knowledge which gives each man on a field of battle, and an army collectively, the very best kind of power, is the knowledge that the powder is dry, that the rifle is well made, not only to discharge good cartridges, but to be clubbed and laid about a man in a molee; that the sword will do its part as well as a brave arm that wields it; and that the bayonet will not be too prone towards a transformation into a staple, or a corkscrew.

The officer buys his own sword and his own revolver, and though, no doubt, a part of the high price he pays for each may fairly be set down to the expensive "finish" of the articles, still it may be assumed, in these days of Army and Navy Stores and so forth that the fighting weapons of a subaltern are no more expensive than is absolutely necessary to insure their being entirely trustworthy in action. We believe an officer's fighting sword costs him not less than £5, while the swords served out to our rank and file—those, for instance, over which the gallant captain of our story has been convicted of trop de sele—cost 18s. each. These cheap weapons have, no doubt, been set upon by numerous committees, and been pronounced to be very good; but it is difficult not to wonder how they will stand the test of hard fighting compared with the more costly weapons which our commissioned officers consider necessary to carry on active service.

To the uninitiated mind—haunted by recollections of such blades as graced the thighs of worthies of the Dugald Dalgetty type, by memories of the handiwork of Andrea di Ferrara being handed down from fighting father to fighting son—there seems ground for alarm in the limit of serviceableness put to these departmentally tested weapons. Twelve years is a period that is capable of very different methods of computation: an eighteen-shilling slicer that spent the one hundred and forty-four months in the hands of a careful man on garrison duty, would have a very different tale to tell from his twin brother which had spent a quarter of the same time in the hands of a man engaged on active service. The one would retire to spend an honoured old age among policemen or preventive officers, the other would probably find itself "used up" while still in the early days of its officially prescribed life. The remedy for the evil—and we maintain that it is an evil that any fear should be entertained by a single British soldier as to the trustworthiness of his weapon—may not be easy to find. But the experience of our soldiers who provide their own swords seem to be that they should buy them for themselves in the open market, and have them tested according to the best methods extant, and from that experience it seems to our dull civilian mind, a useful lesson might be learned as to how to send Thomas Atkins into battle with weapons he cannot cavil at. No doubt the use of more expensive and more officially-long-lived swords might be in the way of “uniformity”—a forty-eight shilling sword could not be altered, at the sweet will of a “faddish” military bureaucracy, as often as the eighteen shilling article. But, after all, the goodness of a sword is not altogether dependent on its shape, and the inspiration of confidence in his weapon to every fighting man is of more consequence than the amusement even of the Horse Guards.

THE ADDRESS TO LORD LANSDOWNE.

(Times of India.)

The interchange of courtesies between the Viceroy-elect and Natives of India at present in England was a pleasing and interesting event. The proceedings were very properly divested of all political significance, so far as direct reference to controversial questions was concerned. The strongest supporters, and the staunchest opponents, of the Indian National Congress joined hands in congratulating their future Viceroy on his high appointment, and Lord Lansdowne's reply was, it goes without saying, couched in terms of measured impartiality. The address fulfilled a double object: it paid a high tribute to his Lordship personally, and conveyed warm sentiments of loyalty to Great Britain. In the first connection, adroit reference was made to the fact that the name of Lansdowne had been held in honour and affection by the Natives of India so far back as half a century ago. This was in the days of the Governor-Generalship of Lord William Bentick, whose seven years' rule (from 1828 to 1835), in the words of Sir W. W. Hunter, “forms an epoch in administrative reform, and in the slow process by which a subject population is won over to venerate as well as to dread its alien rulers.” The same writer fixes this period as the era when “the modern history of the British in India, as benevolent administrators, ruling the country with a single eye to the good of the Natives, may be said to begin.” It was during these quiet but memorable years that the name of the present Lord Lansdowne's grandfather was associated with the Government of India, and the recalling of the fact by the presenters of the address was graceful in itself and grateful to the Viceroy-elect, who in his reply said that it showed “that the people of India are not unmindful of those who have endeavoured conscientiously to promote the interests of their country, and that they are ready still to give credit to those who desire to work in that cause at the present time.” Altogether this little incident was a happy augury of the success which it is to be hoped, will attend Lord Lansdowne when he takes up his high office, and brings, in the words of the address, his “experience and sagacity, high character and generous instincts” to bear on the onerous, responsible, and delicate duties appertaining to the Viceroyalty. One and all will cordially concur in the aspiration of the memorialists that the general result will be to link “in bonds of triple brass the Indian subjects of the Queen-Empress with their fellow-subjects in these realms in strong and enduring loyalty to the Monarch and the Institutions of Britain.”

IS THE PAGODA TREE REALLY DEAD?

(Delhi Gazette.)

Most Anglo-Indians will reply in the affirmative, nevertheless facts crop up that strangely attest the vitality of this wonderful plant. The Pioneer lately contained a notice in its commercial article of the formation of a company for working a timber forest, the leaseholder of which had realised from it an income of a lakh-and-a-half of rupees per annum during the last ten years of his life. That man began business more than half a century ago as an assistant in an indigo-factory on twenty-five rupees a month! It would be difficult even in America to instance a more striking change of fortune. Of course it is not likely that any one discovers the exact locality of his own particular tree will go and publish the facts. Secrecy is to a certain extent essential to success, and in all occupations the chances that divide success from its opposite can only be grasped by those who venture boldly where others hesitate. It is not likely that such men will make a present of the promptings of their own hearts to rivals in business, and the unsuccessful, who must ever be in the majority, naturally proclaim that the age for gathering pagodas has passed away. To our thinking India never yielded so many as she does at present; claimants on her bounty have increased tenfold in the last fifty years. Formerly, indigo was the only mine worked for the benefit of the European planter; now he has the choice often in which he has quite succeeded in scoring odds against his Celestial neighbour. Then, again, are the various mining industries, some of which we see are beginning to return real solid ounces of gold to cheer the declining hopes of disappointed shareholders. In this line India has almost everything to learn, for the richest field of all, that containing black diamonds—is only just being opened out by the Raneeungee-Nag-poor Railway. Coal is bound to effect the same revolution in India that it has done in Great Britain. It is bound to enter eventually into the economy of every household and discharge the function of baking every chupattie. The man (or men) who succeeds in impressing this fact on the children of the soil, will only have himself to thank if he fails in shaking the pagoda-tree to good purpose. There is a time for everything, and disappointment or failure when the tree has been shaken too soon, should not preclude another trial when the opportunity offers to shake it properly. A great engineer said that he learned by his mistakes, and no man is fit to engineer his own fortunes unless he can lay that fact to heart. So far from the pagoda-tree being dead, every new railway offers a track to its discovery, but seekers must keep their eyes open, and not be too fond of going off on a spree. The P. and O. has shaken the pagoda-tree to some purpose. One would almost wish it had not done so, for the facilities now afforded to young men for running away from India the moment they have a little money to spend, is a serious obstacle to thrift, without which pagodas are lost as soon as found. The mere fact that the building of ocean steamers in Great Britain is found more profitable than any other branch of business, and that of the steamers so built a large proportion find their way to India, is sufficient proof that the latter still yields pagodas. And what is more, the quantum of fever and cholera to be encountered in the search for them, is far more amenable to treatment than it was fifty years ago. The Insurance Companies admit that, and are quite ready to make provision for useful adjuncts to the seekers. It is an old story that man was not born to live alone—certainly not to look for pagodas alone. Fifty years ago he had no choice; to-day, if he has the slightest chance of being successful in the pursuit, half-a-dozen fair candidates will only be too glad of an invitation to join—but we are venturing on dangerous ground and had better observe that silence which is never so golden as when the subject of matrimony and pagodas is to be seriously contemplated.

SANITATION AT SERAMPORE.

(Pioneer.)

A very pretty little farce is being played out in Bengal. A Sanitary Commissioner inspects a town, finds it, to the best of his knowledge, filthy, ill-kempt and badly-drained, and proceeds, according to rule, to hand up the municipality in charge as incompetent, making distinct allegations against their method of conducting business. They are accused of neglecting their work “in the most barefaced manner,” allowing the growth of jungle and the excavation of tanks in the city, and generally discrediting the system under which they were born. The Sanitary Commissioner is he of Bengal: the town is Serampore. As a general rule, when such an authority takes a municipality in hand the latter have the grace to pretend to be ashamed of their shortcomings and to promise amendment. Serampore thinks otherwise, and is supported, needless to say, by two intelligent Native journals. The Chairman of the Municipality traverses the Sanitary Commissioner's statements in a report which is constructed of beautiful English and arguments not quite so lovely. In brief, it runs something after this fashion:—“We are poor; we have no funds. (The Sanitary Commissioner's charge is that the money is hoarded.) It is not true that we have cholera in our midst all the year round. It comes occasionally. Is there any preventive for this? It is generally admitted that there is no preventive. Cholera exists in Calcutta. We should like to know what you said to the Calcutta Municipality about their negligence, if you are so rude to us. Your figures are incorrect, and you only inspected the town for a few hours, and if Government allows its officials to criticise and find fault with us on grounds which are unsubstantial or debateable, our countrymen will feel great disinclination in taking part in Local Self-Government, which will thus be a failure.” The Report, including the whimper at the end, is described as an “elaborate and complete refutation” of the utterly “frivolous and unfounded strictures” of the Sanitary Commissioner. From the journal which most zealously supports the municipality we learn that excavations and empty tanks in the heart of a town do no harm if they are kept clean, and that tanks, not regularly ordained waterworks, are “our staunchest because natural friends.” Consequently, the Sanitary Commissioner's charges are prompted by malice aforethought, he being one of the “official classes” whence comes the most “fierce persistent” opposition of Local Self-Government. He “employed a brief and perfunctory inspection to pick holes,” which he would not have picked had the municipality been composed of Europeans. And the least that the Bengal Government can do is to publish the "triumphant refutation" as a supplement to the Bengal Gazette! Otherwise "a crop of similar complaints will spring up in all parts of Bengal. Here, as the biographer of Onokul Chunder Mukerji says, we have the "cui bono in all its naked deformity." The matter is one which concerns the lives of men, but the lives of men are less than no importance as compared with the "inestimable boon" and the penny-farthing prestige of a miserable municipality. An officer of the Government, whose word should be as indisputable as that of a doctor, is charged with envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness, and the Government is invited to administer to him what in the nature of things must be a stinging reproof.

THRIFT IN THE ARMY. (Civil and Military Gazette.)

The British soldier in India is an unfortunate instance of a man who, having excellent opportunities, almost invariably throws them away. There are few English in the station of life that a soldier would have been in, if he had not enlisted, who have better opportunities of improving himself and his position than the British soldier in India. To begin with, every moderately prudent soldier can put by from six to eight rupees a month from his pay; and when he draws good conduct pay he should be able to put by from eight to ten rupees. After six years' service in India he ought to have, with the interest on his money, at least Rs. 500 or Rs. 600 in the bank. If he is a moderately handy man he can increase this immensely. Not only are there innumerable little billets in a regiment which all bring grist to the mill; but also, if he is at all dexterous with his hands—even if he is not a trained carpenter—he could easily learn enough in his regimental workshop to earn a very considerable amount of money. In a great many stations in India a very moderate European carpenter will get jobs enough to give him a very substantial amount of money. So also with a shoemaker, a smith, or a tailor. Even if a man is clumsy with his hands he can work in the regimental gardens, and so save the money he would otherwise spend on vegetables, and also make a good many rupees by the sale of the spare vegetables he does not require—to say nothing of his chance of obtaining some of the very substantial prizes which are offered for the encouragement of gardening. We have no hesitation in saying that any prudent, sober soldier, with his wits about him, can easily, in six years' service in India, put by from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,000, including interest, even though he has never been a non-commissioned officer. How is it that he almost systematically rejects his opportunities, and goes home, as a rule, as thriftless, penniless a creature as he was when he entered the service? Undoubtedly the chief reason is to be sought in the man himself. He comes into the service a thoughtless, foolish boy. He finds himself in the society of a lot of hard-drinking, reckless men: and he readily acquires the same habits and tastes. He drinks and smokes incessantly, and the balance of his pay he spends on unworthy objects. He lives from day to day: and, finding he has food and clothing, he thinks nothing of to-morrow. Now, we believe, a great deal could be done to help the soldier to realise the importance of thrift. In a few cases it is done; in a great many, we fear, it is not. We conceive it to be the honest and manly—aye, and officerly and gentlemanly—duty of every regimental officer from the colonel down, to do all that in him lies to promote industry and thrift among the men of his regiment. A few words of personal advice and encouragement will often do what a bushel of General Orders will fail to do. Were more attention paid to this, we believe that we should not see the distressing sights which we do at home—where every officer in any important position receives constant applications from old, well-conducted soldiery for assistance to obtain work, or pecuniary assistance; and we should not be confronted with the scandalous fact that the inmates of the workhouses and unions of England are more than half old soldiers.

THE MARTINI-HENRY IN INDIA. (Pioneer.)

The arming of the Native regiments with Martini-Henry rifles is another proof of the many-sided activity with which the efficiency of the army in India is being increased by every available means. The proposal to have but one rifle for European and Native troops alike is not a new one; but while there seemed some chance of the new magazine weapon being issued it was needless to undergo the trouble of a double change of weapons. Now, however, as the new arm appears to be as far off as ever, it has been decided to use the store of Martinis which are in this country. The 40,000 rifles which were sent out from England a considerable time back have been lying idle in our arsenals, but they are now being supplied gradually to the Native troops, and already the Sepoy is learning the mystery of the falling breech-block, and perhaps also realising that the Martini "kicks" a shade more than the Snider. Regarding the latter point we think the greatest attention should be paid in instructing the men from the first as to the holding of the rifle. Its shooting powers they will see quickly enough for themselves; but Natives of India are more lightly built men than Europeans, and will feel the recoil more. It only needs careful instruction, however, to give the Sepoy full confidence in his new rifle: the firm grip which puts the butt well home to the shoulder and neutralises the recoil must be insisted upon, or we shall hear of men shooting with some trepidation. When this feeling comes in, good shooting, of course, goes out. The Martini, we may add, is made in two patterns as regards its stock in order to meet the varying stature and length of arm of the British soldier. There are long and short stocks and a certain proportion of each are issued to each regiment. The Indian Sepoy, as a rule, is a long-limbed man, but we have thirteen battalions of Gurkhas whose stature is far below the average. It is, therefore, intended to give the Gurkhas the rifle with the short stock, and to issue the other pattern, without exception, to the remainder of the army. There will thus be no difficulty experienced in providing all the troops with suitable weapons. Due provision is being made for the manufacture of Martini ammunition in India in larger quantities, and for a corresponding increase in the reserve. By the end of the year at least thirty regiments of the Native army, including a proportion of cavalry and sappers, will have received their new rifles, and the results upon their shooting will doubtless be keenly scrutinised. The majority of the Snider rifles which will be returned to store may be considered as almost worn out, but the best of them need not be wasted, for the police in certain parts of the country might well be made to discard their old Enfields. In Burma over 25,000 police have the Snider, and we should like to see a large number of the rifles issued in the Punjab also where the police-sepoy is already half a soldier.

BENGAL. (Sept. 4.)

MESSRS. WISEMAN, MITCHELL, REID, AND Co., of Calcutta, and another are prosecuting their Banian and his brother for extensive defalcations. The amount in question is said to be two lakhs, and the frauds extend over several months.

THE Inspector-General of Ordnance, Bengal Circle, will leave Calcutta on a tour of inspection on the 18th November next, and will visit the arsenals at Rawal Pindi, Dera Ishmail Khan, Quetta, Ferozepore, Agra, Fatehgarh, Cawnpore, and Allahabad, returning to Calcutta on Feb. 15.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal arrived at Dacca about noon on the 20th ult. On the following morning, in reply to an address from the Municipal Commissioners, his Honour, after describing an ideal municipal corporation, referred to the dissensions which had split up the Municipality of Dacca, and hindered it from approaching that ideal. The inferences which would be drawn by the enemies of local self-government were, he said, obvious; and results of this kind were to himself the cause of bitter disappointment. In the afternoon Sir Stuart and a party from the Rhotas attended a garden party given by Sir Abdul Gunny, K.C.S.I., and the Nawab Ashanullah, at the Shahbag, and in the evening he and Lady Bayley were again the guests of the Nawab at a dinner party at the same place. On Wednesday his Honour was engaged in a long round of inspection all the morning, and in the evening dined with the Commissioner. The Rhotas remained at Dacca on the 23rd and there was a dinner party on board in the evening, followed by an "At home" for the Europeans and natives. His Honour left for Mymensing early on Friday morning, stopping en route for an hour or two to visit Narainganj.

On Thursday, before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, a seaman, named William Borton, of the B. S. Desdemona, Captain Baron, was charged with the murder of William Malone, one of his comrades on the high seas, on July 2 last. Mr. Hume, Government solicitor, appeared on behalf of the prosecution. It appeared that on the above date, while the vessel was in the South Atlantic Ocean, the prisoner, the deceased, and some other sailors were taking their dinner, when the prisoner was handling some pork with one hand, while in the other hand he had his open clasp knife. The deceased remonstrated with him for touching the meat, and appears to have given him a slight push or blow, on which the prisoner stabbed him in his bowels, ripping them up. The deceased was immediately taken aft to the captain's cabin, and the latter, with the assistance of the chief officer, dressed the wounds, which were sewn up by them. The deceased was asked by the captain in the presence of his officers as to who had stabbed him, and he accused the prisoner. All the aid that could be given on board was applied, but the deceased died from the effects of the wounds after thirty hours, and was buried at sea on the 4th of July. The prisoner was brought before the captain, who ordered the third officer to take the knife from him, and it was then taken from him and handed over to the chief officer. The prisoner was then put in irons, and while so confined, the captain discovered that he was ill. The clothes which he had on the day on which he had stabbed the deceased could not be found, and it was inferred that he had thrown them overboard. After some evidence had been taken, the case was adjourned.

THE B. I. S. N. Co.'s steamer Culna, which arrived in Calcutta on Sunday last, brought up the intelligence of the death of Mr. L. B. Goodwyn, one of the senior licensed pilots. Mr. Goodwyn went on board the Culna on Saturday evening, but the captain, noticing that he appeared very ill and unfit to take charge of the vessel, advised him to go to his cabin and lie down. This Mr. Goodwyn consented to do, and the Culna put out to sea, and with steam up cruised around, waiting for the morning. Mr. Goodwyn meanwhile settled himself in a chair on deck, and at 10 P.M. was seen by the chief engineer apparently asleep. At 2 A.M. his servant approached him, and asked him if he would have his bed made up below. Mr. Goodwyn elected to spend the night in the chair however. At 3 A.M. his servant came to the chair, and finding it vacant, went below to look for his master. He could not be found, and a search was instituted with no better result. At daylight, the pilot brig was signalled, and Mr. Christie came on board, and took pilotage charge of the vessel. This gentleman saw Mr. Goodwyn on Saturday morning, and remarked that he was looking extremely ill. The unfortunate man, it is conjectured, must have gone to the side, or endeavoured to walk along the deck, and, not being strong enough to hold on, was carried overboard by the rolling of the vessel, as a very heavy sea was running at the time.

MADRAS.

(Sept. 2.)

THE removal of the seat of Government and of Army Headquarters from Madras to Ootacamund appears to have been of small advantage to that beautiful station. A Nilgiri paper states that a sad feature of the decadence of Ootacamund is the number of attached properties which are being put up for sale by order of the Court, and which belong to residents who were formerly among the richest and most influential in the station.

Mr. Grose will, it is said, be appointed to the Madras Executive Council. His appointment will be generally approved, as he is regarded as a safe, cautious, and able man.

The Madras Presidency Diamond Fields Company whilst on an experimental washing with hand washing apparatus found four diamonds.

Six years ago the French Government built enormous coal sheds in Pondicherry and imported thousands of tons of coal and stores for the navy. Since then no man-of-war has called at Pondicherry, the Commanders preferring to purchase coal at Abcock or Mahe. The coal is deteriorating fast, and the French are now transferring some of it to the naval station of Madagascar.

An attempt is being made by Natives to induce Government to appoint a vakil as Government Pleader, the present holder, Mr. Powell, being about to go on leave. The vakils argue that they ought to have a share in the appointments of the High Court, this appointment being one they have fair claim to. If a barrister is insisted on, then an experienced Native barrister is available. The Hindu Political Association keeps an eye on all appointments, and will nominate a Native where it is possible. The Association are about to send, or probably have sent, a despatch to the Secretary of State, written by General Chesney, recommending the reconstitution of the Legislative Councils.

BOMBAY

(Sept. 4.)

A MURDER by poisoning is reported from Carabolim (Goa). Two goldsmiths arrived at the village and were the guests of one of their friends. The host knew that they had come to purchase gold, and had with them some five hundred rupees. Tempted by the sight of the money the host administered poison in the food which was offered to his guests. One man died on the spot, and the other was saved by the use of antidotes which the neighbours employed. The murderer has been arrested.

KHAN BAHADUR GHULAM MAHOMED MOONSHI, having some time since brought to the notice of Government the necessity of founding special scholarships for Mahomedans in Government schools in the Mofussil, has received a reply informing him "that the Governor in Council has directed that one scholarship of Rs. 5 a month should be offered in the current year for competition in each of the eighteen districts of this Presidency, exclusive of Sind and the City of Bombay, to Mahomedans only, and that in all cases where a special scholarship for Mahomedans is offered, the second scholarship for classes backward in English should be reserved for such classes exclusive of Mahomedans, the public scholarship being of course open to all classes."

THE Bombay Catholic Examiner says that Archbishop Porter, being now sufficiently recovered from his recent illness, is permitted by his medical advisers to return to Bombay.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—The system of taxation at Goa has not been one of the best, but the new land-tax which goes under the name of predial has created an intolerable grievance. Committees of valuation have been appointed in each district, and some of them have been so unfair in their dealings, overtaxing the poor and undertaxing the rich, that no amount of remonstrance has been able to remove the injustice under which the poor people are labouring. Their loud complaints have only met the deaf ear of the tax collector. During the last week a deputation of about fifty poor women from Bardez waited on his Excellency the Governor-General and exposed their hardships. It is not reported what the Governor-General has replied, but he cannot fail to give his consideration to a matter which is causing oppression and injustice to his humble subjects.

THE BOMBAY GOVERNMENT AND MR. CRAWFORD.

The Calcutta Statesman says:—We expressed a somewhat strong opinion two or three weeks ago, that in its attempt to prosecute Mr. Crawford before the criminal court, Lord Reay's Government had acted with great rashness and imprudence. Since so writing we have received information upon the subject that leaves little or no doubt in our own mind that the local Government is not open to the reflection we then made upon its course, and we deem it only right to say so. The information we have received—and it comes to us unsolicited and from quarters in no way concerned therein—has led us to the conclusion that the only tribunal before which Mr. Crawford can be arraigned, is a special commission appointed for the purpose. From the nature of the charges, which we cannot particularise, it is clear to our own mind that no criminal court could possibly deal with them in a way that would be satisfactory either to the public, or to those friends of Mr. Crawford himself, who desire that he should have a full opportunity of replying to them. From what we now know of the case, it seems clear to us that Lord Reay was bound to inquire into the charges preferred against him, and equally clear that a commission is the only tribunal that could possibly deal with them. We can hardly hold Lord Reay's Government answerable for Mr. Crawford's attempted flight, since there was no way whatever we find of preventing his leaving the country, but by a magistrate's warrant, and the warrant could be obtained only by laying an information against Mr. Crawford before the criminal court. The Government had thus to decide between allowing Mr. Crawford to leave India with these grave charges hanging over him, or to detain him by causing an information to be laid against him before the police magistrate, in such form and shape as was possible. That under these circumstances, the charges should be defective either in form or substance, or in both, can hardly be held by Mr. Crawford to be a grievance. The Government had no intention whatever of prosecuting him criminally. It had received many serious charges against him, stretching over a period of several years, and at last "suspended" him from office, as a necessary preliminary to appointing a commission to inquire into their truth. His attempted flight compelled the Government either to connive at his leaving the country, or to prefer them in the best shape they could before a police magistrate, that a warrant might be made out for his detention. The question therefore is really reduced to this:—Ought the Government to have allowed Mr. Crawford to leave India, or to have prevented his doing so, by changing the procedure they were following against him? Before the question can be satisfactorily answered the public will require to know what the charges really are, and as their nature can be matter of surmise only until they are officially made public, the Government is bound, we think, to appoint a commission to report upon them. The proceedings ought not to be abandoned because Mr. Crawford compelled the Government to take the invidious step of arresting him, and placing him before the magistrate. No one can possibly say at this stage of matters whether the charges are just or not. Under ordinary circumstances, Mr. Crawford's attempted flight would offer strong presumption of their truth, and for this no one is to blame but himself; but under no circumstances ought his attempted flight to prevent inquiry into them. The Government of India should undoubtedly sanction the appointment of a commission, and warn Mr. Crawford that pending the inquiry he must not leave India.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Sept. 2.)

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab will make no tour this year between Simla and Lahore, but will travel direct to the latter place, arriving on the 14th or 15th of October.

MAJOR R. A. SARGEANT, R.E., will in all probability be the manager of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway when it is taken over by Government as a State line.

FOR the first time for some years a race meeting is to be held in November at Cawnpore. For the Pony Steeplechase stakes amounting to Rs. 4,000 are offered.

CHOLERA still lingers among the Horse Artillery, at Pindi, and the Royal Sussex Regiment, at Murree, but the virulence of the disease has abated. Isolated cases are still reported from the Derajat stations.

THE subject of female infanticide appears to have been again exercising the Government of the North-West Provinces, as a special census of the suspected clans is to be taken during the coming cold weather. The orders of Government also intimate that the police officers of Fatehgarh, Etah, and Mainpuri—the districts with the worst reputations—are not to be changed for the next three years, so that continuous attention may be given to the matter.

THE arrangement by which the chief Native State in India has been invited to send a representative with the Mission to Cabul is, the Pioneer thinks, a very proper one, nor could a better selection have been made than that already announced. Major Nawab Afsur Jung is A.D.C. to the Nizam and commands the Golconda Brigade, consisting of one regiment of cavalry, three of infantry, and a heavy battery. A few months ago he was appointed Major in the British Army, the first occasion, we believe, on which a Commission has been conferred on a Native of India, not a titular or ruling Chief, nor in the British Service. He served on Sir Frederick Roberts' Staff at the last Delhi Camp of Exercise and was a Member of the Hyderabad Deputation to the Rawul Pindi Durbar in March, 1885. He speaks both English and Persian fluently, is a keen sportsman, and an excellent fellow all round.

THE Simla Fine Arts Exhibition was opened on September 1 by Sir Charles Elliott, who, in an introductory speech, informed the company that the pictures sent in were slightly in excess of those of last year. He then proceeded to read the names of the prize winners. Commenting shortly on the work of each, Sir Charles Elliott regretted that only three Native artists had sent contributions. He was afraid this state of things showed that art was not as yet very widely cultivated among them. Referring to some recent criticisms as to the prevalence in exhibitions in England of bizarre and fantastic effects, Sir Charles observed that an exhibition, such as the present, could at least claim to be free from such a charge. Amateur artists might be deficient in technical skill, but he had observed that they choose, as a rule, for their themes, subjects which were familiar, simple, or elevating. Such work seemed to him more interesting than that which sought to attract attention mainly by its eccentricity. The prize winners are as follows:—

Viceroy's Prize—Miss Sanford, oil, flowers, subject, Blaumontia.

Lieutenant-Governor's Prize—Mrs. Jardine, water colour, Rocks, Matheran.

Commander-in-Chief's Prize—Colonel G. Strachan, water colours, Temple on Nagtiba.

Commander-in-Chief's Second Prize for N. C. O. and Soldiers—Corporal A. White, 3rd Dragoon Guards, water colours, Hayward's Heath.

Sir Charles Elliott's Prize—Colonel Holdich, series water colours.

Colonel Tanner's Prize—Lady Helen Blackwood, chalk, Head.

The Hon. Mr. Scoble's Prize—Mrs. Scott, "Waiting for Orders."

Sirdar Pertab Singh's Prize—Kishen Singh, woodwork screen.

Sir Guilford Molesworth's Prize for Photographs—Mr. Justice Parsons.

Society's First Prize—Mrs. Fox Strangways, oils, Great grandmother. Second Prize—Dr. Supple, water colour, "On the Irrawaddy." Third—Mrs. Uloth, oils, "Study from Life." Fourth—Mrs. G. Young, oils, Roses. Fifth (for Native artists only)—Ramchunder Gopal, oils, Maharratta student.

A railway accident has occurred on the Madras Railway at Timmachera Station. The Native driver of a goods train lost control over his engine which should have been turned on the turntable, instead of which it smashed dead; the buffers went down the embankment with two waggons. The driver was severely injured and the guard slightly. The engine and wagon have been wrecked.

THE INVASION AND DEFENCE OF ENGLAND.*

Is England liable to invasion? The question is momentous, and the answer not easy. Theoretically, it may be presumed that the reply must be in the affirmative, but, practically, the problem is more difficult. Captain Maude is of opinion that, alike in practice as in theory, there is no sound reason why France should not land on these shores; but then he presupposes a mass of eventualities. First of all, he assumes that England has lost the command of the ocean; in other words, that in a pitched battle the British flag has had to make way for the tricolour standard. But is not this rather begging the question? Of course, if we are beaten and our fleet annihilated, matters must look ill for the nation; but surely it is a fair rejoinder that it is not admissible to concede defeat of the first line of defence, since a maritime people when annihilated at sea must necessarily be more or less at the mercy of the victors. If people go up in a balloon, and, for the sake of argument, it be taken for granted that the machine split in twain, why obviously the sequel is inevitable—the death of the aerial traveller is assured. As with individuals so with countries. Trust must be placed somewhere. If your fleet sinks, your guns burst, your torpedoed wont act, well, what doubt can there be as to invasion? But what the nation has a right to expect is that the fleet is strong enough to withstand any reasonable combination of foes, and the all-important question whether this expectation be well-founded or otherwise is not treated in Captain Maude's pamphlet.

Nor must it be overlooked as an argument in favour of our immunity from invasion, that admitting a foreign foe could land and lay waste every town in the kingdom; of what avail would that be if, as is probable, indeed, as it may be hoped is certain, not a solitary soul would live to tell the tale? Our fleet would be summoned by telegraph from all parts of the world within any immediate reach of home, and while the French were ravaging the coast our men-of-war would be collecting. And what, then? Of course, once again, if Captain Maude means by the expression "command of the sea" not merely the power desirable from a snatch victory, but the absolute sway of the waters everywhere and anywhere, the argument falls to the ground. But in such case it must be at once conceded that when, and as soon as ever England ceases to be the mistress of the ocean, national annihilation is within a measurable distance.

Once again, is it quite fair to suppose that troops transported across the Channel will arrive so fresh and so unwearied that they can then and there engage in deadly strife with a people not yet entirely ignorant of the art of fighting—especially when national existence is the stake at issue—whereas, on the other hand, a journey of a few hours by train is to completely demoralise the hapless English warriors. Surely it needs no great acquaintance with human nature to proclaim just the contrary—for is not the sea a much more potent factor, as regards the stomachs of mankind, than is a railway?

Lastly, not a whit is conceded as to the faults and failures of our enemy. With us all is wrong, with them all is right; we are in the slough of despond, they are in a seventh heaven of jubilation; we are rotten to the core, they are sound from the top of the head to the soles of the feet. Is this reasonable?

Still, we do not wish to quarrel with the deduction which Captain Maude places before his readers to the effect that a chain of works should be erected round London—each fort being absolutely safe against any attempt of stormers; such a line of defence would not be unduly costly, "and in all probability would not exceed five millions, or barely the thousandth part of what a war—even a successful one—on our own soil would cost us in cash, to say nothing of colonies and loss of trade."

STATESMEN SERIES.—LIFE OF PRINCE METTERNICH.†

For the opening decade of the present century Europe was virtually governed by the greatest despot of modern times—the First Napoleon. But he ruled with a rod of iron, and a cloud of opposition began slowly but surely to overspread the horizon of the political world, and when, in 1815, Buonaparte lay crushed, dethroned, and an exile from the country which he had raised to the highest pitch of splendour and military renown, the sword was destined to give way to the pen. The Corsican warrior was replaced by the Austrian diplomatist. So it chanced that for more than thirty years the influence of Metternich was supreme in the councils of Europe. Never in the annals of the world—certainly not once in the history of modern times—was so splendid an opportunity presented to any son of Adam. For years wars and rumours of wars had distracted the people of the Continent; huge battalions after huge battalions had met and fought till blood ran like water down the highways and byways of Europe; but the land was [weary of this loathsome deluge; men, tired, oppressed, and sick at heart, panted for the streams of peace. Then, if ever, could a great and master mind raise up the edifice of government upon a safe and sound basis; then, or not again in the distant ages of futurity, could a mighty intellect afford mankind the blessings of a healthy administration and a beneficent rule.

Metternich stepped into the breach. But was he equal to the golden, the superbly magnificent, opportunity thus presented to him? The answer is to be found in Colonel Malle-son's singularly attractive and able record of the great statesman's life. That he failed is a historical fact; the reasons are not so unmistakable. Possessing unbounded influence and large capacity of discernment, endowed with winning ways and a sound judgment, he has fallen into the abyss of oblivion. Not much more than a quarter of a century has elapsed since Metternich was gathered to his fathers, and yet his name has now passed out of the world's remembrance. Not one person in twenty of the rising generation could, perhaps, even mention the diplomatist's nationality. Why was this? The reply is at once interesting and instructive. It cannot, perhaps, be better given than by quoting the epitaph which he himself wrote on the fall of the Great Napoleon:—"The vast edifice which he had constructed was exclusively the work of his hands, and he himself was the keystone of the arch. But this gigantic construction was essentially wanting in its foundation, the materials of which it was comprised were nothing but the ruins of other buildings. Some were rotten from decay; others had never possessed consistency from the very beginning. The keystone of the arch has been withdrawn, and the whole edifice has fallen in." Writing these remarkable words as a criticism on his opponent, Metternich failed to see that he was following in the footsteps of him whom he had cast down. History repeated itself, and the fall of the statesman was scarcely less conspicuous than the ruin of the warrior. This chapter in the world's annals, which is replete with significance, has been well and carefully analysed by Colonel Malle-son, whose work is every way worthy of the position which its author has achieved in the world of letters.

THE EASTERN SOUDAN AND ABYSSINIA.*

In two goodly volumes we have a lively, discursive, and telling narrative of an eventful period of current history, in which the author, though merchant by profession, took a very active and serviceable part. Mr. Wylde may be taken as a modern type of the merchant adventurer of the seventeenth century, who did so much to spread the power and fame of England "in torrid seas and realms remote." His name will be known to many officers and travellers with whom he came in contact when at Galle and on the Malabar coast. Afterwards at Suakim, having acquired much knowledge of the country and people, he was asked by Baker Pasha to go to Massowah to try to arrange matters between the Egyptian officials (a sad lot) at that place and the Abyssinians, whose caravans were often plundered by robbers under the patronage of the Egyptians. This was a difficult task, but Mr. Wylde appears to have succeeded, much to the satisfaction of Baker Pasha, to whom he was much attached, and of whose defeat, just after, at El Teb by the Dervishes, he gives a regretful account. Mr. Wylde had previously been intimately acquainted with Gordon Pasha, of whom, as may be supposed, he speaks in the highest terms, though he recognises and explains the false position that gallant man was placed in as representing the corrupt and plundering Egyptian Pashas. To Gordon, Mr. Wylde explained the project for the Suakim to Berber railway, of which he would seem to have been the originator, and which was fully approved by that experienced engineer. As to the miserable story of how that railway was at last begun, at the wrong time, in the most wasteful fashion, and without any real intention of carrying it out, this is part of much special information comprised in these volumes.

More stirring yet more grievous in their tale of heroism wasted, of gallantry misdirected, though also of British valour and character vindicated, are Mr. Wylde's narratives of the great fights at El Teb, Tamai, and Tamanieh, regarding which many things are put in the new light that can only be thrown on them by one like the author, who knew all about the tribes, and the country beforehand, and has had the further advantage of subsequent residence on the Red Sea littoral, whilst the region was settling down, in a fashion, after the catastrophe at Khartoum, and the consequent alternate despair and anarchy which pervaded all the tribes and people of the Eastern Soudan. It is some compensation for this story of turmoil and unavailing slaughter to find that Mr. Wylde has kept his mercantile and political head through it all, and gives us clear ideas of the policy that may be pursued—and has been since Colonel Kitchener's departure—towards restoring some degree of order amongst the tribes and a healthy self-acting, commercial system. In this way Mr. Wylde's book has much practical value, and must be of great service to those responsible authorities here and at Cairo who are bound to establish permanent order in the Eastern Soudan. This knowledge of the whole region and its conditions is very full. He it was who chose Lupton Bey and sent him to Khartoum at Gordon's request; and we have some reason to believe that Mr. Wylde has been in communication with that long-enduring prisoner of the Mahdi since the date at which (about three months ago) rumour speaks of his death in captivity. Much of the interest of the work consists in the life like sketches the author gives of men whom he has known at Suakim, Massowah, and the Soudan—Gordon, Admiral Hewitt, Valentine Baker, Sir Charles Warren, Generals Graham and Fremantle, Mason Bey, Osman Digna, the savage, and his noble brother, besides numbers of other notable men of the period, most of whom have passed away, including Cameron the Special, who was a close and intimate friend of Mr. Wylde's.

The portion of the work of most substantial value is the full and systematic narrative of Sir William Hewitt's mission to King John, of which Mr. Wylde was an essential member, being, indeed, the guide and an active negotiator, as he knew the Negus well and thoroughly understands the Abyssinian question. As the Italians are still hopelessly entangled in the false position—into which they were partly misled by our Foreign Office—Mr. Wylde's review of this subject has close bearing on current foreign policy, and claims the serious attention of the authorities concerned at Rome, Cairo, and Constantinople.

We must not omit to mention one minor topic that crops up ever and again in course of Mr. Wylde's reminiscences, and which will have strong interest for the more active of our readers—that is sport. He quite revels in his stories of game and its pursuit, large and small, from the noble lion to the timid gazelle, the pancotin, and "dig-dig," besides other birds and ground game enough to set up a professor of natural history for a whole course of lectures—after he shall have shot or caught his subjects.

There is a fine and valuable map (one of Stanford's) showing all North-east Africa from the Somali and Mam country in the south and all the hill valley up to the Mediterranean.

THE COMING VICEROY.

The Sanjivani.—If the intelligence that reaches us from London about the manifold virtues of Lord Lansdowne is true, we expect much good from him. A few days ago he had a long conversation with that great friend of India, Lord Ripon, and it is said that both of them hold identical views on many points. Some of his recent utterances raise hopes in us, while others engender in us feelings of veneration towards our future Viceroy. May Heaven enable him to govern the country, not by the strength of British arms, but through the affection of the people of India.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The Dainik.—Though we enjoy some advantages in expressing our opinion on legislative measures, we are not allowed the least opportunity of inquiring into the finances of the country. To augment its income the Government imposes a new tax, and passes it through the Council, but our opinion is never invited on the subject of expenditure. It is therefore that Native and English gentlemen are unanimously of opinion that some satisfactory arrangement is necessary to remove such a state of affairs. Sir Richard Garth has recently published a book in which he has proved the necessity of consulting Native opinion on the Indian Budget. His views are drawn from his long experience of the system of government in this country, and as such they carry great weight with them. If the course advocated by Sir Richard were adopted, the people of the country, when aware of the real state of affairs, might suggest economic measures, or when convinced that nothing short of taxation could meet the deficit might not grumble at having to pay fresh taxes. To act on such a principle would necessitate a change in the present system of Government, and we would like to impress on it that the time for such a change has arrived.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1888.

UPPER BURMA.

FACTS are likely to prove too strong for the pessimists who predicted that nothing but evil would come from our annexation of Upper Burma. The friends of humanity who declared that we were trampling upon the liberties of a contented and prosperous people satisfied with the rule of their own kings, will be best answered by the attitude which the objects of their sympathy are assuming towards their British "oppressors." According to the latest accounts the people whose country we have so wickedly annexed are beginning to consider that they have already something to be thankful for. Gratitude is said (wrongly perhaps) not to be an Oriental virtue, but the most conservative of Orientals knows how to take advantage of any change which he finds will benefit himself. And the change which the peasant of Upper Burma finds in the state of affairs to-day is that his life and property are secure under British rule. The country has certainly been undergoing a considerable trial in the struggle which has been made to put down the anarchy and misrule which flourished under a corrupt and despotic Government, but the struggle is ending in a victory for the forces of law and order. The native of Upper Burma who chooses to live honestly and peaceably can now pursue his calling without fear of molestation or injury. As a British subject he has a claim to the rights, privileges, and immunities which his fellow-subjects enjoy in Lower Burma and elsewhere. No authority outside of the law can touch his person or his property. He is no longer at the mercy of ever-exacting, rapacious, and unscrupulous officials. He has entered upon a new life, in which he can secure peace and prosperity for himself and all belonging to him. The change from the former life he had to lead may astonish and perhaps perplex him—just as blindness for a moment follows upon a sudden change from darkness to light. But when sight is restored the better situation is recognised and appreciated. And so it will be in Upper Burma when its people come to contrast the present with the past. One of the latest journals from Burma touches forcibly upon this point in referring to the extravagancies and misrule of King Theebaw, for whose downfall and exile some Englishmen are still not ashamed to pretend regret, and to argue that that monarch, instead of having been dethroned, should have been allowed to rule in the hope of his reforming and listening to good advice. But, as the journal in question points out, to hope for that improvement would be like trying to tame a tiger. With the first taste or sight of blood its original ferocity would return. "The strain of insanity and ferocity which was so prominent in King Tharrawady has been inherited by all his descendants, while the incestuous intermarriages permitted and prevailing within the royal family has no ways tended to improve the mental or physical qualities of its members. It is no wonder, then, that intense vanity, folly, cruelty, overbearing truculence, combined with absolute puerility of mind, which made them the tools of designing favourites and flattering foreign adventurers, should have been the characteristics of the Alompra dynasty. Their extravagant follies, which made them waste their substance in all sorts of absurd ways, until, after having sold every forest and concession which it was possible to dispose of, for mere songs, in order to secure immediate supplies of cash, their financial embarrassments were about to culminate in their pawning the whole kingdom and its resources to the French Government, hiding behind a syndicate of French capitalists."

This is what would have happened only that, fortunately for the people, his Majesty's greed and requirements of money were so strong and pressing that he rashly attempted to confiscate the property of a British company. Then came the end, which kingly craft did not, perhaps, foresee, but which has ushered in the dawn of better days for his down-trodden subjects. The sentimentalists say that British invasion and annexation were unjustifiable, for Christian ethics on which England is supposed to base her rule forbids evil to be done, even though good should come. The aphorism may be accepted, but the philosophers have not yet decided what evil really is in certain changes of this world of complex moral problems. The people of Upper Burma may be casuists or not, but they have had enough experience of the evil doings of their past rulers to be able to judge of the wisdom of accepting a rule which promises a new and better order of things. And they will, we imagine, by their action, in the end fully endorse the view taken by the journal from which we have already quoted; and that view runs thus:—"When we come to take a retrospective glance at the doings of the Court of Mandalay during the past twenty-two years, and take account of its extravagant follies, by which millions of its finances have been wasted, we cannot but think that the people of Upper Burma, as they come in the course of a few years to understand how it was that they were kept in a state of misery and abject poverty, as compared with their more fortunate countrymen under British rule, will bless the day when a royal family, which took all and gave nothing in return, was expelled from the country."

HER Majesty's Indian troopship Crocodile sailed from Ports mouth on Wednesday for Bombay, with drafts of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 7th Dragoon Guards, 5th Lancers, 7th Hussars, 17th Lancers, 21st Hussars, 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers, 2nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, 2nd Battalion Devonshire Regiment, 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment, 2nd Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, and the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, numbering altogether 47 officers, 20 officers' wives, 1,118 rank and file, 35 women, and 40 children. Prince Adolphus of Teck proceeded in the Crocodile to join his regiment, the 17th Lancers.

If the information of a contemporary is reliable, anything like the general provincialising of the large Indian railways, which is said to be threatened, is most unlikely to come off, among other reasons because some of the Provincial Governments are unwilling to accept the responsibility. Thus the charge of the North-West system, which was offered to the Punjab, has already been declined with thanks. The Oudh and Rohilkhand system, which might have been offered to the North-West Government, notwithstanding that the policy of that Government has long been to hand over all its own lines to private companies, will be managed by the Government of India, having become a State line. Then, again, if the East Indian Railway is to be brought under the Government of Bengal, it can only be if all the weighty arguments which effected its transfer to India in 1871 no longer apply.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL C. CUNNINGHAM, Commandant of the 10th N.I., will succeed as Deputy Adjutant-General Colonel De L. R. F. Wooldridge, whose time shortly expires. Colonel Dundas will officiate until Colonel Cunningham, who is at present in Europe, returns to India. Major L. F. Heath, 3rd Bombay Infantry, A.A.G., N.D., will act for Colonel Dundas.

THE Army Veterinary Staff has now been brought down to its reduced establishment. No new appointments have been made for three years owing to a decision of the Indian Government to reduce the number of veterinary officers on the strength of the local army. This decision left several offices to be absorbed. These have all been disposed of, and now the service is open again to candidates from the veterinary schools. The three years' block will have the effect of still further extending the field of selection. As the Accountant-General of the Army said in his evidence before the Estimates Committee, the Veterinary Department is the one of all others to which the War Office can look with satisfaction, as there is no other whose members are so earnest and occupy such an exceptional position, both socially and professionally. This is due to the keen competition for commissions; the difficulty of the Principal Veterinary-Surgeon being not to secure candidates, but to weigh over fairly the claims and qualifications of those who seek to obtain entrance into the service.

IN modification of the original Relief programme, it has been decided to move the 2nd West Yorkshire Regiment from Mooltan to Meean Meer, and thus the 2nd Royal Warwickshire, which was to have gone from Jubbulpore to Meean Meer, will now go to Mooltan.

It is now settled that the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Delhi will be attended by the following regiments:—3rd and 7th Dragoon Guards, the 8th Hussars, the 1st and 5th Bengal Cavalry, and the 11th, 13th, and 19th Bengal Lancers. With these regiments will be two, or perhaps three, batteries of Horse Artillery. The force will be divided into three brigades, commanded respectively by Colonels Prinsep, 11th Bengal Lancers, Hammond, 5th Punjab Cavalry, and Grant, 7th Dragoon Guards. At the Lucknow Camp there will be assembled the 17th Lancers and three regiments of Bengal Cavalry, the 3rd, 4th, and 8th. The Brigadiers and Staff will in this case probably be taken from the officers of regiments on the spot. Yet a third Cavalry Camp may be formed at Kushmor on the Sind-Punjab border, which would be held somewhere in February, the regiments to attend it being the 1st and 3rd Punjab and the 6th and 7th Bombay Cavalry. Artillery practice on a large scale will come off at Meerut, where several batteries are to be concentrated about the same time as the Delhi Camp, and, as they will be joined by a considerable number of infantry battalions, the field exercises there will be on a scale large enough to be thoroughly instructive.

A LECTURE was given at Simla, on August 31st, at the United Service Institution, by Captain G. W. Kitchener on the "Higher Education of Non-Commissioned Officers." The lecturer dwelt at great length on the subject, expressing his opinion that the higher education now given was needed for such officers. He suggested that they should be trained in military history, theory of tactics, reconnaissance work, and field fortifications. They should also receive instruction in subjects likely to be of use in civil life. In the discussion which followed Captain Bullock, of the Devonshire Regiment, advocated the establishment of central schools for non-commissioned officers, and suggested that a certain number of such officers should be recruited by passing the examination. General Elles, who presided, referred to the necessity of instructing men in regimental duty before going on to higher instruction.

THE grant of medals to civilians serving in the field, it has been decided, includes, in ordinary circumstances, only those officials who have the status of officers. Civilian subordinates, such as clerks, purveyors, guides, interpreters, &c., will be eligible for medal only when it is proved that such official (1) was in the performance of military duties, such as those ordinarily performed by combatants; (2) was during the performance of such duties actually and individually under the fire of the enemy; and (3) was appointed in the field force orders to do such duties.

THE following movements for the relief of British and Native troops in the Bombay Presidency will be carried out during the next trooping season:—

Field Batteries—D Battery, 2nd Brigade, will go from Deesa to England. E Battery, 2nd Brigade, goes from Ahmedabad to England. F Battery, 2nd Brigade, moves from Hyderabad to England. J Battery, 2nd Brigade, on arrival from England goes to Deesa. K and L Batteries, 2nd Brigade, are to be sent from England to Kirkee, going by rail from Bombay.

J Battery, 4th Brigade, will be transferred from Kirkee to Ahmedabad. F Battery, 3rd Brigade, will be changed from Kirkee to Hyderabad.

Sea Garrison Artillery—5-1 Lancashire Division and 8-1 London Division go from Aden to England. 6-1 and 7-1 Southern Division will be shifted from Bombay to Aden. 9-1 Northern Division from Darjeeling goes to Bombay. 9-1 Cinque Ports Division from Jatogh returns to England.

British Cavalry—6th Dragoon Guards will go from Mhow to England. The 5th Lancers from England will take their place.

British Infantry—2nd East Yorkshire leave Aden for England, 1st West Riding will be sent from Meean Meer to Aden to take their place.

Native Cavalry—A regiment will be sent to Nangpore District. The name will be notified hereafter.

Sappers and Miners—No. 1 Company go from Kirkee to Quetta. No. 4 half-Company from Kirkee to Aden. No. 3 Company comes from Aden to Kirkee.

Native Infantry—The 8th Infantry go from Rajkote to Poona. The 10th Infantry remove from Quetta to Poona. The 13th Infantry will go from Nusseerabad to Quetta. The 16th Infantry go from Poona to Raipore and Seetabuldee. The 19th Infantry go from Quetta to Nusseerabad. The 24th Infantry go from Quetta to Rajkote. The 29th Infantry go from Hyderabad to Quetta. A regiment will be sent to Nagpur district. The name will be notified hereafter.

INDIAN GOLD MINES.

(Financial News, Sept. 17.)

We have lately to had record a general improvement in the mining share market, largely increased business being naturally accompanied by a steady advance in prices. In no department however, has the activity been more continuous, or the rise in prices more persistent, than in Indian gold shares. The altered condition of things is due to no market rig nor to gambling among big financial houses, as in the case of copper shares, but is the result of an awakening on the part of the investing public to the fact that the Indian mines are doing something after all. It used to be predicted by the prophets of evil that there would never be enough of the precious metal extracted from the Colar properties to make a decent watch-chain; but, although until quite recently the progress made had been disappointingly slow, the actual amount of gold obtained had been something over £250,000 sterling. That may not seem a very big return; but it is to be remembered that until about a year ago the only mine making regular returns was the Mysore. Now there are six companies making regular monthly crushings, and two or three others are returning gold at less frequent intervals. For the past two months the aggregate production of gold by the Indian mines has exceeded 3,000 oz. a month, or at the rate of over 36,000 oz. per annum. The prospect, indeed, is that the total yield for 1887 will be considerably greater than the whole amount produced in the previous history of the industry. The watch chain theorists have, therefore, learned by experience the truth of the proverb that it is useless to prophesy unless one knows.

The progress recently made in the development of the mines has been, speaking generally, very satisfactory, and it is a thousand pities that the same amount of vigour was not earlier displayed. If it had been, it is quite certain that the Indian mines would occupy a very different position, and we should now be face to face with a much higher range of prices. However, it is never too late to mend, and we are pleased to notice that the outlook has very greatly improved. Before the year is out the probability is that at least eight of the mines will be making regular returns, and that the monthly aggregate yield will not be far short of 4,000 oz. of gold. Such a rate of production would, of course, arouse a much greater interest in the industry, and it would doubtless give the owners of gold-bearing properties courage to open up fresh mines. Dealing for the moment, however, with the immediate past rather than with the future prospects, it may be of interest to show what has been the yield of the six mines which are at present giving monthly results. This will best be seen by means of a small tabular statement.

	July—oz.	August—oz.
Mysore	1,325	1,438
Nundydroog... ..	626	580
Ooregum	415	533
Balaghat	354	227
Indian Consolidated	212	200
Nine Reefs	96	155
Devala-Moyar	—	178
	3,028	3,311

The falling off in the Balaghat yield is due to the fact that the stamps were only at work for nineteen days in the month. This is likely to be atoned for in the current month, for the mine is being opened out in a thoroughly systematic manner, and very rich quartz is being met with. In the majority of cases the mines are only now being really put in order to give monthly returns; while with regard to Mysore itself the work of development is being pushed forward much more extensively than at any previous period, permanent results being considered of greater importance than present profits, and this is undoubtedly the proper system to go upon. From the other mines—especially Ooregum, Nundydroog, and Balaghat—very rich assays are being obtained, and there is every reason to expect that the production of gold in each case will be steadily augmented as time goes on. Hitherto the refractory character of some of the ores has been a considerable drawback; but this difficulty seems to have been got over, for in the last report from the Nine Reefs property Captain Johns says: "In future the refractory nature of the ore need not be considered a drawback as the ore can be treated by the new process as well, and almost as inexpensively, as if it were free milling quartz." The importance of the new methods of treating ores can hardly be over-estimated. In the first place the amount of gold saved will be much larger, and the percentage of expenses will be considerably reduced; while ore which would not pay when treated under the old-fashioned system, can be dealt with profitably by the assistance of scientific methods of crushing. Altogether the outlook for gold mining in India is decidedly cheerful, and there is every reason to expect that the industry will receive a much larger share of attention from investors and speculators in the future than it has done in the past.

Already, as we have said, there has been a considerable rise in the prices of shares, amounting in some cases to over 100 per cent. in the last three months. Those who took our advice and bought in when prices were so low have had the opportunity of making a very good profit if they chose to sell out. We are confident, however, that those who have not sold would be very unwise to do so now. At the two last Settlements large blocks of shares have been taken off the market; and quite apart from the improved prospects to which we have referred, the increasing scarcity of floating stock will inevitably tend to enhance prices. It must not be forgotten that we are now at the holiday season—though one would hardly think so to look at the busy state of the Mining Market—and that with the return of the pleasure-seekers business is likely to become much more active. For some of the low-priced shares the demand is just beginning. Altogether, then, the prospect of the Indian mining share market is distinctly hopeful, and those who are best in a position to judge, look for a much higher range of prices before the year is out. A very considerable advance would yet be required to reach the level of prices a couple of years ago, when the returns now being made were by some people regarded as possible only in a very dim and distant future.

MR. GLADSTONE AND THE NIZAM'S REPRESENTATIVE.

As the proceedings in the Deccan case, since its examination by Sir H. James's Committee, are now drawing to a close, the chief representative of his Highness the Nizam sent out to England by the Premier, Sir Asman Jah, is preparing to return to India. The Nawab Mohsin Ool Moolk Mahdi Ali is a well-known public servant, formerly of the Indian Government, and for some years past of the Nizam. He now fills the important post of Financial and Political Secretary of Hyderabad. As he desired to make a tour of England before returning, he accepted an invitation from Mr. Gladstone to visit Hawarden last week. Stopping on the way at Manchester, he was received there by Mr. Macneil, Mr. Dods, and other gentlemen actively connected with the affairs of that city, and visited most of its points of interest. Going on to Chester, he drove thence with Major Robertson, formerly Assistant Resident at Hyderabad, to Hawarden Castle. They were there most courteously received by Mr. Gladstone.

Mr. Gladstone commenced by remarking that he did not ordinarily receive gentlemen at Hawarden, as while there he was glad of some relaxation and retirement, but it gave him much pleasure to make an exception in the case of a Native gentleman of distinction.

He then inquired whether Mahdi Ali had made many journeys in England, and especially whether he had seen Liverpool, explaining the interest of the Mersey and contrasting its changed appearance now and the length of the docks, about six miles, with the state of things in the time of his father, mentioning that, though far larger in amount now, the shipping appeared for various reasons less in bulk and magnitude than it was then. Mr. Gladstone mentioned that his father, in 1812, sent out one of the first merchantmen to India, called the Kingsmill. Learning that the first and only journey Mahdi Ali had made was to visit Hawarden Castle, Mr. Gladstone gracefully acknowledged the compliment, and expressed the great pleasure it gave him to meet a delegate from His Highness the Nizam.

Mahdi Ali said he had heard much of Mr. Gladstone's name and fame both in India and England, and, alluding to the letter sent by Mr. Gladstone to Salar Jung on the subject of an article in a magazine written by that nobleman, said he would be much gratified to learn from his lips that he entertained favourable sentiments towards the Natives of India in general, and his (Mahdi Ali's) co-religionists in particular. Mr. Gladstone then proceeded to express at some length his personal feelings towards India and its people, which were of a most friendly and sympathetic character. He said that the letter to Salar Jung might be taken to express his views and opinions, which were still unchanged and to which he had nothing to add. As regards the Natives of India, he was glad to be able to think that there was in these days among all politicians a growing approximation to that feeling, which consisted in strict adherence to the notion that the presence of the English in India was only justifiable for the good of that country, and he was glad to know that all recent measures had been directed towards the fulfilment of this beneficent and enlightened policy. Mahdi Ali said he was glad to hear these sentiments from the mouth of so learned and famous a statesman, on which Mr. Gladstone replied that he personally was, to a great extent, taken up with the consideration of the mode of government in Ireland to the exclusion of other subjects, and that, as regards the internal affairs of India, the opinions of younger men who had a better opportunity than he of estimating the position of affairs would be more valuable; to which Mahdi Ali replied that the opinions of such an eminent statesman were of the greatest value. Mr. Gladstone deprecatingly said that he had entered now the last stage of his political life, having been a member of the House of Commons for more than fifty-six years, and humorously remarked that there was such a thing as being over-ripe.

As regards his feelings towards the people of India Mr. Gladstone alluded to the appointment made by him when Prime Minister of his old friend and colleague, Lord Ripon, who had done such great things in India, and also that of Lord Dufferin, who had not, perhaps, had the same opportunities as Lord Ripon of carrying out reforms, but who was doubtless anxious to follow on the same lines as his predecessor.

Mahdi Ali here remarked that, so far as his co-religionists were concerned, they recognised that the reconstitution of the old Mogul Empire was impossible, and that a Government which not only respects and encourages their religion, but had also conferred upon Mahomedans such signal temporal advantages, was in every way worthy of their support and affection, and that, should any emergency arise, the spirit of fire and devotion which formerly animated the hearts of Mahomedans in India would still be found keen and alive, enabling them to meet the common danger shoulder to shoulder with the British nation. More especially was this true in regard to the Hyderabad State, which was conspicuous in its unalterable loyalty to the British Crown. He mentioned that the late Sir Salar Jung, whose opinions he had every means of knowing, frequently told him that recognising what a blessing the British Government was to India, he unhesitatingly threw in his lot with them during the mutiny thirty years ago.

Mr. Gladstone replied that these welcome and valuable assurances, coming as they did to him direct from an authentic and influential source, were peculiarly gratifying.

On the subject of the National Congress, Mr. Gladstone said he had only imperfect information, and consequently had some hesitation in discussing this subject, but, so far as he remembered, the questions involved consisted mainly of reform of the marriage laws and prohibition of early marriages, matters chiefly affecting Hindoos. Mahdi Ali explained that his co-religionists as a body had not yet joined in the Congress movement, preferring to allow a Government which had done so much for them and their religion to proceed with its reforms without interference or pressure by political agitation, adding that there was, no doubt, an advantage in educated Natives coming forward to give their opinions on points arising in the government of the country, but, on the other hand, there was some danger that the vast masses of the population of India, who were to a great extent uneducated and unable to comprehend administrative questions, would regard public animadversions upon the conduct of the Government as evidence of inefficiency and weakness, which it was highly undesirable to disseminate. Mr. Gladstone said that might be so, but he wished especially to guard against being understood to express any opinion in this matter; all that he could undertake to say was that all legitimate and reasonable efforts on the part of the people to represent their requirements and improve their position commanded his warmest sympathy. Mr. Gladstone then took the party over the beautiful ruins of the old castle, explaining its history and antiquity, and pointing out the beauty of his park, and in the course of further conversation expressed the great pleasure it gave him to hear that his Highness the Nizam, allowing his feelings of affection and respect to break through the traditions of the past, had attended the funeral of his grandmother. He had also heard with much satisfaction of the intellectual progress among Mahomedans, which modern times had witnessed, one of the signs of which might be found in the presence of about thirty young Mahomedan gentlemen at present studying at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Mr. Gladstone was much interested to hear that Mahdi Ali had heard of his affection for trees and his prowess in using an axe, and presented him with a copy of his photograph, taken while engaged in cutting down a tree, agreeing to accept one of the Nawab's photographs in return. Mr. Gladstone then introduced the Nawab to the various members of his family now at Harwarden Castle. At the conclusion of the interview, which was most friendly and pleasant throughout, Mr. Gladstone asked the Nawab to convey his respectful compliments and best wishes to his Highness the Nizam, repeating once more that he could never forget the generous offer of assistance to the British Government made by that Prince.

NATIVE PRESS.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S INDIAN POLICY.

Hindoo Patriot.—In our opinion it is a matter of no little importance that the Marquis of Lansdowne admitted at the Reception in London that the India of to-day is quite different from the India of 1833. Most Anglo-Indians do not admit this fact. They are of the opinion that India is immutable, that she is now in the year of grace 1888 what she was in the days of Alexander the Great, or at any rate what she was in the days of the East India Company; and they infer from this supposed immobility of India that the same policy which was pursued in the days of Warren Hastings should be followed at the present day. Not long ago a Lieut.-Governor of Bengal publicly declared that the people of India preferred the Madcap theory of Government to any other theory. This was an untrue statement, a misreading of the signs of the time.

Indian Nation.—The circumstances of the Reception were auspicious, and the results of the meeting cannot fail to be happy. Harmony was the note of the proceedings, and even the London Times has not failed to appreciate the solemnity of the occasion, the propriety of the address presented, and the suitableness of the reply. English critics are apt to lay undue stress on the union of the Hindoos and Mahomedans in presenting the address of congratulation. The fact, however, is that Hindoos and Mahomedans are really united for all political purposes. They have the same ends in view, though they may sometimes differ as to the means. Laws and administration are the same for one community as for the other, and both communities, therefore, have the same rights and the same grievances. Besides the National Congress, we cannot think of any movement with reference to which Mahomedan opinion has been widely different from Hindoo. And even as regards the Congress, the difference is not as great as it is sometimes represented by Anglo-Indian critics to be.

Hope.—The tide of fiddle-faddle is now running high over certain quarters of the journalistic field. In the course of a speech delivered at a reception of which he was the guest, while perhaps the effects of the good cheer were yet upon him, Lord Lansdowne, our coming Viceroy, is reported to have said that British power in India would henceforth be dependent more upon the "goodwill of the people" than upon physical force. Eureka! Eureka! the right man has at last been found to lead this unfortunate country to happiness and its children to the glories of volunteering and voting! A chorus of praise is sounded, and blessings are invoked upon the head of the would-be ruler, for a couple of stale remarks which not a stump-orator or penny-a-liner but is sure to make. Surely we ourselves are the authors of our own disappointments. Is any one of us sure that the "spirit of the age" does not mean two very different things in the minds of the Indian subject and the English ruler respectively? This sort of fiddle-faddling over words and phrases can do us no good, but may sow the seeds of grave disappointment in the end.

THE SANITARY RESOLUTION.

The Saravi and Pataka.—It is admitted on all hands that the sanitary condition of India is extremely deplorable. The subject has always been considered too intricate for solution, and we cannot sufficiently admire the ability and wisdom with which Lord Dufferin has pointed out certain feasible and useful means for ameliorating the sanitary condition of the country. We freely acknowledge that if the resolution recorded by him be carried out, the sanitation of the country will be on a better footing. Lord Dufferin proposes to establish a Sanitary Board in each province. We fear that such a Board would mar the independence of the local municipalities and vastly curtail their power. We therefore object to the establishment of such Boards.

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I.,

PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. Svo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY, 1857-8, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleson's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown Svo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA from 1746 to 1849 inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are not giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

Svo. 20s. Cloth. With a Portrait and 4 Plans.

FOUNDERS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE: CLIVE, WARREN, HASTINGS, and WELLESLEY Vol. I.—LORD CLIVE.

"Unquestionably the best life of Clive that has appeared."—VANITY FAIR.

Crown Svo. 6s.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kossier to Cairo in 1801.

"Colonel Malleson is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

Svo. With Map. 18s.

A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1878.

"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleson's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

Svo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY. From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleson's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

Svo. With Portrait of General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B. 18s.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a Description of some of the most famous instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleson has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skilful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

Svo. Price 8s.

HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleson is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his itinerary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF
INDIA.

There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

THE

AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, & ALL AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons have been purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE. Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defence, Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, on doses generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states, "I HAVE COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances of the efficacy of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 33 & 34, Russell St., W.C.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN OF EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBTLE IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 11th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 9th September; and from Calcutta to the 8th September.

THE Viceroy will arrive at Calcutta on Thursday, the 29th November, instead of on the 1st of December, as originally proposed.

THE Countess of Dufferin has just written an account of the working during the last three years of the fund which bears her name.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla on Wednesday, September 5th, Sir Charles Aitchison moved that the Bill repealing certain enactments relating to contagious diseases be taken into consideration and passed. The Hon. Mr. Elmsie's Bill relating to tolls was also passed. The Hon. Mr. Scoble introduced a measure supplementing the provisions of the Upper Burma Laws Act with respect to the Shan States.

LORD DUFFERIN before leaving India will be entertained at a banquet at Bombay by the Byculla Club on the 16th December.

CAPTAIN DEANE will continue to hold charge of the Peshawar district for the period of Mr. Merk's deputation with the Kabul Mission.

THE question of sending a distinguished military officer with the Kabul Mission is under active consideration. It is possible that in the event of an affirmative decision Brigadier-General R. C. Stewart, C.B., Honorary A.D.C. to the Viceroy, and Commanding the Hyderabad Contingent, may be the officer selected.

THE Amir has patched up some sort of an understanding with the Shinwaris, who have been in revolt some months. In consequence, Mir Gholam Hyder, the Commander-in-Chief, is withdrawing his troops and proceeding himself to Kabul.

THE Governor of Herat reports that the Maimana loyal troops have expelled Ishak's supporter from Andkhoy and Daulatabad. News from Afghan-Turkistan states that Ishak sent one of his leading men with troops to Maimana to endeavour to win over the regiments who deserted him. This force was met at Belchirag, thirty miles east of Maimana, by detachments of the Herati regiments, and after some fighting was dispersed and driven back. Ishak is reported to have six or seven thousand men under arms, his headquarters being in the neighbourhood of Tashkurgan. The Amir has sent reinforcements northwards from Kabul over the Hindu Kush to Khinjan, while the Deputy Commander-in-Chief from Ghanzi has reached Bamian with between 3,000 and 4,000 men. He advances immediately. If Ishak's troops fight the encounter will probably be at Heibak. Abdulla Khan, the Governor of Badakshan, has entrenched himself at Khanabad, where he has 2,000 men with twelve guns. He thus bars Ishak's way eastwards.

THE European and Native Press concur in deprecating the reported mission of Sir J. R. Somers Vane to India to raise subscriptions for the Imperial Institute.

THE consultation with the representatives of the several Punjab Native States, in regard to measures which should be taken to give real and practical effect to the loyal desire expressed by the Chiefs to participate in the frontier defences of the Empire, which was to take place in the last week of August, has now been somewhat postponed.

NAWAB AFSUR JUNG, A.D.C. to the Nizam, will accompany Mr. Durand's mission to Kabul.

LAST year there was a great falling-off in the Orissa pilgrim traffic, the numbers having dropped from 149,660 to 122,093. This is attributed to the alarm caused among the pilgrims by the loss of Sir John Lawrence.

MR. LEWIS MOORE, acting Judge of South Malabar, has granted an order sanctioning the prosecution of Mr. Henry Rhodes Walton Morgan on a charge of perjury in connection with the Morgan-Ross adultery case.

THE HON. H. HAY, son of the Earl of Erroll, and formerly of the Scots Guards, has joined the Burma Police Force as a Superintendent of Police.

THE Black Mountain Expedition, which will number about 8,000 men, will start from the frontier post of Oghi on October 1st.

THE Government of Bombay have issued a resolution dealing with an allegation made by one of the vernacular papers that the late Thakore of Palitana had placed Rs. 20,000 in the carriage of Colonel Barton, late Political Agent in Kathiawar. The editor of the paper having withdrawn the allegation, the Government think no further action need be taken in regard to it. Prince Sumatsingji, a son of the late Thakore, has written emphatically denying the report.

A GOVERNMENT RESOLUTION on gaol administration in India records a manifest improvement in the Bombay, Bengal, and Assam gaols.

THE Agror Expedition is not likely to result in the annexation of fresh territory. It goes solely to punish the Khan Khel Hassanzais and the Akazais, two of the tribes concerned in the murder of Major Battye and Captain Urmston. Its operations will be short, sharp, and thorough; and to that end it goes as lightly equipped as possible, taking no tents beyond the base, and officers sharing one mule between them for their kits. Even so, it is found that 5,236 mules will be required. Columns one, two, and three take supplies for five days with them. Column four carries seven days' supplies. Thirty days' supplies for the former and for the latter will be collected at Oghi and Durband, respectively. The troops below Rawal Pindi will rail there, and thence march to their destination. Other corps will march direct. A brigade at Nowshera will be held in readiness to take the field immediately should its services be required. The Royal Irish Fusiliers take the place of the Royal Irish Regiment at Peshawur, and will also be ready to take the field if required.

THE consequences of appointing a Native Civilian as Postmaster-General of the North-West Provinces have become apparent, in the facts that it has been found needful, in the interests of the Service, to transfer all European officers, except one, who until lately served in the Postal Department of the North-West Provinces, and to remove from the jurisdiction of the Postmaster-General of those provinces a large area of the country abutting on the Native States of Central India, owing to the friction which had arisen between the Postal Department and the Durbars of those States.

It is stated that definite information has been brought in regarding the tribe who made the attack on Lieut. Stewart's party.

VIZIARAMARAZU, ex-Zemindar of Palcondah, in the Northern Circars, died at Vellore on the 3rd inst., at the age of sixty-six. He had been a State prisoner for thirty-six years.

THE Rokharian who recently murdered two of his fellow-passengers in the local mixed train to Delhi, on the B. B. and C. I. Railway, has been sentenced to death, subject to confirmation by the High Court at Allahabad.

A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE is likely to be started at Cawnpore.

NOTES.

THE news by wire that the Tibetans made a clean bolt of it on the first serious advance of the British troops could have been a surprise to nobody but the gentlemen of the Press who write in London on Indian matters which they do not understand, and to Sir George Campbell, who always goes contrary to his own and everybody else's experience, because "it is his nature to." The gallant Tibetans, who "began firing from some twelve cannon, and showed the disposition of their forces" against Major Keith's reconnaissance on Friday last, showed their heels a few days afterwards when Colonel Graham advanced, and demonstrated that he "meant business."

THAT officer telegraphs from the "seat of war," under date of the 26th inst. :—"We pursued the enemy yesterday to Rinchigong and Meeting. Our victory is most complete. The enemy fled to Pari and Bhutan, completely routed. We advanced as far as Chumbi to-day, but found no trace of the enemy. The Raja of Sikkim is supposed to have fled to Tibet." Official information has also reached the India Office that the Tibetan forces are quite "demoralised" (they were never anything else), and that several of their guns had been captured. The British expedition is on its way back to Gnatong, and the health of the troops is excellent.

So far satisfactory, and it is well to learn that the defeat of the mountain warriors was effected without any loss of life upon our side. But the whole British army will regret that the one serious casualty which occurred should have happened to Colonel Bromhead, the gallant defender of Rorke's Drift, who lost his right arm in the "engagement," if the slight show of resistance and subsequent stampede can be dignified by that name. Colonel Bromhead, it is said, has never been out of active service since that memorable night in Zululand when he and his gallant friend, Lieutenant Chard, won fame and the cross of valour for their noble achievement. To have escaped injury then, and now to be grievously wounded in a wretched affair like that of the Jelapla Pass seems the irony of fate, although it is too often the fortune of war.

THAT great ex-Pro-Consul and wise man from the East, Sir George Campbell, recommended an attitude of "masterly inactivity" in our relations towards the Tibetans. This recommendation has been received with laughter in India, and no little protest against its absurdity. A correspondent writing to the Englishman says :—"How any man who has any practical knowledge of the necessities of trade in connection with Tibet can be guilty of the folly of urging timidity as the proper policy of India is one of those problems of partisanship it is not given to every man to solve." But the explanation is that the adviser was Sir George Campbell, who, although he poses as "all mankind's epitome," is still a conundrum to everybody except, perhaps, the electors of Kirkcaldy.

MORE serious fighting than that between the British and the Tibetans appears to have taken place between the Mahomedans and Hindus at Agra, Ghazipur, Coorg, and in the Bijpore district, on the occasion of two of the annual religious demonstrations of the rival creeds falling upon the same day. The troops and volunteers had to be called out, and in the Bijpore district the police, according to Reuter's telegram, received orders to fire on the mob, killing and wounding several. If this be so the fanaticism between the rival religionists is likely to be inflamed rather than cooled down. But the Paramount Power can draw a moral from the circumstance not altogether unsatisfactory.

It is certainly pleasing to find that the London Press is making itself better acquainted with Indian matters. It may be that the present being the "silly season," the acquiring of such knowledge is a necessity with some journalists, who can find no new thing under the sun. But still the pursuit of such knowledge is commendable; and the following, culled from the Echo of Thursday, shows how thoroughly the knowledge sought after has been acquired :—

Is the mission going to Cabul after all? We have not heard much about it lately. It will be remembered that an attempted "mission" was the immediate cause of the last Afghan war. We had only a Native "resident" at Cabul then; so there was some colourable excuse for the undertaking. But why send a "mission" now when we have an English Agent already at Cabul in the shape of Sir Lepel Griffin? Sir Lepel Griffin was the man who, when Cavagnari had been sent to Cabul with a great flourish of trumpets by the Beaconsfield Administration, mildly remarked, "I bet 100 to 1 that in six months he's a dead man." Poor Cavagnari was a "dead man" in two months; and now Sir Lepel is in his shoes. But Abdurrahman is not likely to treat another resident in the same way after the treatment meted out to Ayoub Khan.

THE above is altogether too—too charming to be refined upon by vulgar criticism. Besides, such criticism might prevent the writer in the Echo, whose contribution gets the honour of editorial type, from continuing his interesting researches into contemporary Indian history. That he has not yet exhausted his inquiries may be gathered from the following continuation to the above extract :—

By-the-bye, where is Ayoub Khan now? It will be remembered that he was taken from the Afghan throne and immured in India. It is a curious fact that General Gordon always refused to believe in his guilt, and was, in fact, so strongly convinced of his grievance, that he resigned his private secretaryship to Lord Lytton in consequence of Ayoub's punishment. We live and learn.

MR. EDWIN CHADWICK has written to Mr. W. J. Simmonds, the Secretary of the Public Health Society of Calcutta, a letter which we publish, but it may be well to give some prefatory information for its elucidation contained in a recent Presidential Address at Brighton :—

Let me next exemplify the progress of the power of sanitation as displayed in military services. A quarter of a century ago the death-rate in the Guards was 20 per 1,000. It is now 6½ per 1,000, and, as I could show, it is yet much too high. The death-rate in the Home army was 17 per 1,000. It is now about 8 per 1,000. But Germany beats us with her death-rate of from 5 to 6 in 1,000. In France it is 10 in 1,000; in Austria, 11; in Italy, 11; in Russia, 18, an army death-rate three times heavier than in Germany. In 1858 I read a paper at the Association for the Advancement of Social Science at Liverpool, in which I represented the expediency of applying to the protection of the Indian Army the sanitary science which had saved the second army in the Crimea. I followed up this recommendation persistently, by official paper after paper and by interviews with the authorities, until a Commission was obtained, of which Dr. Sutherland and Mr. Rawlinson, Commissioners of the Crimea, were members. The old Indian Army death-rate was sixty-nine in a thousand. From 1879 to 1884 the death-rate was reduced to twenty per thousand, and now it is about fourteen per thousand. In the six years from 1879 to 1884 the aggregate saving was 16,910 lives; and on the military estimate of £100 per life, the saving in money during the six years—as estimated by our late eminent sanitary ally, Professor de Chaumont, of the Netley, whose loss is greatly to be deplored—was £1,691,000. At the present reduced rate of fourteen per thousand the saving may again be reduced in proportion. Seeing the great saving that has been effected by sanitation, so far as the science has been applied in the military service, eminent sanitarians in India have pressed for its application for the protection of the civil population. It appears that its application is generally obstructed by the ignorance of the local authorities, who have yet to be made aware of the gains derivable from it. I have written to our excellent Viceroy in India, Lord Dufferin, upon this subject, and have received from him assurances that he has left provisions for its promotion by examples.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 23.

News has been received that some of the Naga tribes, living beyond the Dikha River, against whom Mr. McCabe conducted a punitive expedition during the last cold weather, have broken out again and raided into two villages under British political control, killing over 100 friendly Nagas. Another punitive expedition will probably have to be sent in the next cold weather. Meanwhile Mr. McCabe has posted a guard of frontier police to prevent further attacks. The hostile Nagas retired to the jungles when the expedition was sent against them, leaving their villages to be destroyed. Their recent raid is supposed to have been dictated by revenge, the villages attacked having supplied the Deputy-Commissioner's force with transport coolies.

A full bench of the Madras High Court, consisting of five Judges, has affirmed the conviction of and the sentence upon a Native Judge for bribery and corruption, on a second appeal. On the first appeal the conviction was quashed.

The Crawford Commission will meet at Poonah on Oct. 7.

A curious criminal case connected with a prevalent superstition is being heard on appeal by the Calcutta High Court. Four villagers of the Dinagore district were convicted of causing the deaths of two Cabulis and injuring a third. A rumour had got abroad that some children were to be sacrificed in connection with the building of a railway bridge over the Mahanuddi River. When the three Cabulis appeared to trade with the villagers they were denounced as kidnappers and mobbed. Two were killed outright, their bodies being flung into the river, while the third, after being severely handled, escaped by hiding himself. Four of the rioters were convicted by the Sessions Judge of Dinagore and sentenced to 2½ years' imprisonment each.

A serious disturbance in connection with Mohurram took place lately at Virajendrapet, in Coorg. The local volunteers were called out and quelled the riot.

The Indian Daily News publishes a strong article, pointing out the possible mischievous consequences of the recent Hindoo agitation for suppressing the slaughter of cows.

Sir Madhava Rao has called the attention of Brahmins to their gradual decadence, and advises them to confine themselves to the learned professions and to support the British Government, preferring to be peaceful, law-abiding citizens, rather than perfervid, restless agitators.

The Indian Government offers to provide 1,000 rupees for the best text-book on domestic economy and sanitary science. At the last meeting of the Legislative Council, Mr. Scoble introduced a Bill supplementing certain provisions of the Bombay and Calcutta Municipal Acts, which recently received the assent of the Viceroy. The Bill amending the code of civil procedure and the Presidency Small Cause Courts Bill were passed.

The 2nd Bombay Grenadiers (the Prince of Wales's Own) celebrated their regimental centenary by a grand ball on Tuesday evening, at which Lord and Lady Reay and all the society of Poonah were present. A special feature of the evening was the presence of two men on the dais arrayed in the uniform of 1788. In the course of the evening a telegram was despatched to the Prince of Wales, as colonel of the regiment, tendering him the best wishes of the corps.

On the same day the Poonah Fine Arts Exhibition was opened by the Governor, in the presence of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, 400 paintings being shown.

The Government, with a view to increasing the efficiency of the Hyderabad contingent, has ordered that the establishment of British officers for each regiment shall be increased from four to six. The system of linked batteries and regiments has been adopted. The men are liable to be transferred from one battalion or battery to another in case of war. When warned for service, a regiment of infantry will make up its service strength by transfers from the linked battalions of the active and garrison reserve.

The high level railway through the Bolan Pass has been completed, and Quetta is now connected with the Indus Valley system by two routes, both broad gauge.

In addition to the cavalry camp of exercise near Delhi, and the divisional manoeuvres at Meerut, there will be siege operations on an extensive scale during the cold weather in the neighbourhood of Roorkee, five garrison batteries being engaged.

General McQueen has left Simla to take command of the Black Mountain Expedition. It has been definitely decided to trust to his special experience on the Hazara frontier, and to grant him a free hand both in carrying out the details of the expedition and in settling the permanent basis for the conditions of peace when the immediate punitive object of the expedition shall have been accomplished. A telegraph wire has been laid down from Abbottabad for some distance along the Oghe road. The force has been equipped with machine guns.

SIKKIM AND THE THIBETANS.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

SIMLA, SEPT. 25.

Colonel Graham has attacked the Thibetans in the Jelapla Pass, and completely defeated them, capturing their camp.

The Thibetans lost 400 killed and wounded.

On the British side Colonel Bromhead lost his right arm, and nine Sepoys were wounded.

Colonel Graham is now advancing upon Rinchigong, in the Chumbi Valley, which is in Thibetan territory.

RESERVE OF OFFICERS IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

One of the questions which has seriously exercised the minds of the military authorities in India of late years has been that relating to the supply of officers in case of a great war. There is no Reserve List to fall back upon in this country and no assistance need be looked for from England, where every available officer would be needed once a campaign had been embarked upon. So long as merely small works have to be undertaken the position is not likely to become serious, but even in the Afghan war civilians had to be employed on the line of communications in connection with transport work. It is in the non-combatant branches of the service that the strain would probably be most severely felt, for officers prefer taking their chances of distinction or extinction in the fighting-line to undertaking the drudgery inseparable from duty in the Commissariat, Transport, and Auxiliary departments. Yet, unless the work in these departments be well done and a full complement of men be always provided for it, the army in the field will be sorely crippled. There is also to be considered the difficulty that would be felt in replacing British officers of Native regiments, a percentage of whom would in the ordinary course of a campaign be killed, wounded, or put hors de combat by disease. Our sepoy require to be led by men who know their language and are familiar with their customs and peculiarities, for the fighting strength of the Native Army is in exact ratio with the confidence felt in their officers by the rank and file. Whence, then, are officers to be obtained when the stress of war comes? This is the question which the Government of India have taken measures to answer, and a Committee of four officers is now sitting at Army Head Quarters to consider the possibility of forming a Reserve List in India. The suggestion has been made that this list should include the names of a certain number of officers who could be drawn from civil employ; of Volunteers, who have shown qualifications which would make them worthy to be attached to the regular army; of young officers in the Public Works Department or Police; and of picked non-commissioned officers in British regiments, who may deserve Commissions. Certain departments, too, in which military officers are generally employed, would contribute their quota. The Reserve List could thus be made a fairly long one, and there would be ample work for all the officers upon it. Keen Volunteer and Police officers who know their drill thoroughly, and can speak the vernacular languages fluently, would soon fall into their places in Native regiments; Civil Engineers could do much useful work and relieve the strain always felt by their military brethren; while along the line of communication and at the various bases, where the labour in connection with transport and supplies is always enormous, the officers drawn from the non-commissioned ranks would give sorely-needed assistance. It may take some little time to work out a practical scheme, but there are certainly the materials at hand for forming such a Reserve as we have sketched, and it would be extremely unwise not to make the best of them.

SANITARY REFORM IN INDIA.

(Times of India.)

The following comment by the Bombay Sanitary Commissioner on the disappointing fact that there has been a higher rate of mortality from cholera during recent years, and that no improvement has followed the measures which up to this time have been taken to arrest the ravages of the disease, should be taken to heart:—"This might have been predicted, for no 'preventive' measures have up to the present time ever been taken to improve the conditions which we know are favourable to the development of the disease, and which, it is believed, are foremost among exciting causes. Whenever an outbreak of cholera actually takes place, spasmodic efforts are made to control it; but only 'palliative' measures are then possible, and, in fact, nothing is done beyond giving a little medicine to a comparatively small number of the sufferers, and some (at that time injudicious) disturbance of filth takes place in the villages under the idea that something must be done; but nothing checks the disease until it gradually dies out of itself. I am afraid Government cannot divest itself of grave responsibility in this matter; because, although the subject of prevention of cholera has during these years been repeatedly pressed on its notice, it has not ordered any effective measures to be taken with regard to the sanitation of villages, such as in its Resolution dated 29th March, 1886, it has declared to be absolutely necessary and practicable at all times." Further remarking on the fact that in the city of Bombay the mortality from cholera has shown a steady and persistent fall till now the disease has here ceased to be the formidable one it used to be, the Sanitary Commissioner points out that until cleanliness is introduced into every village throughout India, it is perfectly hopeless to expect that epidemics of this preventible disease will not arise. He also urges the pressing necessity for the reorganisation of the Sanitary Department by the appointment of health officers (native qualified medical men) for every zilla, who would be responsible for the supervision of vaccination, dispensaries, the cleansing establishments of villages, and the registration of births and deaths, and would furnish timely reports as to the movement of disease. Counting the cost of this reform, Dr. Hewlett points out the immense annual loss to the country resulting from preventible disease—loss to producers through lessened consumption of goods, loss to employers of labour through a diminished supply of able-bodied men and women, and loss to Government in the shape of lessened revenue. However, we are here getting from hard facts to unproved theory. The late Sanitary Commissioner professes that if his scheme of sanitary reorganisation were carried out, the present death-rate in India could be reduced by quite one-half. The hard practical work of sanitary reform in India is a problem incomparably more vast, more complex, and more difficult of solution than any of the political questions that are so persistently and clamorously called attention to by a certain class of Native agitators.

FAILURE OF THE STOCK NOTES.

(Pioneer.)

The Government hardly needed to take up an apologetic position in announcing their decision to put an end to the stock note system. No doubt it is true, as urged in the Resolution, that the expense of the scheme was out of all proportion to its results; that the separate system of accounts and returns which it involved was a trouble by no means warranted by the amount dealt with. But the public would have cheerfully seen the stock notes redeemed without asking for an explanation. It was, however, a distinct reproach to the Government that the holders of its paper, offered to them so plausibly by a Finance Minister in his Budget Statement, should be heavy losers by their confidence, and everyone must be glad that the reproach has been done away with. It is curious to remember after the event that time was when the Finance Minister of the day explained that he could not tell what amount would require to be raised by loan for productive works until it was seen what sum would be forthcoming in the way of investments in the stock notes. In the beginning Sir Evelyn Baring, though of course, bound as a financier to speak guardedly, contemplated nothing less than the extinction of the annual borrowing in England through the agency of his favourite scheme. Instead of increasing home charges, we were to raise the money in India, and foster loyalty and encourage thrift into the bargain. But like so many unions of the commercial with the philanthropic, the scheme did not effect all that was expected of it. Certain Native syndicates—having received strong hints of what was expected of them—did indeed take up a small number to start with, but in redistributing them again they never succeeded. The general public from the first would have none of them. In less than a year they were at a heavy discount, and it was obvious that the scheme was a dead failure. So long as Sir Evelyn Baring remained in the Government periodical Resolutions appeared on the subject, making small changes in the condition of holding the notes with a forlorn hope of making them more popular; but the decline in their credit had gone too far to be arrested. The imagined crores are represented at last by sixteen paltry lakhs; and the thrifty Indian middle class, if it is to be reached, must be reached in some other way. The plan was a fair enough one, aiming to attract the savings of the classes whose scale investment would be above the Savings Banks on the one hand and below Government Securities on the other. But we should imagine that those with more knowledge of the country than Sir Evelyn Baring had at that time would have been able to tell him at once that this class, if it can be said to exist at all, occupies, comparatively to the population, a very different importance in India to what it does in European countries.

STATION LIBRARIES.

(Pioneer.)

The number of persons in this country who make at least some pretence to literary culture is so great that it excites a feeling of wonder that the means they allow themselves for gratifying the taste are, as a rule, so miserably inadequate. The fall in exchange has so largely increased the cost of books that few private persons can afford to keep up a tolerable collection, and in these days of constant transfers the possession of even a moderate sized library involves considerable expense in the way of carriage. So most of us are compelled to fall back on the resources of the ordinary station library. In big cantonments and hill sanatoria, where there is a large number of subscribers, these institutions expend a very considerable annual income, and even in the smaller civil stations there are few places where does not exist what is known as a "book and newspaper club." The Anglo-Indian is fairly liberal in subscribing to institutions of this kind. But the library too often starts under one special disadvantage. Not unfrequently it is arranged that one general subscription covers all the public amusements, and in the allocation of funds the library suffers at the expense of tennis balls or a new cloth for the billiard-table. But even in the expenditure of this scanty income there are seldom signs of intelligence or good management. Anyone who is driven to explore the shelves of one of these institutions knows beforehand what he will find. There is not a second-hand bookstall in all London which would not be a more profitable search. There are, perhaps, a few volumes of travel and biography, while the rest of the stock is made up of ancient, dilapidated three-volume novels. Even in the way of novels very little selection has been exercised. It is rare to find a set of the masterpieces of fiction, the collections even of Dickens or Thackeray. The majority of the fiction consists of the most trashy of latter-day productions, which seem to have been chosen at random out of the second-hand rubbish of a circulating library which no one else would purchase. No one, of course, can blame an Anglo-Indian library for being to a large extent devoted to works of ephemeral interest. But one looks in vain for a few books of reference which should certainly be there—a peerage, an encyclopædia, and a few good general and local maps. Another instance of the absence of principle on which these libraries are managed is the want of special books of interest to people in this country. If you inquire for some account of the local incidents of the Mutiny or other Indian campaigns, for a book on sport, natural history, archæology numismatics, folklore and the like, you are almost certain to be disappointed. With a little ordinary care, and under more competent management, our Anglo-Indian libraries, instead of being a standing reproach to every one connected with them, might become a leading factor in the spread of general culture and refinement, an object which as at present organised they distinctly fail to promote.

"AN UNPLEASANT LITTLE AFFAIR."

(Pioneer.)

There exist at Amraoti all the elements of a remarkably unpleasant little affair, to be developed—or, better still to be suppressed—later on. Two doctors, a telegram, a whist account, a lady, and a certain amount of "envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness" help to make up the difficulty, which, in brief, is something after this fashion. About ten years ago, Dr. A. played a practical joke on Dr. B., his junior, by sending the latter a telegram, either in Dr. B.'s name or the name of some other person. The seasons passed, but the memory of the telegram remained and caused ill-blood between the two doctors. Then—observe the dignity of the surroundings—the whist-book of the Amraoti Club was lost, and it occurred to Dr. B. that Dr. A., the sender of that ten year-old telegram, had taken it. This notion he must have confided to Mrs. B., who, so the story runs, meeting Dr. A. at some public gathering, told him that he had taken the whist-book. Dr. A. forthwith wrote to the husband demanding a withdrawal of, and an apology for, Mrs. B.'s remarks. It will be readily understood that by this time all Amraoti was keenly interested in the fray, which was a hot-weather godsend. The reply of Dr. B. was direct and particular. He informed Dr. A. that not only was he a thief but a felon, inasmuch as he had forged another man's name to a telegram years ago. At this point the blaze began to spread. The Amraoti Club, which we trust will in future keep its whist-books under lock and key, was appealed to by Dr. A., and sixteen gentlemen of the foundation sat upon the matter. Fourteen of them decided that the charge was groundless; the remainder, Dr. B. and a Greek gentleman, formed the minority. Our readers must next imagine the Amraoti Club imploring Dr. B. to withdraw his charges, and Dr. B. refusing. Obviously, after this the only thing that remained was to take all the law courts into confidence. The affair of the whist-book was officially "sent up," first to the Deputy Commissioner of Amraoti, next to the Judicial Commissioner himself. The collective wisdom of the three decided that in the interests of the service it was unadvisable that the two doctors should remain in the same station; which was a pity, as their girdings and jestings would have furnished Amraoti with an abiding amusement. But the transfer of the junior, Dr. B., was not so easy as it looked, for Dr. A. held medical authority over the whole of the Berars, and were Dr. B. to remain under his orders the stability of the Empire might be seriously endangered. So the sages of Amraoti called upon that ever-attentive Mrs. Gamp, the Government of India, to help them. Instead of saying "rubbidge!" the Government called for the papers, and was so impressed with the seriousness of the charges—the stealing of the whist-book, to wit—brought by a subordinate officer against his superior, that it ordered Dr. B. to revert to military employment under the Madras Government, to which he naturally belongs—and sent all the papers after him. The last act of the farce was the departure of Dr. B. from Amraoti for Madras amid the condolences of Amraoti, which, we believe, has despatched a memorial to the Viceroy regarding the transfer. Now it seems to us that the whole business is as pitifully small as could well be imagined, and should be blown into the Ewigkeit in a gale of contemptuous laughter. The Amraoti Club in future should be made to chain their whist-book to the wall of the ante-room; Dr. A. and Dr. B. each paying half the cost of the chain and—putting it up together with their own hands. If the absurdity of the situation did not convince them of the folly of dragging three courts, the whole of a station, fourteen members of a committee, one Presidential and one Supreme Government into their little differences, they should be sent on duty to Burma, where they would have something to do. In the meantime they may be pleased to read how their escapades strike the outside world.

SANITARY REFORM.

(Pioneer.)

According to the Government of India all difficulties in the way of sanitary reform fall into three classes. These are ignorance and prejudices of the masses; the want of efficient executive agency; and the want of funds. This enumeration is defective in two respects. It takes no account of the poverty or slender means of the people, leading them to resort to shifts and habits which a higher standard of living naturally would proscribe; and it attributes to ignorance and prejudices many practices which are really dictated by economical and industrial considerations. "The most urgent sanitary improvement for Indian villages," say the Sanitary Hints appended to the Resolution, "is one that need cost nothing. It is simple cleanliness, in which every inhabitant should lend his assistance." We entirely deny the accuracy of this statement. No direct expenditure of money may be involved in the stacking of manure-heaps on common land outside a village or installing cattle beyond the village site; but every villager will say that his manure would become less valuable and his cattle would be stolen were he to comply with these sanitary precepts. How is he to get at his fuel for daily consumption if his opla stack is to be driven out of the village, and who is to tend and watch the cattle if they are to be expelled from his own yard? Would any English farmer submit to restrictions of this kind? The Sanitary Hints are excellent in their way, but the authors fail to recognise that their counsels of perfection must often yield to practical necessities. They might as well declaim against the foolishness of working in rice-swamps during heavy rain, or of failing to put on dry clothes when home is reached, or of sitting in damp rooms. How is the peasant with no clothing to speak of and only one blanket to study the laws of health? A damp and leaky house is more likely to generate malarial fevers than a contagious cattle-shed or a well-cured fuel-stack; and if our sanitary reformers have seriously the health of the people at heart, they had better begin by rebuilding nine-tenths of the millions of peasants' huts in these provinces, and presenting the occupants with a sufficient store of warm clothing. The complete ignoring of the actual conditions of agricultural life is, then, the first defect in the diagnosis of the Government of India. Prejudices and "the immobility of custom" can be combated by education, but the hard realities of life are not so removable. Want of efficient executive agency, and want of funds, are the two other difficulties specified in the Resolution. Towards their removal the appointment of a Sanitary Commission will contribute little, nor does the Government of India offer much help in its various recommendations. An active sanitation policy will require to be wholly supported from provincials' revenues, and in popular belief the Provincial Government is by no means sufficiently well off to devote much money to this object. The appointment of a Commission will not be difficult, but the Commissioners would not improbably find themselves in the position of men asked to make bricks without straw.

THE INDIAN FLEET.

It is time that attention should be called, thinks the Civil and Military Gazette, to the condition of the East Indian squadron—the fleet sent by the first Naval Power in the world to protect the largest dependency in the world. And we may premise that it is absurd, in our opinion, to argue, as some apologists do, that India is too remote for attack by a European force, and that, consequently, all that is required from the fleet is to keep down piracy and hunt slavers. The pirates are practically non-existent; and the East Indian squadron, though it does occasionally capture a slaver, does not suppress slavery, for the simple reason that the profits of that trade are so enormous that any risks will be run; and not twice the number of vessels could keep up the blockade of the East Coast of Africa sufficiently strictly to effect the purpose aimed at with any show of thoroughness. The fleet in Indian waters is, moreover, not nearly so competent to carry out the slave trade operations as it would be if properly constituted, for its ships are very slow, and some of the slavers can out sail them.

The truth is, that the East Indian squadron consists, with one exception, of old, useless worn-out tubs. The East Indian squadron, though manned by fine crews and most ably commanded and administered, is, nevertheless, as far as everything except the personnel is concerned, a standing blot on our administration, and a disgrace to both the Indian and the Home Governments. These may seem strong words, but they are not unnecessarily strong, for the facts are, undoubtedly, terrible. India is in a dangerous condition so long as her present squadron is all her maritime defence.

We have before now expressed an opinion that the chances of an attack by a fairly powerful squadron on some of our Indian ports are considerable if war were declared under certain conditions; and we have nothing except the turret ships in Bombay Harbour that could stand up against the most ordinary cruiser. The two turret ships—the Abyssinia and the Magdala—are armoured vessels of 2,900 and 3,340 tons displacement, respectively, having from six to nine inches of armour on the sides and bulkhead, and ten inches on the turrets. They are armed with four 10-inch muzzle-loaders each, but have no crews. They do not in any way belong to the fleet, and could not come under the Admiral's orders except for action in or near Bombay Harbour itself. They are to have their present guns replaced by breechloaders, but until they have a greater thickness of armour they will only be able to fight small cruisers, because even the 6-inch breech-loader can pierce eight inches of armour at point-blank range.

If India is to have a squadron at all, let it be a good one, adds the paper from which we quote. It is necessary, in considering the kind of vessel best suited to be the flagship (or, at any rate, the leading war-ship) of the East Indian squadron, to view the design from two points—viz., as to its suitability for war, and also as a home for the sailors. The first requires a well-armoured hull to resist the enemy's shot, and large and powerful guns; while the latter requires light sleeping and living cabins for both officers and crew—as the greater portion of the time is spent in peaceful cruising in tropical waters, where it is necessary to keep as cool as possible. It would appear at first sight as if the combination were an impossibility; but there is one type that, so to speak, fills the bill to perfection, and that is a modified form of the central battery ship.

But whatever types are finally selected, one thing is certain—viz., that India requires a squadron of fighting ships to replace her present burlesque of a fleet, the ships composing which are a disgrace to the nation and an insult to the gallant officers who have to serve in them.

BENGAL.

(Sept. 8.)

MR. PAUL, the Political Officer with the Sikkim Force, who has been troubled lately with his eyes, is much better.

THE MAHOMEDANS AND HINDUS OF PUBNA.—On the late visit of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to Pubna the Mahomedan ratepayers presented a memorial to His Honour setting forth the grievances which they suffered at the hands of the Municipality, which is composed almost entirely of Hindus. They complained that, though the majority of ratepayers were Mahomedans, the roads and footpaths of the town in which they dwelt were entirely neglected, while those leading to the houses of the rich Hindus were kept in good order. They also complain that their burial-ground and the roads leading thereto were often flooded to the depth of two or three feet, which made it almost impossible to bury their dead, and though these matters had often been brought to the notice of the Municipality no attention had been paid to their complaints. They therefore appealed to His Honour to grant them a fair share of representation in the Municipality, so that their wants might not in future be neglected.

MADRAS.

(Sept. 9.)

AN EXAMINATION SCANDAL.—The Madras Mail understands that the University of Madras has instituted proceedings against a student in Bellary, who is alleged to have been guilty of malpractices at the recent Matriculation Examination held at that station. The paper says:—"The student in question submitted his application in the usual form for admission to the examination, naming Bellary as the station at which he wished to be examined. It is alleged that he got a passed candidate to represent him at the examination, and this person is said to have answered the question papers, writing the name of the proper candidate at the top of the answer papers. The Syndicate has already held an inquiry into the case, and has punished the student by debarring him from appearing for any University examination for a number of years. However, as there were a large number of cases detected at the recent examinations in which students were found guilty of malpractices, the Syndicate of the University deemed it advisable that an example should be made of some of the offenders. A complaint was duly lodged in the District Magistrate's Court, and the student was charged with cheating. The District Magistrate held a preliminary inquiry, and, being of opinion that a prima facie case had been made out, committed the accused for trial at the next Criminal Sessions of the Bellary Court. The trial commenced on the 3rd, before the Sessions Judge of Bellary."

BOMBAY.

(Sept. 11.)

THE mail which leaves Bombay to-day is the last of the Tuesday's mails for the present season. The next steamer leaves on Friday, the 21st September.

CAPTAIN A. GILMORE, 2nd Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment, has been appointed adjutant of the Southern Mahratta Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps, vice Captain Nicholson, resigned.

MR. A. H. UNWIN will do duty as Judge and Sessions Judge of Hyderabad until further orders. MR. G. McCorkell acts as Judge and Sessions Judge of Canara till further orders.

A REPORT by the Public Works Department shows that during 1887-88 the total irrigated area in the Bombay Presidency was 44,303 acres, and that the water rate assessments amounted to Rs. 2,10,424. This was an increase over the previous year of 3,400 acres and Rs. 31,599 respectively.

DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL R. A. CHAPPLE, of the Medical Staff, died at the European General Hospital at 1 A.M. on the 3rd inst. The funeral left the European General Hospital at 4 P.M., arriving at Sewree at 5.30 P.M. The 4th Regiment Bombay Infantry (Rifles) supplied the firing party, and the band of the regiment also attended.

THE summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week is as follows:—Rain in parts of Kurrachee; beneficial to crops and grass. But river still low in Sind, and water-supply deficient in one taluka of Upper Sind Frontier. Crop prospects unfavourable in Shikarpur. No rain during week in Kaira, Broach, Kattywar, Baroda, and Ahmednugger. Fall in other districts of Presidency proper very slight. Rain most urgently required throughout Khandesh, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, and Bijapur, in the greater part of Nasik, four talukas of Poona and Satara, north-east talukas of Belgaum, and eastern talukas of Dharwar, where crops are withering. Total fall also insufficient, especially for rice, in parts of Gujerat, Kattywar, and Baroda, though the crops are still promising. Standing crops damaged by crabs in one taluka of Kurrachee and by insects in part of Kolaba. Sowing of cotton progressing in Dharwar and of oil-seeds in parts of Kattywar. Fodder scarce in parts of Khandesh, Nasik, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, Belgaum, Canara, Kattywar, and Baroda. Agricultural stock in good condition, except in parts of Nasik, Poona, Belgaum, and Hyderabad. Scarcity of drinking-water in Sholapur. Prices rising in Ahmednugger and Sholapur.

THE Pioneer writes:—Not often does a prisoner return to society complaining that he has been too leniently dealt with. The ex-convict who favours the Times of India with his experiences while in the Madras Penitentiary is of this frame of mind; and from his account, with good reason, he was sentenced to "six months' rigorous," and it would seem that his sentence was a just one. Hence he entered Her Majesty's Penitentiary (so polite is he that he never once alludes to it as a jail) expecting to be punished. Instead of which they fed him sumptuously three times a day—a pint of coffee and twelve ounces of good brown bread in the morning; rice, potatoes, meat, dhall; and vegetables for dinner; gruel, bread, and tea for supper. The allowance of meat—four and a-half and seven ounces on alternate days—seems meagre, but the total amount of solid food, at the lowest computation, is nearly two pounds. The work was light. The ex-convict calls it "nothing to speak of," or only sufficient to give one a "roaring appetite," which the prison dietary amply satisfied. It consisted in pounding into coir the fibrous covers of from forty to twenty cocoanuts per diem. At first this employ blistered the hands and made the arms ache, insomuch that the ex-convict was forced to own his weariness in the presence of derisive fellow-prisoners, whom, he says pathetically, he could have "knocked down in a stand-up fight." After two or three days his hands hardened, and he, in common with the others, could afford to laugh at his daily stint of coir. Work began at 7.30, and ended at twelve, though it was "supposed" to go on through the afternoon.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Sept. 9.)

A CONFERENCE of the Kayastha community has been convened at Allahabad for the 16th and 17th instant. The objects of the Conference are defined to be to effect the moral and intellectual advancement of the community; to put a stop to all injurious customs; to work for the good of the community at large; to bring about union and co-operation among the members of the community. The Conference will not deal with religious and political matters.

A SERIOUS accident happened at Srinagar on the 1st September. Captain William Foot, 7-1 R.A., came from Thobba, near Murree, to take part in some races, and whilst riding his own horse, an Arab, in a steeplechase, was thrown at the fourth jump—a low mud wall. The horse struck the wall, and Captain Foot fell on his head, the horse falling on him. He was taken up insensible and carried to the lodge at the Residency. On the same horse Captain Foot had previously won a silver cup given by the Governor of Kashmir.

A CHAMAR prisoner in the Delhi Lock-up, who is under trial for murder, has resolved to commit suicide by starvation rather than submit to the degrading rope of the hangman. The officer in charge of the lock-up reports that the Chamar has partaken of no food or drink since the 27th August, and that he seems to be determined to starve himself to death. The Civil Surgeon has therefore been called in to see what can be done. As there would appear to be no other way of dealing with a criminal of this sort, and it would never do to allow him to evade the law, the Civil Surgeon will administer food by force if all other attempts to do so fail.

An influential meeting of the Anjuman-i-Islamia was held last week at Lahore to support the Indian Patriotic Association in opposition to the National Congress. The meeting was presided over by Nawab Abdul Majid-Khan, C.S.I., and was numerously attended by the gentry and nobility of Lahore. Two resolutions were passed:—(1) That the Anjuman-i-Islamia, as a united body, should become a member of the Indian Patriotic Association. (2) That the aims of the National Congress being diametrically opposed to those of the Anjuman-i-Islamia, any one favouring the cause of the Congress will be considered no longer fit to continue as a member of the aforesaid Anjuman. A correspondent says that the meeting represented the whole body of the Mahomedans of the Punjab.

ON Monday, Aug. 20, at Mahomed Bagh, Lucknow, teams of twelve men from the 17th Lancers and the Leicestershire Regiment competed in a tug-of-war. This match was the outcome of a similar event in the Lancer sports some six weeks ago, when, after a pull of 1 hour and 22 minutes (supposed to be the longest on record), the Leicesters beat the Lancers—the Leicesters pulling with a scratch team. This time, however, both teams had been well trained, and the pull resulted in an easy victory for the Leicestershire representatives after a fourteen minutes' struggle.

YET another step forward has been taken in connection with the abolition of the Presidency army system. The Secretary of State has asked the Government of India to submit a detailed scheme, showing exactly how they would propose carrying out their suggestions made some time ago. This is now being worked out, and with the Commander-in-Chief both at Madras and at Bombay, and those two local Governments cordially agreeing that their armies will benefit by the change, the reorganisation of the army in India may be an accomplished fact by next year. The full and complete powers which it is proposed to give each Lieut.-General commanding an army, whether in the Punjab, Bengal, Bombay, or Madras, will be accepted as an earnest of the intention of Government to increase rather than diminish the responsibility of those directly controlling the local forces.

NATIVE PRESS.

LAW AND JUSTICE IN MADRAS AND HYDERABAD.

The Hazar Dashtan or "Bird of a Thousand Songs," of Hyderabad (published in Hindustani) has an article of which the following is a translation:—

"With reference to an order of the Madras Government directing the Registrar of the High Court to register in future the sitting hours of the Judges the Chief Justice has raised an objection, and observed that the Judges are not school boys whose attendance needs registration. The work of the Chief Justice and Justices is unimpeachable, inasmuch as a great strain is generally put upon the brains of high English officials, who ought not, therefore, to be interrogated as to their attendance. But some of the officials of this place attend at nine in the morning, some between eleven and twelve, and some at two, and some at three. Whatever business is nominally done during this interval is considered sufficient to count towards their pay. Some authorities regard the dispensation of justice in general, and to the poor in particular, as a matter of play. Responsibility is a different task. It is necessary that rulers besides possessing qualifications should have experience, mercy, and fear of God. In Hyderabad such men can scarcely be found. There are officials, indeed, who deliver bad judgments under the influence of liquor. They neither fear God nor those in authority over them; nor have they any regard for the pitiful condition of the subjects of the State."

THE SPLIT IN THE CAMP.

Bengalee.—Under the auspices of Mr. Ameer Ali and others, this comparatively useless institution might be converted into a great and lasting instrument of good. And is no good to be derived, indeed, from the Congress bringing Hindoos and Mahomedans together once a-year from all parts of the Empire? Will not these gatherings contribute at least to the establishment of those friendly feelings which are so essential for the welfare of the two communities and for purposes of good government alike? Is there anything which the Government deprecates so much—anything which is a matter of such genuine concern to Hindoos and Mahomedans alike—as those unhappy emeutes between Hindoos and Mahomedans which have frequently marred the harmony of our relations? Is it not obvious that the National Congress furnishes a mighty instrument which enables the national leaders to concert measures on a large scale to prevent these unhappy outbreaks of religious fanaticism?

THE KIRKWOOD CASE.

The Suravi and Pataka.—We heartily thank the Lieutenant-Governor for the action taken by him in the Kirkwood case. It requires not a small amount of courage to punish a big civilian in the position of Mr. Kirkwood, but the Lieutenant-Governor has shown the courage of his convictions and thus earned the blessings of the entire population of Bengal. Mr. Kirkwood has got his deserts; but what of that poor girl, Budhia, who has been excommunicated. The judge, the police, and the medical officer, everyone concerned in her illegal examination, should be made to make her ample reparation. We hope the Government will arrange for some provision being made for her.

The Sanjivani.—Instead of dismissing Mr. Kirkwood from the Civil Service, the Government has accepted the resignation tendered by him of his appointment. No one is glad to find him thus degraded. It is to be regretted that men like Mr. Kirkwood should remain in the Civil Service and abuse the cause of justice. We feel ourselves safe, now that he has been compelled to resign.

THE BURDWAN ADOPTION SUIT.

The Samaya.—Now that the Dowager Maharanee of Burdwan has filed a suit to set aside the adoption of the son of Lalla Bun Behar! and remove him from the Burdwan guddee, it does not seem expedient that the Lalla should be allowed to continue in his appointment as manager of the raj. He is the father of the present Maharaja as well as the manager of the raj, and it is, therefore, not possible but that the servants of the raj will go over to his side. Moreover, the documents of the family are in the custody of the Lalla. We hear that Mr. Reilly, the joint manager, is going on leave, and thus left alone, the Lalla will have no difficulty in carrying out whatever he would like to do. Under these circumstances we earnestly entreat the Lieut.-Governor to remove the Lalla from the managership without delay.

THE CRAWFORD CASE.

The Nababivakar-Sadharani.—Either the Government has been unable, or it does not like to implicate Mr. Crawford in a criminal offence. The Government has withdrawn the prosecution on the ground that it has not been able to collect sufficient evidence against him. If such be the fact why was a criminal charge at all laid against him? Another mystery is that the case against Hunmunt Rao, who is accused of abetting Mr. Crawford, has not been withdrawn!

THE LUCKNOW DINNER.

The annual dinner, in commemoration of the entry into the Residency of Lucknow of the force under Generals Havelock and Outram, on Sept. 25, 1857, was held at the Hôtel Métropole, on Tuesday evening. Lord Napier of Magdala, G. C.B., G.C.S.I., occupied the chair, and there were present also General Sir William Olpherts, V.C., K.C.B., Lieutenant-General Dodgson, C.B., Lieutenant-General M'Leod Innes, V.C., Major-General Digby Barker, Major-General Limond, C.B., Major-General M'Bean, C.B., Major-General Maitland, C.B., Major-General Oldfield, Major-General G. Stewart, C.B., Surgeon-General J. J. Clarke, M.D., Colonel Chamier, Colonel Montagu Hall, Colonel Morland, Deputy-Inspector, General Gee, V.C., C.B., Deputy-Inspector Swettenham, Deputy-Surgeon-General Partridge, F.R.C.S., Lieutenant-Colonel Battine, Lieutenant-Colonel Boileau, Lieutenant-Colonel Blake, Lieutenant-Colonel Skrine, Lieutenant-Colonel Wade, Major-Beaumont, Captain Keir, Captain Robertson, and Mr. H. D. Willock.

After dinner Lord Napier of Magdala briefly proposed the healths of the Queen and Empress of India, and of the Prince and Princess of Wales, which were enthusiastically responded to. The noble and gallant Chairman then proposed "The Memory of our Departed Comrades," and in so doing remarked upon the great pleasure and gratification which all those present felt in meeting together to commemorate the day, which was one of sacred memory to all who took part in the relief of Lucknow. They might honestly bear in mind that on that day they done their duty, and had been instrumental in saving the lives of the garrison of Lucknow. The day was sacred in recalling to memory the great leaders who had conducted the relieving force in performing their duty, and had enabled them to accomplish the object for which every one present was prepared to lay down his life. Nothing he could say could add to the fame of the noble commanders Outram and Havelock. History had recorded this. Nor should they forget the gallant soldiers who defended the garrison—Ingils, Wilson, and others too many to enumerate. The deeds of these brave fellows they might still recall for the benefit and example of those who came after. The name of Henry Lawrence, too, by whose means the garrison was provided with the wherewithal to hold out until the relieving force reached them was immortal. They should also bear in mind many who heroically met a soldier's death in the garrison, who were not combatants—among them many women and children. And yet the commemoration should not be mournful, but an occasion of rejoicing, that so many were enabled then to do their duty to their Queen and their country, and also that so many still remained to remember what they bore when, shoulder to shoulder and hand to hand, they advanced to save the beleaguered garrison.

The toast was responded to in solemn silence.

General Sir William Olpherts, V.C., K.C.B., then proposed "Our living though absent comrades."

General Dodgson proposed "The Original Garrison," and other speakers followed.

The following are the particulars in brief of the ten claims against the late Burmese Government which the Government of India have just recently settled:—

STRONG DRINK IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Mr. Samuel Smith has written from Dunkeld protesting against the policy of Government in continuing the frightful evils caused by the out-still system.

There are two policies in India regarding the sale of drink:—

1st. The English system called Suddur Distillery, under which the highest tax possible is levied on every gallon of strong waters distilled. But the levy of this tax gives a great deal of trouble to English officials, and sometimes causes a diminution of revenue to Government, for coolies employed on tea gardens cannot afford to get drunk very often.

2nd. The out-still system. The District officer every year puts up to auction the monopoly of selling spirits with the understanding that they may be sold as cheap, and as bad, as the monopolist likes—the smell is sometimes horrible. As soon as the District Officer, the great Burra Sahib, or his assistant, has finished the auction, their troubles are at an end. The monopolist pays plenty of rupees for the privilege of making the poor drunk with evil spirits.

The tea planters are now kicking up a row which must disturb the sleep of the India Office officials. Tea planters have trouble enough in collecting coolies, and they are thoroughly disgusted when English gentlemen, District Officers, support speculators who destroy both the minds and bodies of tea coolies.

On the 1st of November next the Imperial Government will have completed thirty years of existence. What account can it give of its stewardship?—Your obedient servant, T.
September 17th.

JOHN COMPANY'S "HARD BARGAINS."

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—That the mightiest Corporation the world ever saw had among its sons "Hard Bargains," as well as useful and "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," few men who know India of the past will venture to deny; and I have been much amused by a suggestion from the Saturday Review—certainly the best if not the only good thing in the rather flippant and meagre, but more than usually good-natured, notice of my Second Series—that, having now "pretty well exhausted" the list of "Distinguished," I should turn my attention to "John Company's Hard Bargains," which term I hold to signify an easy-going class of gentlemen—a species of Harold Skimpoles—always ready to take as much pay and leave as possible, and ever demurring to give the fair amount of work or energy for "value received." Such may be styled the drones of the fine old Company's service; and they thrive in every country. But there is another class of "Hard Bargains"—the Knaves—which would have to be got at by the writer of the "Hard" sketches; and this would be no easy task. It might even present a difficulty to the accomplished reviewer himself, so I must respectfully decline his humorous, well-meant suggestion. In the grand flock of old Anglo-Indians the black sheep—"Hard Bargains" with a vengeance—are wonderfully few. Only two or three at present, men holding high positions, come to mind, one or two of whom were, I believe, imprisoned in India, and the others dismissed the service. It is pleasant to confine oneself to the dronish class, and, seriously, it would be a very taking work if full details could be got of John Company's "Bad Bargains," for, as well remarked by one of the most experienced and accomplished Anglo-Indians of our time, "a bad bargain is almost always an amusing fellow." The munificent old John Company was, as a rule, very happy in his bargains, as the splendid roll of many illustrious and immortal names in my work fully testify; and as a set off against them it was but natural that he should have had in his service many such "amusing" fellows—"hard bargains" though they were. Among the most determined enemies of such easy-going gentlemen were Lord William Bentinck and Mr. (afterwards Lord) Macaulay—two of the best bargains, as foes to official apathy and idleness, the East India Company ever made. And I thought it right to give them a prominent place in my work. But, as regards the great Indian educationalist and first master of the English language, my brilliant, though sometimes "hazy," reviewer thinks the anecdote of Lord Macaulay being taken for a commercial traveller—which has been generally approved of, and quoted entire in a first-class weekly journal—should not have been introduced. Why should such a good and original anecdote have been omitted of a distinguished enemy to all "Hard Bargains," especially in an age when anecdotes and reminiscences are so frequent?

Considering the small amount of information given by the reviewer to the public it would have been better for the review itself to have been omitted from a would-be (and in some respects actually) great critical journal than not to have inserted the Macaulay anecdote, and the principal one of Lord William Bentinck; but then I should have lost the opportunity of thanking the reviewer for his kind and amusing suggestion, that I should follow up my "Distinguished" by a volume on the glorious and immortal John Company's "Hard Bargains." In the wide field of India, or in any section of that vast community, opportunities are afforded, if one could only get behind the scenes, for a new and interesting volume. Among a few titles suggested are, "The Bishops of India," "The Racing Men of India," and "Hard Bargains I have Met." The latter title would even suit England as well as India; for who among our great employers of labour at home—although, of course, none of them could ever approach in munificence and grandeur the glorious old John Company—have not at some time or other found that they have been paying too dearly for their whistles?—Yours obediently,

THE AUTHOR OF "DISTINGUISHED ANGLO-INDIANS."

SANITATION IN INDIA.

To W. J. Simmons, Esq., Hon. Secretary, Public Health Society of Calcutta.

SIR,—His Excellency the Viceroy, I learn from him, has passed a resolution for the prosecution of examples of what may be done by sanitation in India, which I trust that your Association will receive support in prosecuting. Great as have been the advances made by sanitation for the military service, it has not done all that it may yet do for it. Most certainly sanitary science may do as much for the civil population as it has already done for the military service. It may give the civil population immediate relief from conditions of constant torment; it may advance considerably its duration of life and of fair working ability for several years. But powers of obstruction have been conferred on local authorities, unavoidably in a state of ignorance, without at the same time instructions by which that ignorance may be removed, as was carefully done by our first General Board of Health, and voluntary action for the public protection conciliated. In my last presidential address (copies of which I transmit) I have shown that, setting aside the pains of sickness and of premature mortality, we may now proceed as if our sole object was the saving of money—the saving of the expenses duly estimated of those evils.

I am aware that your Society has endeavoured to impress on the public of Calcutta the enormous pecuniary losses which the insanitary condition of parts of the City and its suburbs impose on the inhabitants, and the really insignificant cost of sanitary reforms as compared with those losses. The figures which are given in the appendix to my Brighton Address show how entirely I concur in the views of your Society in this respect. The opposition to sanitary works is usually from the Local Boards, who are the owners of house property, and are reluctant to spending any portion of their rental on improvements which are for the immediate benefit of the occupiers. But public opinion in England has long decided that in this, as in other respects, property has its duties as well as its rights, and that the owner of residential property is bound to contribute to expenditure necessary for rendering and keeping it in a condition not prejudicial to health. In works of sanitation, however, property has only to give due attention for its own interests to the provisions of science. In Calcutta, too, I observe that the Chairman of the Municipality traces the great recent enhancement in the value of house property to the sanitary improvements, drainage and waterworks, which have been carried out of late years; and the owners of property have, therefore, no semblance of excuse for repudiating their legitimate obligations in respect to its sanitary condition. All authorities agree in tracing the source of cholera in Calcutta to the foul "Buslees," and other low classes of property from which a high rental is derived, while every sanitary requirement is systematically neglected.

The lamentable loss of life which during the last few years has occurred in Calcutta and its suburbs from cholera, while another zymotic disease, small-pox, has been successfully trampled out, should be an encouragement to Indian sanitarians to continue their exertions with unabated zeal, and with courageous hopefulness. Cholera is just as preventable as small-pox, and the means of prevention are as well known. Pure water, pure air, pure food, and an uncontaminated soil, ensure its disappearance, as the properly sanitated parts of Calcutta show. It is lamentable that at this late stage there should be still portions of Calcutta where none of these essentials to health are available; where the water is little better than sewage, and where air, soil, and food are largely impregnated with the surrounding filth. So long as these conditions continue, Calcutta will continue to be the chosen home of cholera, and its inhabitants will be the victims of epidemics, such as that which they have recently experienced. Such a state of things is an opprobrium to the community which allow it, and I sincerely wish you and your coadjutors God-speed in your laudable endeavours to bring it to a close.

We have, in the course of the last fifty years, eliminated several destructive diseases from among the causes of mortality in England; we have reduced others to comparative insignificance; we have lengthened human life appreciably; we have made it healthier and happier; we have carried comfort into thousands of homes where before was misery, disease, destitution, and premature death. I see no reason why a similar improvement should not be effected in India, and I concur with you in thinking that no trouble or exertion can be thrown away which have for their object the consummation of so excellent a result. I am fully aware of the extreme poverty of the lower class of the population in India, but that poverty is largely due to the low, physical condition to which they are depressed, and will be largely mitigated by the removal of those depressing conditions, by which removal their working ability, and productive power and energy, will be advanced with the capacity of obtaining higher wages. I trust that your Association will examine the statements of the sanitary "experiences," and with other like Associations in India, will press for their due application.

I may mention that when the Duke of Argyll was at the India Department, a plan for the sanitation of Cawnpore was sent to me for examination. I recommended another and very distinct plan, which was adopted and transmitted as an instruction to the Presidency. It does not appear that the instructional paper reached Calcutta, or it might have preserved that city from much wasteful work. It appears to me that that instructional paper ought to be reprinted and circulated publicly.

The dominion of the Empress in India is more largely than any dominion heretofore, or than any other that now exists—a dominion for the improvement of the physical and industrial condition of the civil population of her subjects.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

EDWIN CHADWICK,

Late Chief Executive Officer of the First General Board of Health in Great Britain,

THE BACON-SHAKSPERE QUESTION.*

"The great Shakspearean scholars consider it beneath their dignity to answer the assertions of the Baconians." Thus writes Mr. Stopes; but the latter does not agree as to the expediency of this "golden silence." So he proceeds to publish the results of his studies in the hope that some wavering minds may be induced to give in their adhesion to the orthodox belief that the man who bears their name wrote the plays which have immortalised the literature of England. We will not plead guilty to the charge of "irresolution" in our belief. We never had a shadow of a doubt that the Baconian theory will not stand the glare of investigation and research; but we willingly avow that there are not a few persons led astray with the glamour of learning and skill which has been marshalled in the arena on the side of Shakspeare foes, and such individuals might with advantage read Mr. Stopes' careful analysis of the Baconian theory.

It is not in the nature of things that in a controversy of this description either side should admit the force of the arguments adduced; so much depends upon "inference" and so little upon "fact" that it is quite easy for the skilful advocate to make diametrically opposite deductions from one and the same premise. The science of logic is not of a kind to admit of a clear "knock-down" proof such as none can resist. Yet, withal, there is one difficulty which confronts the Baconians, and it is of a nature that, to our judgment, is absolutely irresistible. Admitting that Shakspeare was dishonest in spirit and desirous of palming off on the world compositions which were not from his own pen—and this is a somewhat large admission—how did he manage to induce a multitude of other persons to join in such a gigantic literary fraud? And even if he did succeed in such a herculean imposture, would not Bacon himself, who outlived his rival by ten years, have taken steps to claim the authorship of the plays which he had written and another had fathered? Would any one act thus considerably towards a dishonest rival? and was Bacon the man to show such magnanimity—Bacon who, of all men of his day, was most proud of himself and his writings; Bacon, who never left a stone unturned in the direction of his own praise and self-glorification; Bacon, who deemed his compositions so valuable that he left directions that all of them should be printed and sent to different public institutions, so that "they might not be forgotten in this country"? To any ordinary unbiassed mind this "wholesale" fraud is quite unsupportable, and until the difficulty is disposed of satisfactorily, many—ourselves amongst the number—will not care to enter upon discussions in regard to "cyphers," "cryptograms," and the thousand and one arguments of the Baconians, but will be content to believe implicitly in the entity of Avon's Bard—William Shakspeare, of immortal memory.

THE SECRET OF THE SANDS.*

Voyages across the great ocean highways in small tiny crafts are the order of the day. The last modern excitement is to cross the Atlantic in a cockle-shell boat. In these circumstances it is no wonder that a demand has arisen for a cheaper edition of Mr. Collingwood's charming nautical novel known to fame as the "Secret of the Sands." Written upwards of ten years ago it still holds its own in public estimation—and no wonder. The terror and dangers of the sea have from time immemorial exercised a fascination over youthful imaginations, which no explanation on the part of fond mothers or loving sisters can ever dispel; and even amongst adults not a few love to dwell upon the pluck, the daring, the dash which always, and must always characterise the hero of the ocean. Kid gloves and scented handkerchiefs may do well enough in the army, till, if ever, active service scatters to the winds of heaven the vanities of "masherdom;" but the sea is regardless of pomp. A sailor is a child of the wind and waves the moment his career begins. Storms are no respecters of persons; hence the popularity of the naval service, which brings out all a man's noble qualities; hence, too, the popularity of nautical novels, which dwell upon the dangers and excitements of this most exciting of professions.

Assuredly Mr. Collingwood is by no means deficient in imagination. His novel has horrors enough and to spare to satisfy the most "exigeant" of readers. It may well be supposed that a craft thirty-six feet long, handled by a crew consisting, all told, of two hands, could not have had an easy time of it in traversing the world's circuit; and the perils were neither few nor insignificant. A Bay of Biscay storm is not quite the sort of thing to make a crew comfortable, even in a big ship—to say nothing of the additional dangers to which a mere toy boat must be liable; nor does it make a sailor feel too much at ease to be chased by pirates, while the adventures of a craft, no matter what its size, amidst a labyrinth of breakers and a howling, raging hurricane, are, perhaps, exciting enough for an admirer of the Rider Haggard school of fiction. This is all very well. Mr. Collingwood's scenes are thrilling, full of life, and replete with adventure. All will devour the pages with interest, but, to our judgment, the tale is just a little overdone in some directions. A craft not forty feet long may be a good sailer and handy to manage, but it needs a lot of believing to credit that such a boat could fly away from a pirate brig designed for swift sailing and rapid motion. Nor can it be supposed that a portable tubular boat could outstrip the yacht to which she belonged, or live in seas none too light for a decked vessel ten times its size. Then some of the adventures are a little too incredible. A man jumps overboard, of course he accidentally knocks over with him a life-belt; a shark attacks a man, of course he begins the affray just a wee bit too late; a cannon is fired, of course every shot hits, and, albeit a toy gun is used, all goes well. A ship grounds, of course it is only the lead or the keel which is injured; oysters are found, of course they are full of pearls. It is not contended that in a novel no latitude should be allowed; but surely "they that go down to the sea in great ships," or little ones, for the matter of that, must submit to the same laws of nature as govern their more sober-minded brethren on terra firma. And the reader of Mr. Collingwood's narrative is tempted to criticise the unreality of some portions of a most exciting composition. At any rate, the conviction gains ground page after page that if a voyage in a small boat across the Atlantic needs so much assumption in the way of favourable coincidences, it is not probable that many an adventurer would live to tell the tale unless aided by superhuman courage, skill, and—luck.

The Century Illustrated Magazine for October will well repay perusal, if only in respect of the graphic account of the "Torusk Forwarding Prison," a further instalment of the stirring series of articles upon the Russian system of exile to Siberia. A more merciless exposé of brutality, cruelty, fiendism and misery has seldom been penned. There is also a very instructive essay upon Guns, which cannot fail to attract attention. The pictures are throughout characterised by the usual excellence.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1888.

THE REDISTRIBUTION OF ARMY COMMANDS IN INDIA.

THE recommendations of the Army Commission that there should be only one Commander-in-Chief in India, and that the army in India should be divided into four great commands, each held by a local lieutenant-general, to be called the "General Officer Commanding the Army Corps" (1st, 2nd, 3rd, or 4th as the case might be), have not found favour in Madras, any more than in Bombay, as we noticed in a previous article. The Madras Times says that the news that Lord Dufferin has strongly recommended the Secretary of State for India to adopt the recommendations of the Commission "will come with something like a shock to some of our readers and as a surprise to most. Naturally enough there will be a strong feeling against it in Madras." Naturally enough; for the carrying out of the recommendations means the contraction of patronage, and a considerable reduction in the number of loaves and fishes which a multitude of hungry officials have hitherto expected to be periodically divided amongst them. The result aimed at by the Commission is economy, but "economy" was never a favourite military watchword. The Bombay Press is of opinion that the result will be anything but economical, and that efficiency, esprit de corps, and other military essentials will be sacrificed, and so the recommendations have been thoroughly and systematically opposed. But the Madras Press is more reasonable, if not less sensitive. "It is hard to preach a doctrine," it says, "that one's friends believe to be a heresy, especially when one does it for the good of those very friends"; but the writer goes on to show, in a very clear and quiet manner, that the proposed changes will be beneficial to the army of the Southern Presidency, although one of the reasons he gives for the faith which is now in him is that there will be a fairer distribution of patronage, honours, and rewards, as "nobody can deny" that "everything worth having has gone to Bengal of recent years, and that the Bengal Army has had the advantage in every way." Whether the Bengal Army will acknowledge the soft impeachment or not little matters, but the following argument in favour of the recommendations of the Commission will be difficult to confute:—"It is a little absurd, in these days of railways and telegraphs, to have appointments that imply that the incumbent is head of the Army, or head of a department of the Army, existing where no such headship is even possible. In the old days, when each of the Presidencies was distinct, and communication was a matter of weeks, there was a reason for the existence of three separate Armies, each with a Commander-in-Chief and a distinct and independent Headquarter Staff. The Commander-in-Chief in India can issue orders that have effect in the three Presidencies, and it would, certainly, tend to efficiency in these days to have only one head for the Army. This must not be confounded with the Presidency question, as is too often done; the arguments in favour of Governors, for Madras and Bombay, instead of Lieut.-Governors are indeed potent, and rest on entirely different grounds to those on which the Military question depends. In fact, the neglect of this truth, and the habit of looking on a Commander-in-Chief as a necessary concomitant to a Governor, has led to most of the opposition that has been shown to this scheme. Ireland has a Viceroy, but it has neither a Commander-in-Chief nor an Adjutant-General; and the arrangement by which the "General Commanding the troops in Ireland" reports to the Horse Guards is considered as quite natural, and not as, in any way, derogatory to the Lord-Lieutenant's dignity. For it must be remembered that it is only the name and a little of the outward pageant that will be changed; there will still be a chief of the Madras Army, and he will be as independent as he is now in reality, though he will not have the additional sham supremacy which he now has in name, but not in reality. All good soldiers should rejoice in any change that makes the Army more efficient and better able to take the field at a moment's notice. The one objection to centralisation is that it leads to Imperialism; but, however well this argument may apply in political matters (we do not say it does or does not), it certainly does not affect military questions, for in them Imperialism is an absolute necessity. Therefore there can be no objection to the proposal on this score."

These sentiments may not be endorsed by those for whose benefit they are penned, but they are sensible ones nevertheless, and it is satisfactory to find the Presidency which gave the first regular Native soldiery to the support of British power coming forward now to accept with little demur proposed changes which we can well understand are for the moment galling in certain quarters. Our contemporary is right in thinking that the changes will improve rather than weaken the status of the Madras Army; and the recommendation he gives is wise and to the point: "The reality of power has passed away. Let the Madras Army, therefore, accept the inevitable, and by not grasping at the shadow of a vanished independence, seize firmly the reality—the good that must come to it from centralisation."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

ANTHRAX has broken out badly among the horses of the Royal Artillery at Mhow, and out of twenty-seven cases there have been seventeen deaths. The disease, however, seems to have abated, as latterly there have been no fresh cases.

THE establishment of commissioned officers of the Indian Commissariat (Supply and Transport) is fixed at the following:—

	Bengal.	Madras.	Bombay.
Commissary-General-in-Chief	1	0	0
Commissary-General	2	1	1
Commissary-General, Transport	1	0	0
Assistant Commissary-General, 1st class	4	2	2
Ditto ditto, 2nd class	7	4	4
Ditto ditto, 3rd class	10	4	3
Ditto ditto, 4th class	10	5	5
Deputy Assistant Commissary-General, 1st class	16	6	6
Ditto ditto, 2nd class	16	7	7
Total	66	29	28

FROM the 1st of January next the reward for passing an examination in Hindustani by the higher standard, if the candidate has already passed by the lower standard, is to be Rs. 120, instead of Rs. 200, as at present. When the candidate passes the higher standard without being previously examined by the lower standard, he is entitled to Rs. 300. The rewards for warrant officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, for the lower standard will, in all cases, be Rs. 50, and for the higher standard Rs. 100.

MR. H. S. JONES AND MR. C. M. PRATT have been appointed Lieutenants in the 2nd Battalion B. B. and C. I. Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps. Mr. J. W. Fordham and Colour-Sergeant J. Bell have been appointed Paymaster and Hon. Captain and Honorary Quartermaster in the same corps, respectively.

COLONEL GRAHAM, Commanding the Sikkim Field Force, is likely to receive the temporary rank of Brigadier-General owing to the recent additions to the troops under his command.

THE disease surra, always worse during the rains, is again playing havoc among the cavalry horses in Burma. The E troop of the 1st Madras Lancers has lately marched in dismounted to Meiktila from its former post, Shamayne, leading one horse, the sole surviving animal of two officers' chargers, sixty-one troop horses and thirty-two grass-cutters' ponies, which were present with the troop on the 12th May last, the date on which the disease broke out. The F troop of this regiment has also been very unlucky in this respect, having already lost sixteen troop horses and three ponies from the same disease, and having thirteen cases of surra now lingering on. The disease is absolutely incurable, so these, too, must eventually swell the death-roll. In other words, in one squadron, out of 110 horses, 89 have died within the last three months. Since the arrival of the 1st Madras Lancers in Burma, just two years ago, the regiment has lost in all 371 horses. Considering that the average price of the Government remounts of the Madras Cavalry is Rs. 750 for Walers (in Madras), and nearly that amount for Arabs and Persians, it will be seen that the employment of cavalry in Burma is somewhat expensive.

THE Horse Guards have ruled that British Mountain Batteries are to keep their mountain equipment during their whole stay in India instead of for eight years, as has hitherto been the rule. In consequence of this, 9-1 Cinque Ports and 9-1 Northern Division batteries, which were under orders to move from Jutogh and Darjeeling respectively to Bombay, will stand fast in the Bengal Presidency. The modifications thus necessitated in the Garrison Artillery Reliefs are that 8-1 Eastern Division and 7-1 London Division from England will go to Ferozepore and Fort St. George respectively, instead of to Darjeeling and Jutogh, while 4-1 North Irish will go from Fort St. George to Bombay, and 9-1 Eastern from Ferozepore to Pindi, 7-1 Eastern will stand fast at Pindi, and 11-1 Lancashire at Rangoon. The battery 3-1 Scottish will remain at Rurki instead of going to Pindi.

A JOB LOT.

(Not to be sung at Snowdon Theatre.)

"The present Commander-in-Chief in India is a fine soldier, who has earned the national gratitude by his public services, and endeared himself to the army by his untiring devotion to its interests. But among the penalties of Sir Frederick Roberts' exalted position is the control of a vast patronage, and this it is impossible to deny is not always so disposed as to disarm unfriendly criticism, and to secure for his bestowals that unflinching respect which is so desirable."—Vide Pioneer.
"She was bland, passionate, and deeply religious, painted in water colours, was first cousin to Lady Jones, and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

They really were most merciful,
They praised his winning ways,
His little feet that merrily
Trip on from baize to bays;
They glorified the new canteen,
They called him "Tommy's Pride,"
But, Oh, they said his patronage
Was sometimes misapplied!
They passaged all about the fact—Right shoulder out and in—
They did their very best to save
H—s Ex—ll—cy's skin:
They sandwiched smack and blandishment,
Like best Italian ice;
But still they drew attention to That too notorious vice.
They hemmed and hawed, they sidled off,
They sidled up again,
One hand upon the laurelled head,
The other on the cane;
And while he heard with sweet content
The praise that was his due,
On legs that never fled the fray
Whisk, fell the big bamboo!
And through the sighing deodars
A little whisper stole;—
"Why, for the quadrilateral man
Select the roundest hole;
And wherefore thrust the polygon
Into the crescent's curve,
Since other folk have other eyes,
And other eyes observe?
Perpend, retreat, refrain, reform,
Oh, Man of Kandahar,
For even pocket-Wellingtons
May carry things too far.
We cannot judge the influence,
The fact alone we see,
And if the P—r is wrath,
Oh, Lord, what must you be?"

CHORUS—

We've heard it before, but we'll drink once more,
While the Army sniffs and sobs
For Bob's its pride, who has lately died
And is now succeeded by Jobs. R. K.

THE ARMS ACT.

The Bangabasi.—The Government has committed a sad mistake in having deprived the people of their arms. They can no longer defend themselves from wild animals, and hence attacks are frequent in the mofussil. The Government of the Punjab propose to allow village huntsmen to use arms without license for the destruction of such animals; this policy should be adopted everywhere by provincial Governments.

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESSEON, C.S.I.,

PUBLISHED BY

W. H. ALLEN & CO.

In 3 volumes. 8vo. 20s. each. Cloth.

HISTORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY, 1857-8, commencing from the close of the second volume of Sir John Kaye's "History of the Sepoy War."

"The second volume of Colonel Malleseon's 'History of the Indian Mutiny' is quite equal to the first in every respect. The style is as eloquent, the grasp of the subject as firm, the arrangement as clear, and, above all, there is the same evidence of industry, the same evident desire to be impartial."—TIMES.

Third Edition. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d., with a Portrait of the Author. Map and Plans.

THE DECISIVE BATTLES OF INDIA from 1746 to 1849 Inclusive.

"We know of no book so well calculated as is the one we are not giving the student a clear and comprehensive knowledge of the successive steps taken in conquering for ourselves the Empire of Hindostan."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. 20s. Cloth. With a Portrait and 4 Plans.

FOUNDERS OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE: CLIVE, WARREN, HASTINGS, and WELLESLEY Vol. I.—LORD CLIVE.

"Unquestionably the best life of Clive that has appeared."—VANITY FAIR.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS, including an Account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon; and a Diary of the March of the Anglo-Indian Army from Kossair to Cairo in 1801.

"Colonel Malleseon is always painstaking and generally accurate; his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—SATURDAY REVIEW.

8vo. With Map. 18s.

A HISTORY OF AFGHANISTAN, from the Earliest Period to the Outbreak of the War of 1878.

"The charm, vivacity, and dramatic force of Colonel Malleseon's narrative style are not less conspicuous in this book than in his continuation of Kaye's 'History of the Indian Mutiny.' With rare skill and literary judgment he has disentangled the facts of Afghan history from the various chronicles and records, and he has put them in the form of a clear continuous narrative."—SCOTSMAN.

8vo. With Maps and Plan. 16s.

THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF GERMANY. From the Outbreak of the Thirty Years' War to the Battle of Blenheim.

"The book will be particularly welcome to military men, but it may be perused with interest by the general reader, for Colonel Malleseon's stirring narrative may be followed intelligently even by those who have no military training."—STANDARD.

8vo. With Portrait of General Lord Mark Kerr, K.C.B.; 13s.

AMBUSHES AND SURPRISES: Being a Description of some of the most Famous Instances of the leading into Ambush and Surprise of Armies, from the time of Hannibal to the period of the Indian Mutiny.

"Colonel Malleseon has dealt with his subjects in an interesting and skilful manner, putting living flesh on the dry bones of history, and bringing scenes dimmed by the lapse of centuries almost as vividly before our eyes as if the incidents described had happened yesterday."—ATHENÆUM.

8vo. Price 8s.

HERAT, THE GRANARY AND GARDEN OF CENTRAL ASIA.

"Colonel Malleseon is an acknowledged master of Indian history, and in this volume, as in his previous works, he has shown that he is a writer of great skill. His style is admirable, his literary useful, and his reading in all that concerns India profound."—ACADEMY.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE BROAD ARROW
 AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 21st September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 19th September; and from Calcutta to the 18th September.

THE exact date of Lord Dufferin's arrival in Calcutta has now been fixed for Thursday, November 29th.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, having completed his tour of inspection of the military hill-stations in the North-West Provinces, has returned to Simla.

THE Governor of Madras was to leave Ootacamund in the first week of October for the western coast, and returns to Madras in November.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces will be in camp during almost the whole of the coming cold weather. After the termination of the tour his Honour will go to Allahabad, where he is expected to arrive about the middle of February.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has returned to Darjeeling from his tour in Eastern Bengal.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab will leave Simla on October 15, will be at Patiala on the 16th and 17th, and will arrive in Lahore on the 18th.

THE appointment of the Crawford Commission has been gazetted, the services of Mr. Justice Wilson, the Hon. Mr. Quinton, and Mr. Crosthwaite being placed temporarily at the disposal of the Bombay Government. Mr. Wilson will be the President of the Commission.

THE HON. MR. HUTCHINS was entertained by Lord Connemara at a dinner in honour of his appointment to the Viceroy's Council.

THE HON. MR. MASTER continues to improve, and has removed to Coonoor for a change.

MR. JUSTICE CUNNINGHAM has resigned his post as a Judge of the High Court of Bengal.

MR. HENVEY, Governor-General's Agent in Central India, has left Simla for the plains.

SIR OLIVER ST. JOHN has arrived at Simla on a visit.

MR. J. F. PRICE is to be confirmed as Chief Secretary to the Madras Government. Nothing is known as to who will fill the Madras Revenue Secretaryship.

It has been decided to send some machine guns with the Hazara Field Force. Captain Findlay, of O-4 Battery, R.A., will be in charge.

THE Kashmir Durbar furnishes a force of a thousand men to watch the frontier near Khagan during the progress of the Black Mountain Expedition.

SOME doubt still hangs over the Kabul Mission, whether it goes or does not. In the meantime the number of those who question whether the cost of the compliment to the Amir will not be dear to the State, both actually and potentially, seems to be on the increase. It has been decided that General R. C. Stewart shall not be the military representative to accompany the Mission.

NEWS has been received from the Amir, dated the 9th September (a day earlier than Reuter's announcement of the success of Ishak Khan, stating that the Kamard fort, which was held by 700 of the rebels, had been captured by Nizam-ud-din. Later intelligence announces that several officers had been taken prisoners along with the garrison, and had arrived at Kabul. The Amir's troops were, from the last accounts, advancing on Heibak, and Abdur Rahman was very hopeful that the rebellion was subsiding, as Ishak was still unable to leave Khanabad. The Amir's troops operating from Khinjan have defeated a party of Ishak's cavalry south of Ghor, on the road to Heibak. There are the usual contradictory statements as to the losses; but the Amir's official return gives 120 of the enemy as killed and wounded. The Herat province remains quiet, and no sympathy has been so far shown there for the rebels.

CAPTAIN DURAND and Dr. Robertson reached Gakuch, fifty miles west of Gilgit, on their journey to Chitral on August 23rd.

THE accounts of the murder of Mr. Dalglish in April last, on the other side of the Karakorum Pass, stated that there were two or three persons in the tent along with Dad Mahomed Khan, the actual murderer. One of these, a Punjabi fakir, has been captured and brought in to Ladak, and the Government of India having brought pressure to bear for the arrest of the others the Wazir of Ladak has started out with a small body of troops for the purpose of apprehending them. Dad Mahomed Khan is probably hiding in Russian territory, and it is possible may fall into the hands of the authorities there.

THE report called for by the Viceroy from Local Governments regarding the material condition of the people of India have reached headquarters at Simla, where they are being duly collated.

THE Western India Fine Arts Exhibition was opened at Poona on Sept. 18 by Lord Reay.

MR. J. RHIND, the Locomotive Superintendent of the Bengal and North-Western line, was found dead in his carriage.

LIEUTENANT A. DE LA C. TRAVERS, 9th Bengal Lancers, the Assistant Commandant of the Kubo Valley Police Battalion, has died of dysentery at Kalewa.

LIEUTENANT BEEVOR, R.E., has been murdered in his bed at Heigyaing, in Upper Burma. It is not known yet who committed the crime.

MR. MOYLAN, the Times correspondent in Burma, has been disbarred by the Recorders of Rangoon for contempt of Court.

LIEUTENANT H. F. PENNELL, King's Dragoon Guards, acts as extra Aide-de-Camp to his Excellency the Viceroy during the absence of Lord Binning at the Black Mountain expedition.

THE MYSORE GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.—This Company have received a telegram, dated Oct. 5th, giving last month's return of gold as follows:—"1,345 tons of quartz produced 1,376 ozs. of gold; also 97 ozs. obtained from tailings." In the previous month the return was:—"1,504 tons of quartz produced 1,350 ozs. of gold; also 88 ozs. obtained from tailings." The truth is, the Mysore Company's Mine Manager (as has before been officially explained) is at present giving more attention to the development of the mine than to the milling of quartz.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—Mysore Shares were last quoted 3½ to 3¾, Nundydroog 35s. to 37s., Indian Consolidated 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 11s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., ditto fully paid (£1) 16s. 6d. to 17s. 6d., Ooregum 31s. to 32s., ditto Preference 31s. to 32s., Devala-Moyar 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d., Nine Reefs 13s. 6d. to 14s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 9s. to 10s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 4s. to 4s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 4s. 6d. to 5s., Gold Fields of Mysore 1½ to 1¾, New South-East Wynaad 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.

NOTES.

OF course, the news from India on which public attention will be most centred to-day is that received by telegraph wire to the effect that the punitive Expedition sent against the tribes of the Black Mountain has met with considerable opposition, and that in carrying the positions attacked the loss on our side has already been severe—one officer killed and three wounded, and several men also killed and wounded. Much as this is to be regretted, it will hardly be a surprise to military men who have had any experience of fighting on that part of the Indian frontier. We have before now had to pay dearly in the loss of valuable lives in attempts to bring the wild frontier men into some kind of respect for the engagements which they are so ready to enter into with us, and also so ready to break.

BUT it is satisfactory to find that the military authorities in India refused to allow themselves to be influenced by the comments of the gentlemen of the Press, who declared that the punitive force was ridiculously large. Read in the light of actual facts to-day, those comments are curiosities of good advice. One Bombay journal wrote of the expedition that, "as a punitive enterprise pure and simple, it comes under Sir Richard Temple's description of 'sending elephants into the country to pick up pins.'" Then, again, we were told that the despatch of so unnecessarily large a force meant something more than waste of money; "it would be a waste of powder and of prestige as well, for it would give the tribesmen the idea that a very large force is necessary for the punishment of an insignificant group of offenders." How insignificant they are the telegrams just received show.

THE journal published nearest to the frontier takes a more sensible view. It allows that the hostile tribes are not very numerous nor particularly warlike, but points out that they and the nests of fanatical hornets they shelter are capable of inflicting an altogether disproportionate amount of annoyance; and so it wisely remarks that just as in the interests of good cultivation it occasionally becomes necessary to smoke out or blow up garden pests, it may, in the interests of good government, be needful to adopt measures that shall effectually prevent our villages from being burnt, our villagers kidnapped, their cattle raided, and our officers from being murdered by pests of another sort.

SEVERAL writers are expressing their fears that the final object of the expedition means "annexation" of territory in some form or other, and with such writers the word "annexation" has a very alarming effect. One penman of peace, although he would have us burn and kill a little as a punishment for the murder of Major Battye and Captain Urmston, would not counsel "annexation." It would be a repetition of the incident of the vineyard of Naboth, and "the moralities of the matter are not quite unworthy of consideration." So this charitable Christian advocates only "a few wholesome hangings and a heavy fine upon the pastoral wealth of the murderers and their associates."

THE more robust Christian writer near the Frontier advocates, however, a wiser if less simple plan. He would have us "annex" so much of territory as would strengthen our strategic position, and he sums up the result of including the whole of the Black Mountain in that programme thus:—"It would insure a final settlement of a troublesome question at the smallest cost, and with the most permanently beneficial results; would have an excellent effect on the whole of the Yuzafzai tribes; would provide a splendid sanitarium for cantoning troops, well supplied with fuel and water; and afford a magnificent strategic position, having the most formidable natural defence along its front, and which an easily constructed railway through the Hazara Valley would link in with all our communications behind. A few years, moreover, would go far to see a set of people, now but little removed from savages, converted into a community as well-behaved and as prosperous as their neighbours in Hazara; and it might well be hailed as the inauguration of a border policy on thoroughly sound principles."

THE Times, however, draws curious consolation from the news it publishes to-day. It expresses satisfaction that the opposition our troops have met with was on the side of the Black Mountaineers and not on the side of the Tibetans, for in the latter case there might have been complications with China of "an exceedingly undesirable kind." But this is not all; the Times is of opinion, apparently, that the occasional murder of a British officer or two is a positive gain if it be followed up by a punitive expedition. "Such expeditions must always, unfortunately, waste gallant lives in what seems an unworthy contest; but, at the same time, they are not without their good effects upon the Army. They enable both officers and men to obtain practical experience in the work of campaigning; and they furnish the condition by which service in India is rendered a veritable school of war." Possibly so; but is it not paying a little dear for the experience?

THE outbursts of enthusiasm which have taken place in England on the subject of the soldier's rations has spread to India, and has provoked correspondence in the Press from well-meaning individuals entirely ignorant of either the quality or the quantity of the food issued to and consumed by the soldier. But Tommy Atkins comes forward himself to explain matters. He writes to a local paper that the Government is liberal enough in authorising the issue of soldiers' rations, but that the fault lies in the corrupt system of carrying out its rules. Regulations arrange without a fault for the comfort of the soldier, but between the regulations and the soldier "comes the victualling sergeant, agent and gomashia, and after them the Q.M.G.'s Department, the jemadar cook of the regiment, company, or troop, master cooks, the company pay sergeant, and, finally, the cook-house man, with the occasional addition of the company orderly corporal." Now, if this be true, there are evidently quite enough interested parties in the securing for Thomas his correct quantity and quality of food. But Thomas thinks that the "quantity" would be more satisfactory if the judges of it were less numerous.

THE much-vaunted scheme of a Volunteer Reserve Force in India does not appear to have been carried out to a successful issue. It is languishing, like every other good scheme in India, for want of reasonable encouragement from Government. An Anglo-Indian contemporary tells the pitiable tale concerning the official attitude of indifference displayed by the Government of India, for the past three years at least, towards the scheme, first mooted in Calcutta, of a Presidency Reserve Battalion. It would appear that, as a matter of fact, the responsible authorities have maintained an attitude of indifference since the time when, more than three years ago, the scheme of a Volunteer Reserve was first set on foot. In the spring of 1885, when war with Russia was imminent, the Government of India "accepted with satisfaction the services" of the 600 patriotic citizens of Calcutta who enrolled themselves in this new Reserve. It might have been thought that immediate action would be taken to secure these 600 Volunteers; but it took exactly three years to issue the formal Order authorising the establishment of the Reserve Battalion. Naturally enough, the majority of those who had come forward in 1885 had lost all interest in the movement in 1888; they were disgusted with the apathy shown by the military authorities, and their original enthusiasm was effectually damped. The result is that the corps is at a standstill, and in a few weeks it may die of sheer inanition.

The recognition of Mr. R. C. Hoynck van Papendreck as Russian Vice Consul at Singapore is notified in the last Government Gazette.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 30.

There have been in different parts of India serious disturbances between the Hindoos and Mahomedans during Mohurrum. The feeling between the two races is very bitter, and has lately been intensified by the anti-cowkilling agitation. Were it not for the impartial and determined attitude of the Government officials in the maintenance of peace and order, it would be almost impossible to prevent these rival races from settling their religious and political disputes by force of arms.

A large number of Anjumas, representing Mahomedan opinion in the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, Oude, Bengal, Madras, and the Central Provinces, have declared against the Congress.

A Native deputy collector of Calicut has been committed for trial on the charge of having extorted a bribe from a Rajah.

The coroner's jury has returned a verdict of wilful murder against the husband in the case of a child-wife, aged eleven, who was lately found in her bedroom with her throat cut.

An ultimatum has been forwarded to the Hassangar tribe, demanding the surrender of the headman and the payment of 5,000 rupees. Unless this demand be complied with, the troops will advance on the 2nd of October. The first column is encamped at Dalboori, and the second and third are concentrating in other parts of the Agror Valley. Fazali Khan, ex-Minister to the Chan of Agror, and the prime mover in the recent disturbance, has escaped from Hurripore gaol. He will probably endeavour to incite the neighbouring tribes to oppose the expeditionary force.

The harvest is fairly good, though there will probably be scarcity in certain flooded districts in Eastern Bengal. The ryots have secured a good jute harvest, but they are combining to maintain high rates. Dear jute and the large prospective extensions of the trade threaten to paralyse once more this industry, which was recently revived. India suffers terribly from over-trading and excessive speculation.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

A largely attended meeting was held at the club in Chittagong on the 1st inst., to protest against the abandonment of the idea of sending a punitive expedition to the hill tracts. Figures were placed before the meeting showing that forty-three persons had been killed, thirteen wounded, and 126 carried into captivity by the wild tribes since 1882. Facts were also submitted to show that there was a large falling off in the forest revenues owing to the apathy of the Government. It was unanimously resolved to request the Commissioner to forward a memorial to the Government asking for a reconsideration of the decision not to send an expedition. An appeal will be made to the Government on behalf of the British subjects in the hands of the wild tribes, who naturally look to us for protection. The abandonment of friendly tribes to merciless raids is considered a national reproach.

The Nizam of Hyderabad has subscribed Rs. 4,000 to the Anti-Congress Patriotic Association, and writes that he strongly sympathises with its objects.

A Punjabee and three Afghans have been convicted in Bombay of supplying arms to the Afghan hill tribes. The police recovered three Government rifles, 17 other rifles, 14 revolvers, and 3,812 rounds of ball cartridge.

Rain has fallen in Ahmednuggur, and all fear of famine in Bombay is removed.

The Duke of Connaught made a speech on Native female education at Poonah on the 2nd inst. He alluded to the difficulties attending female education, and stated that both the Duchess and he had since their arrival in India taken great interest in female education. He thought that women ought to occupy a higher position in the educational scale.

Considerable amusement has been created by a solemn proposal of the Bombay Municipal Council that the honorific title of "Worshipful" should be bestowed by the Government on its president. This unworthy hunger for cheap titles is increasing.

Lord Dufferin has accepted an invitation to a Scottish dinner in Calcutta. This will be his last public appearance here. Sir Alexander Wilson is to preside.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 30.

Colonel Graham's victory over the Tibetan levies has been complete.

According to the telegraphic report the hostile army was estimated to number 10,000 men. They mustered in strong force on the summit of the Tukola ridge at daybreak on the 24th. The British force was therefore despatched to dislodge them and capture their fortified positions. The main column, comprising four guns, the Sherwood Foresters (Derbyshire Regiment), and the Goorkhas, advanced against the right centre, while the left attack was delivered by the Pioneers, commanded by Colonel Bromhead. The Tibetan positions were rushed in succession by the centre column, and the Goorkhas captured a fortified position in the Tukola Pass. The Tibetans then fled in disorder to the Jalep and Pemberingo Passes. The Pioneers pursued them towards the Nimla Pass. Colonel Bromhead was seriously wounded in the pursuit. His left hand was severed by a sword cut, and he also received other dangerous wounds. The Goorkhas pursued the enemy towards the Pemberingo Pass, and came up with a large number of fugitives near the Bidang Cho. These they attacked and handled severely. Eventually the pursuing forces captured and occupied the Tibetan camp.

In the morning the troops advanced and captured Rinchingong, where a bronze field gun, several smaller guns, and a large quantity of powder and other munitions of war were found. Next morning there was a further advance to Chumbi. The Sikkim Rajah's mother occupied the palace there, and certain papers were secured, but otherwise the palace was left undisturbed. The Tibetan troops have fled to Phari and into Bhotan, being utterly disorganised. The British force, which only carried one day's supplies, has now returned to Gnatong.

At Chumbi the political officer had an interview with the Ranee, and also with a Chinese official, who informed him that the Chinese Ampan had left Lhasa for Phari three days before in order to stop the fighting.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to capture the Sikkim Rajah at Entchi or Gantok. One hundred and fifty Native soldiers from Pakyoung, by a night march, reached the Rajah's palace in Entchi at daybreak. The Rajah, however, accompanied by the Calsuperi Lama, had fled shortly before, apparently with the object of joining the Tibetans. This further complicates matters, as it means either annexation or the appointment of a new Rajah.

The Tibetan loss in dead and wounded is estimated at about 1,000 men. Our loss included one Goorkha killed and eight Pioneers wounded. A wall was raised in one night on the Tukola 4,000 yards in length, loopholed, and defended by an abatis.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

According to the latest telegraphic news from Sikkim the Rajah had arrived at Gnatong and had thence been sent to Darjeeling to confer with the Lieutenant-Governor. He arrived in Gnatong on the 2nd inst., accompanied by his eldest son, his half-brother, the Catsuferi Lama, and the Amjed of the Jasong Lamas, and a small retinue. The Chinese Ampan is said to desire a personal interview with the political officer, and has sent a letter to him by a subordinate.

Colonel Michell has occupied Tumlong, the capital of Sikkim, and had an enthusiastic reception.

It is reported from Guntok that the Ranee, and all her relations, purposes coming in from the Chumbi Valley to reside at Guntok.

SIMLA, OCT. 6.

Colonel Graham, commanding the Sikkim expedition, reports that energetic action in the interests of peace is being taken by the Chinese Ampan at Lhasa.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

Intelligence from Gnatong of yesterday's date states that a Chinese political official arrived at Chumbi on the previous day.

Colonel Bromhead and the other wounded are doing well. The winter is close at hand.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE EXPEDITION, OCT. 6.

Actual operations commenced on the 3rd inst. The fourth, or river column, the objective of which was Kotkai, advanced eight miles along the Indus, driving off the enemy from the intervening ridge with shells, and the enemy lost five killed. The first, or northern column, started at daybreak and occupied Manakadana. The second, or middle column, ascended the lower portions of the Sumbalbut and Barachar spurs. General M'Queen accompanied the third column. The troops were in splendid condition and the highest spirits, having unbounded confidence in General M'Queen, who is most popular.

All the columns were opposed in their advance. On the 5th the first three columns occupied the ridge, and the fourth seized Kotkai. The first column lost two men killed and two wounded; the third column lost five wounded. The fourth met with the severest opposition. After the Royal Irish Regiment had carried the enemy's position, about two miles from Kotkai, some Ghazi fanatics delivered a counter-charge, but were repulsed and killed to a man. Captain Beley, D.S.O., of the staff (a most promising officer), one Native officer, two privates of the Royal Irish Regiment, and one Sepoy were killed; and Captain Radford, Lieutenant Cleeve, eleven European privates, and one Sepoy were wounded. The enemy's loss amounted to about 200.

The advance of the third column was delayed by the non-arrival of the baggage. Colonel Crookshank, C.B., commanding the fourth, or river column, was wounded on the 5th while making a reconnoissance.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

The Black Mountain campaign is rapidly developing. The tribal coalition, supported by the Akazais and the Hindoo fanatics from across the Indus, is offering strenuous though ineffectual opposition to the advance of our troops. The brigadiers and officers commanding columns and regiments met General M'Queen in a council of war on the 1st inst., and decided that in the event of the tribes' non-acceptance of the ultimatum an advance should be made on the 3rd as follows:—The first column to move up the Kairkat Ridge and on to Chittabut; the second column, under General Channer, to move up the Barachar to Bampur Gali, throwing out a regiment to Nimla, and thus connecting itself with General M'Queen, commanding the third column, which would move up the Sumbalbut spur to File, and thence across the ridge to Seri. The Khyber Rifles were to act independently by Sejri. Five days' supplies and one day's cooked rations were to be carried by the troops.

The only tribe that complied with the terms of the ultimatum was the Likariwal, which paid the fine of 1,000 rupees imposed early on the morning of the 4th. The first column seized Manakadana. A large contingent of the enemy, with five standards, was marching on the hills across the Indus in the direction of the objective of the Darband column. The third column encountered the enemy on the 5th on a ridge overlooking Seri. Six men of the Royal Sussex Regiment and two Sikhs were wounded. The fourth column occupied Kotkai after severe fighting, in which Captain Beley was killed, and Captain Radford, of the 4th Punjab Infantry, and Lieutenant Cleeve, of the Royal Artillery, were wounded.

General M'Queen has been invested with full power as chief political as well as chief military officer. Our ultimate policy has not yet been decided upon. Annexation to the Indus district is strongly urged, as the sole means of securing a durable peace, but Lord Dufferin is unwilling to sanction this.

SIMLA, OCT. 7, 7.52 P.M.

According to the latest despatches from General M'Queen's expedition the First Column now holds Chittabut, on the crest of the Black Mountain. The Second Column has moved to Barachar, and will camp there. The Third Column advanced yesterday from Akhund, on the crest of the mountain, to Karun, on its western slope. The enemy burned the villages on the line of advance, and some guerilla fighting took place, in which one Sepoy was killed, and five Sepoys and three men of the Sussex Regiment were wounded.

The column found the country very difficult, and water scarce, and is, therefore, returning to the crest. It is not expected that it will be able to make a fresh advance in the direction of the Fourth Column for two or three days, when a road will have been cut through the forest. The Fourth Column is still at Kotkai, on the Indus, and is being harassed by the enemy from the opposite bank. The troops are collecting bridge material, and will probably cross the river in order to attack the enemy.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 7.

A telegram from Simla states that a letter has been received from the Ameer, dated the 4th inst., reporting the complete defeat of Ishak Khan at Tashmargoan on September 27. Ishak fled, and the fort was occupied by the Ameer's troops. A despatch received from Jellalabad states that Gholam Haider had captured Ishak's brother-in-law, commanding his Usbeg forces. Ishak's partisans allege that he has secured Khanabad, has been joined by the Ameer's troops, and has annexed Badakshan, but this statement is discredited.

THE mail service between Bombay and the Punjab, via Rajputana, is to be accelerated, some three hours being gained on the journey from Bombay to Delhi.

A TERRIBLE story of murder and suicide comes from the village of Parra, Goa, where a man named John Vincent Lobo, while under the influence of liquor, shot dead his brother and three of his neighbours with a rifle. The miscreant then ensconced himself in a house close by the scene of the murder, where he kept the police at bay for nearly two days, but seeing that escape was hopeless, he blew out his brains.

FEMALE INFANTICIDE.

(Indian Daily News.)

The Government of the North-Western Provinces has found it necessary to take special measures for checking female infanticide. We are often told that it is to the higher order of Hindoo society that we are to look for the exemplification of the excellencies approximating to perfection of the Hindoo system. Indeed, one of the most eloquent defenders of the system declares that those who do not approach the ideal have no claim to be considered members of Hindoo society at all. If this be the case, we fear that their numbers are too limited to be called a nation, and that the millions who profess the religion must be alien to the genuine people. Orders have been given, we are informed, for ascertaining the extent of the practice of infanticide, with a view, no doubt, of imposing such checks as may be found possible. It may be accepted as a fact that, though the sexes are not equally distributed in all families, Nature on the whole is not a partial mother, and the sexes are nearly equally distributed in births, differences that may exist in some countries being mostly in an excess of females, owing to males being more engaged in hazardous work and more exposed to danger. Certain districts in India are exceptions to this general rule, and there is an abnormal scarcity of females. This fact, otherwise inexplicable, is attributed to the practice of female infanticide where the marriage customs of the country lead to the birth of daughters being regarded as a calamity. This is surely a reproach to the Creator from the standpoint of any community which practically destroys his work. Of course, we differ entirely from this view; and equally, of course, we deprecate any system which, to our ideas, partakes of criminality, whether it arises from natural depravity or a vicious social system. But while we differ from all who adhere to and defend such a system, we hope to do so in terms that are not needlessly offensive. We do not mince matters in the least in regarding infanticide as a form of murder of the worst type. There may be provocation or wrong in an adult which will lead another to slay him; and this is called murder, however great the provocation. But what is the slaughter of innocents who have never lived to commit any offence, except that of being born of an undesired sex? They had no choice in the matter, and cannot be held responsible. The crime is in the system which makes it possible, and we can see no defence for it.

MONOPOLIES IN UPPER BURMA.

(Mandalay Herald.)

The Burma Government has passed instructions to this division, and we presume to every other division where India-rubber trees grow, that from and after October 16th next, the monopoly in India-rubber now consigned to the keeping of a Chinese Syndicate will be abolished in favour of a Royalty of eight annas on every viss of the staple that passes into general commerce. The result of the abolition of this large monopoly will be, that while it will open out our trade in India-rubber to general competition, it will in no way interfere with the rights of the Government, and will also indirectly be the means of subjecting our trade in India-rubber to healthier influences than could possibly have emanated or lived under the despotism of a monopolist. And we will be glad to know that the same determination as that which has broken up the India-rubber monopoly will be applied to everything else now being held as monopolies by others. Under the new order of things, small and large capitalists have equal chances of circulating capital through the country, and the freer a monetary circulation the better; the existence of small capitalists will be a constant and beneficial check to the whims and fancies of large holders who, being in a position to bide their time, often command a market to the prejudice of trade, though, of course, to their own ultimate gain. We do not object to the principles of monopolies in toto. Far from it. No one who acknowledges the necessity of up-keeping Governments from revenues derived from the masses can do so. But a monopoly is justified only when it cannot be avoided. For instance, should there be a vast industry, altogether beyond the private means of a country to work, or which cannot be efficiently worked in parts, it is one reason why a Government should undertake it necessarily as a monopoly, one good feature of which is that it opens safe and permanent employment to a large number of people in the country, and thus it in some measure compensates the country for the obstacle it presents to the employment of private capital. When the record of Sir Charles Crosthwaite's services in Upper Burma comes to be made up some mistakes and many benefits will appear in it, but none will bear more eloquent testimony to the enlightenment of his rule over us than the anti-monopoly policy that is now already decided to be introduced under his administration of one of the most difficult parts of the Indian Empire.

MEDICAL AID FOR INDIAN WOMEN.

(Pioneer.)

When Lady Dufferin first brought her energies to bear on the scheme which has now attained such considerable dimensions, we do not suppose that she was influenced by any other motives than that of a noble woman doing her best to help women, or that she foresaw that her charitable mission would be fraught with political consequences; and it is well for the National Association that no such theoretical views were entertained by its founder, and that unwearied energy was devoted to the immediate objects of the Association. But the time has now come when the political possibilities presented by Lady Dufferin's scheme must be considered, and when the reformers of India are given an opportunity of showing the world what they are made of. We do not expect a sudden avowal of ignorance, nor an admission that the women of India have for ages past been subjected to treatment which is unheard of in civilised countries. The strides made by the medical profession, though rapid, are comparatively recent, and it would be unfair to chide the people of India for the apathy towards and apparent neglect of their women's sufferings. But now that female hospitals, schools for training women as doctors, and trained female doctors have been provided, we can appeal to the men of India to introduce the benefits brought within their reach to their own homes. And we can say, that if they abstain from doing this, their claim to civilisation will be visibly discredited. We have pointed out that a good and noble cause is here, round which all creeds and all races can rally, and we believe that the gulf which lies between the rulers and the ruled, sometimes narrowing and sometimes widening, can be bridged by the freemasonry which in all civilised countries the mere name of woman and the affection for the weak and helpless, are able to create. The great Indian nation must work out in due time its own reform, and that time will be hastened if the women of India are allowed to participate to the fullest extent in the benefits which have been offered to them by one of the noblest women India has yet seen. A nation which forgets the duties which a man owes to his womenkind is a nation which can never flourish or be strong. Generation may succeed generation, and the men may do their day's work and may live to old age, but the vigour which is essential to liberty and to political life will ever be wanting in a people who are content to cling to the old practices and to allow their women to marry as children, live as captives, and suffer as martyrs.

BENGAL.

(Sept. 18)

A CALCUTTA Native paper regretfully alludes to the departure from ill-health of the Rev. Manser Bell, one of the members of the Oxford Mission. Mr. Bell is a nephew of the late Major Evans Bell. He joined the Mission in the first week of January last, and at once commenced to work with great vigour and zeal. His breadth of sympathy and geniality of temper won for him within the last few months the love of every gentleman that came into contact with him.

CAPTAIN RYLAND, of the Bengal Staff Corps, has patented an improved tent. The chief features of which are described to be (1) The use of metal tubing instead of bamboo or wooden poles, or of a combination of bamboos or wood and metal tubing, or of a flexible steel band, such metal tubing, bamboos, wood, or band being coincident with the run of the, or fall of the, canvas, except as hereinafter stated. (2) The introduction of the arch principle, of a modification of it, by a curve in any desired position, so as to afford superior internal accommodation, without extra weight. (3) The absence of the numerous side pegs and ropes, which make all tents at present in use so untidy looking, and difficult to pitch, strike, and pack for transport. (4) The use of metal wire guy ropes, which combine lightness with strength, and in large tents where ridge support is necessary of a combination guy and ridge wire rope. (5) The use of the bifurcated or crow's foot single guy rope to give additional strength and security to the standards of the tents.

MADRAS.

(Sept. 19.)

THE Madras Government has accepted the rough plans and estimates, amounting to 9½ lakhs of rupees, for the new High Court buildings, and has directed that the execution thereof be at once proceeded with, the detailed plans and estimates being submitted as early as possible.

THE engineer of the Harbour Trust Board having submitted a supplementary estimate for repairing the iron work of the Madras Pier, amounting to Rs. 52,736, in addition to the estimate of Rs. 29,881 already sanctioned, the Board have decided to have an estimate prepared for only such repairs as are absolutely necessary to keep the pier in working order for the next five years, consideration being had to the increased weight of the steam cranes which it is proposed to erect in connection with the general scheme for facilitating the loading and unloading of vessels in the harbour.

BOMBAY.

(Sept. 21.)

LIEUTENANT F. J. S. LOWRY, Staff Corps, wing officer 29th Bombay Infantry, has been granted leave out of India for one year.

CAPTAIN E. C. KELLIE, Staff Corps, wing commander 23rd Bombay Light Infantry, has been allowed one year's leave.

THE Rev. F. E. D. Cobbold, B.A., Chaplain of Kurrachee, has been granted special leave, on very urgent private affairs, for six months.

LIEUTS. H. E. C. WAY and A. W. Forbes, Bombay Staff Corps, having completed eleven years' service, have been promoted to Captains.

SIR SALAR JUNG visited the Poona Native Institution on the 10th inst. He was accorded a hearty and enthusiastic welcome; and his reply to the address of welcome was full of encouragement, sympathy, and a keen appreciation of the good work that is being done by the institution.

At the meeting of the Senate of the Bombay University held on the 10th inst. under the presidency of the Vice-Chancellor, it was resolved, on the motion of Dr. Eduljee Nusserwanjee, to accept the offer of Rs. 22,500 for the foundation of the Sir James Fergusson scholarships, with the best thanks of the Senate. The regulations passed by the Syndicate for awarding the scholarships were referred back to that body for modification. On the motion of the Hon. Mr. Justice Jardine, the Senate also accepted with thanks the offer of Rs. 6,050 for the foundation of the Rao Saheb V. N. Mandlik, C.S.I., gold medal, to be awarded to a graduate of not more than ten years' standing, for the best essay on some subject connected with Sanskrit literature. On the motion of Dr. Eduljee, Zend and Pehlvi languages were together recognised as an optional second language for the M.A. Degree. The Sind Arts College was also recognised by the University for the purposes of the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science from the beginning of the past term.

At the Court of Criminal Sessions, on the 10th inst. Mr. T. Rhenius, who was summoned on the common jury, asked to be excused, on the ground that he was one of the eleven chosen by the G. I. P. Railway Cricket Club to represent it against the Gymkhana. The match was to be played that day, and it would be most inconvenient if he were obliged to sit as a juror. This novel excuse occasioned no little laughter in Court, and Mr. Justice Bayley, who was highly amused, said that in the whole course of his experience he never heard such an excuse put forward. He, however, told the ardent cricketer to stand aside, and promised that if a panel could be completed without him, he would be discharged for the day. Mr. Inverarity, however, solved the difficulty entirely by challenging Mr. Rhenius, who left the Court in high spirits.

THE trial of George L'Esteve, a contractor of Secunderabad, for the murder of his wife on the 4th July last, terminated at the Court of Criminal Sessions on Friday in the discharge of the prisoner.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Sept. 19.)

THE Cawnpore Sessions last week opened with a murder trial as painfully dramatic in its circumstances as could well be conceived. The only responsible eye-witness of the crime was the prisoner's son, and his evidence had to be tendered and taken against the father. It seems that one Salsahaya, a chamar, had been for some time on bad terms with his wife, who eventually went off to her brother's home. Thither the husband followed her, and for five days the couple lived together. The tragedy that followed was told by the boy in these words:—"On the night on which I last saw my mother we had all eaten supper together. My mother slept in a shed, so did I, and so did Aswa, my brother of three years old. But Aswa slept in my mother's arms. My father also slept in the shed. I was awakened when it was still night by the cries of my mother, and saw wet blood upon the ground. I saw my father standing in the doorway. He spoke to me in anger, and then went away. I called out to my uncle that my father had killed my mother and was running off. My mother was not quite dead. She died soon." The woman was found stabbed in the neck with an awl, and through the noise of falling water—it was then raining heavily—the neighbours heard footsteps of one who moved away rapidly. The murderer headed back to his own village, and was caught sitting by the doorstep of his brother's house there. The assessors found him guilty on his child's evidence, and he has been sentenced to death.

THE Lahore paper finds in an anticipated reduction of the staff of the North-Western Railway, and a consequent augmentation of the lot of Europeans temporarily out of employ, an occasion for some timely remark upon the conditions under which people of that class carry on the struggle for existence. Any employer of labour, it says, will bear us out in saying that the necessity of refusing, day after day, applicants for employment, is one of the most painful experiences that fall to the lot of the European in this country. India is changing—perhaps for the better—but on the poor white falls all the burden and pain of the reform which we claim to be making on behalf of the Natives of India. The daily bitterness of the lot of the European, crowded out of employment by cheap or favoured Native labour; the shame and suffering of the sons of men who won and saved India for us; the miserable degradations from remunerative employment on the European scale—with which, in hope, at any rate, each European in India commenced his career—to casual employment “on reduction” in some make-shift berth, and gradual sinking in the hopeless jostle for employment among Natives, to the lot of the loafer—a disgrace to the country which bore him and a pest to his rulers and fellow-exiles—these are hard concomitants of “paternal” Government; so paternal to the Native that its own flesh and blood often starve. We have had Commissions enough lately; but we want one Commission more—a Commission of inquiry into the circumstances of the unemployed and impoverished Europeans and Eurasians in this country.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN AND ITS PEOPLE.

(Times, Oct. 8.)

When we remember that the north-west frontier of our Indian Empire extends along a line of 700 miles, bordered by one of the most mountainous regions on the face of the earth, with a population whose chief business is plunder and fighting, the wonder is that our “punitive expeditions” are not more frequent than they are. One of the most inaccessible and most troublesome of these north-west frontier districts is that Black Mountain to whose people we are at this moment engaged in reading a lesson which they are not likely to forget, and in which we ourselves will not come off scatheless. This Black Mountain lies in the south-west corner of our Hazara frontier, almost enclosed by the Indus on the west and two of its tributaries on the east. Darband, which may be regarded as the gateway to it, and which is just within our frontier, lies about fifty miles further up the Indus than Attock, which is about the same distance by rail east of Peshawur; so that the Black Mountain seems within easy reach of civilisation. And, indeed, on the map, and even when looking up the Indus from Darband, it seems easy enough to get into the heart of the Black Mountain by way of the river valley. For the river looks as if it flowed through a reasonably broad valley between two steep mountain blocks. As a matter of fact, however, the column which marches up the Indus from Darband has had a much more difficult task than the other which marched across the crests of the mountains from Oghi. The Indus here really flows through a deep gorge into which great spurs abut from the main ridge, which cannot be rounded but must be crossed. Thus often a steep climb of a thousand feet with a steep descent on the other side is necessary in order to make half a mile's progress. Moreover, the Indus for a long stretch here is quite unexplored and may harbour all sorts of unforeseen difficulties.

The Black Mountain itself is described in Colonel Paget's Record of the Expeditions undertaken against the North-West Frontier Tribes as a district of comparatively small extent, but of the most rugged character. It is only about thirty miles long, with an average breadth of ten miles, and an average height of 8,000 feet above sea-level. It is really a long crest running in a generally northern direction at some little distance east of the Indus, from near Darband on the south to where the river takes a sharp turn eastwards on the north. The ridge is in general more rounded than sharp, sends up high peaks at intervals, is crossed here and there by deep passes, and shoots out great spurs east and west, which are often precipitous and rocky, with deep, narrow gorges or gorges lying between them, in which are planted the villages of the tribes. The soil of the hillsides is described as for the most part rocky and stony. When uncultivated the lower slopes are covered with thorny bushes and grass; further up, forest replaces these, and the whole of the upper portion of the spurs and crest is thickly wooded. Along the crest frequent open glades occur in the forest, which, with the exposed slopes of higher peaks, are covered with short grass. The Indus in this part is deep and rapid, from 70 to 150 yards wide, and crossed at eleven different points by ferries, the boats accommodating from twenty to thirty passengers. The Natives also cross the river at nearly every point on inflated skins, which they can do with great rapidity and in great numbers. The scenery in some parts is magnificent, as might be expected, and with its general features we are pretty familiar from the information obtained during the troublesome punitive expeditions of 1852-3 and 1868. The climate of the Black Mountain is fine in spring, summer, and autumn, but severe in the winter, when snow falls in sufficient quantity to stop communications over the crests, along which are the main routes for a military expedition.

Kotkai, where the severe fighting was on Friday, lies on the Indus, between mountain spurs, about fifteen miles north from Darband. It was destroyed in the expedition of 1852-3. Oghi, where we have maintained an outpost for some time—an attack on which led to the present expedition—is about fifteen miles east of Kotkai, on the other side of the main crest, and lying itself in a mountain region with peaks rising to a height of 18,000ft. It is the starting point of three of the columns which form the present expedition. Although the population of the Black Mountain, like that of other parts of the North-West frontier, is somewhat mixed; the people with whom we had to encounter on Friday at Kotkai are the Hassanzais, a branch of the Yusufzais, a section of the bloodthirsty and treacherous Pathans, about whose affinities there is so much controversy. They are Mahomedans of a somewhat lax type. Many who have settled on the British side of the border have become quiet and industrious citizens. The Hassanzais reside on both sides of the Indus, those on the Black Mountain side occupying the most southern portion of its western slopes. They are divided into ten sub-divisions, and can command about 1,500 fighting men, though some of their neighbours would, no doubt, be willing enough to send contingents. Every man possesses his sword and shield, and there are said to be 1,100 matchlocks in the tribe. They both manufacture swords and import them, and know, also, how to make gunpowder. They are independent of supplies from British territory, and although at feud among themselves evidently know how to unite against a common attack. To the north and east of the Hassanzais are the Akazais, their near relations, who can muster 500 fighting men, and could command the help of other tribes living on their territory. To the north of them, again, are the Chagarzais, also, Yusufzai Pathans; those on the Black Mountain side of the Indus being able to muster 2,300 fighting men. These are the principal tribes with whom we have immediately to deal in the present expedition, though mixed with these are others who would, probably, be only too willing to join against the British. If, however, the rumours of further risings on our north-west frontier turn out to be unfounded, it is not likely that the Black Mountain campaign will be of long duration.

THE CASE OF MR. MOYLAN.

RANGOON, SEPT. 16.

Yesterday the Recorder's Court was crowded to hear the judgment in the case of Mr. Moylan, barrister-at-law, and a correspondent of the London Times, who is accused by Mr. McEvan, the officiating Recorder, of having shown contempt of court by asserting that the judge had shown a partiality to another advocate on account of his social intimacy with him. Mr. Moylan denies having said this. His Honour said that a full opportunity had been given him to withdraw and apologise for the expressions used, and had he done so the matter would have ended. Mr. Moylan had not tendered a sufficient apology, but had aggravated his case by his conduct. The apology, in his Honour's opinion, was neither frank nor sincere. The language Mr. Moylan used in apologising amounted to an insinuation that the note made by the court was false. Mr. Moylan's defence, that his charges were levelled at Mr. Lewis, implied that the court's treatment of Mr. Lewis was influenced by private considerations. Such charges are among the most serious that can be brought against a judge. This is not Mr. Moylan's first offence. When he was admitted an advocate in the Burma Courts, in September, 1885, it was not known that eight months previously he had been struck off the rolls of the Colonial Court at Granada. Had this been known then he would never have been admitted to the Burma Courts. The charges against Mr. Moylan in Granada were serious, but had the question of his fitness to continue an advocate of the Burma Courts not arisen, these would not now have been brought up against him; but as the question had arisen, anything connected with his past professional career was relevant. His Honour, therefore, directed Mr. Moylan's licence to practice here to be withdrawn.

MAJOR C. G. MANSEL, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, has been deputed to the Biluchistan districts for the collection of statistics regarding the supply of trans-frontier camels. Orders have been issued for the laying down of a temporary line of telegraphic communication between Haripur and Derband. The telegraph section of the Bengal Sappers and Miners will lay and work the line.

THE EDUCATION RESOLUTION.

The Som Prokash.—We are, indeed, sorry, and, at the same time, afraid, to notice that it is the intention of the Government of India to gradually retire from the field of education and leave the matter to private enterprise. If there is any blessing in the British administration in India, it is derived from the extensive culture of education—a fact which redounds to the glory of our Government. Curtailment of expenditure is possible in all other departments, but surely not in the cause of education. While the Home Government incurs an expenditure of five crores of rupees for the education of thirty-five millions of its British subjects, the Government of India spends only 85½ lakhs for the education of the 200 million of its subjects! To educate and support the people is one of the paramount duties of the sovereign, and it is a pity that the Government is retiring from the field.

THE meagre budget of India since the late Concordat shows an annual charge of Rs. 17,000 for the payment of the salaries of the three new Bishops, and of more than Rs. 30,000 for the maintenance of missionaries and of seminaries in foreign territory. We have thus to pay very dearly for the great love we bear to the ancient glories of the nation! And yet there are some who advise us to make further sacrifices for this burdensome right of the Padroado at the cost of the poor treasury of Goa. Do these people wish the ruin of the country? In the Bishoprics of Damaun, Meliapore, and Cochin, Natives are being prepared for the priesthood. European priests will be sent out as superiors of the missions because persons in authority believe that the Natives possess only abilities for subordinate posts, and this opinion was held years ago by a distinguished citizen of Goa whom the majority of Padroadists of high position hold in highest veneration. And what is to be expected from the sacrifice we make of about Rs. 50,000 a year? Less than nothing, and yet even now there are persons amongst us who shed all the tears they have for the loss of an extensive Padroado, which it is impossible to maintain. Mr. Thomas Ribiero is a poet, and enjoys the privilege of singing the glories of the past in Parliament. But those who have to pay are obliged to consider the question with calmness and seriousness. Who does not covet glories maintained at the expense of others? The world is full of this easy and cheap patriotism.—India Portuguesa.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

In addition to the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Delhi and the divisional manœuvres at Meerut, siege operations on an extensive scale will be carried out some time during the cold weather in the neighbourhood of Roorkee, the spot selected being Pur, about sixteen miles out on the Meerut road. Five garrison batteries will be engaged, of which four (4-1 Eastern, 3-1 Scottish, 1-1 and 2-1 Welsh) are already at Roorkee, the fifth, 2-1 Eastern, now at Kailana, joining the camp on its way to Burma, whither it has just been ordered. The Bengal Sappers and Miners will, of course, take part in the operations, but the number of companies is not yet fixed.

THE following will probably be the postings of Staff Officers under the new distribution which come into operation on the 1st of October:—District Staff Officers, 1st Class: Colonels Eardley-Wilmot, to Meerut; Brunker, Lahore; Egerton, Punjab Frontier Force; Money, Rawalpindi; Cooke, Sirhind; Gerard, Allahabad; Bax, Oudh; Majors Money, Presidency, but acts at Head-Quarters; Routh, Quetta; and O'Gorman, Peshawar. District Staff Officers, 2nd Class: Majors O'Sullivan, to Quetta; Young, Nerbudda; Captains Spragge, Assam; Ridgeway, Presidency; Jennings, Meerut; Beley, Punjab Frontier Force; Irwin, Rawalpindi; Coats, Bundelkhand; Dyce, Oudh; Sherston, Rohilkhand; Halkett, Allahabad; Glasgow, Lahore; Buckland, Sirhind; and Jenkins, Peshawar.

THE new Station Staff appointments of the 1st Class which have been sanctioned for stations commanded by Colonels on the Staff will fall to the following officers:—Captains Hogge at Sialkot; Davies, Fyzabad; Gartside-Tipping, Cawnpore; Lawrence, Mooltan; Dundas, Delhi; Gwatkin, Ferozepore; and Stoney, Jullundur. Captain Grierson acts at Sialkot and Captain Carter at Cawnpore.

THE Colonels on the staff will be Worsley, Cawnpore; Lockhart, Delhi; Collett, Sialkot; Channer, Jullundur; and Lance, Ferozepore. Two vacancies remained unfilled.

COLONEL C. E. NEWPORT, Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, has retired on a pension of £600 per annum, with an extra annuity of £280.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL FREDERICK ROBERTSON AIKMAN, V.C., whose sudden death at a county ball at Hamilton, Lanarkshire, was announced in the Times of Saturday last, was an officer who had seen much service in India. He had served eighteen years in the Bengal Army, and was present in the Sutlej campaign of 1845 and 1846, and also at the battle of Sobraon, receiving for his services at the latter a medal. He had also served throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848 and 1849 with General Wheeler's field force, receiving another medal, and the Indian Mutiny campaigns of 1857 and 1858, including the siege and capture of Delhi, the action of Bolundshur, and the memorable siege of Lucknow. For his service he was awarded a medal with two clasps, and received the Victoria Cross under the following circumstances:—While commanding the 3rd Sikh Cavalry on the advance picket, with 100 of his men, having obtained information just as the force marched on the morning of March 1st, 1858, of the proximity, three miles off the high road, of a body of 500 rebel infantry, 200 horse, and two guns, under Moosahib Ali Chuckbdar, he attacked and utterly routed them, cutting up more than 100 men, capturing the two guns, and driving the survivors into and over the river Goomtee. This feat was performed under every disadvantage of broken ground, and partially under the flanking fire of an adjoining fort. On this occasion he received a severe sabre wound in the face in a personal encounter with several of the enemy, the effects of which compelled him to retire on half-pay. He was late a member of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms.

CAPTAIN C. H. H. BELEY, D.S.O., of the Bengal Native Infantry, who was killed on Friday while with General M'Queen's 4th Column of the Black Mountain Expedition, was born in July, 1855, obtained his first commission as sub-lieutenant in the Royal Scots Regiment in February, 1874. He became lieutenant in the Bengal Staff Corps in November, 1876, and captain in February, 1885. He served as deputy assistant quartermaster-general of the Intelligence Branch in Bengal from June to October, 1885. He served in the Afghan War from 1878 to 1880. He was with the Candahar Column, and was present at the affair of Taif-ud-deen, and in the subsequent advance on Khelat-i-Ghilzai. While with the Ghazie Field Force he took part in the actions of Ahmed Khel and Urzu, and in the march from Cabul to the relief of Candahar; the reconnaissance of the 31st August, and in the battle of September 1. He was mentioned in despatches, which were published in the London Gazette on the 3rd December, 1880. For his services in this campaign he received a medal with two clasps and the Bronze Star. He also accompanied the Burmese Expedition in 1886-7, and was again mentioned in the despatches which appeared in the London Gazette on September 2, 1887. For his services in the latter expedition he was created a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order on July 1, 1887.

A HINDU VIEW OF CHRISTIAN MISSIONS IN INDIA.

(Hindu.)

In his recent article in the Nineteenth Century, Sir W. W. Hunter sums up the work of Christian Missionaries in this country under two aspects:—To the nations of India has accrued the benefit of an intellectual awakening from the presence of the missionaries in their midst; and to the ruling power has accrued the benefit of rendering the administration of an alien race easy from the close contact with that race of the missionaries who have been able to bring home to the people the brighter side of the English character. This positive estimate of the missionary work in India is not overdrawn. It is but fair to give credit to the missionaries for an honest endeavour to stir up the dormant intellect of the East, and their exemplary conduct has indeed largely contributed to a smoothening of the intercourse in this country between the conquerors and the conquered. The races of India have till now taken in a kindly spirit to the efforts of the missionaries on behalf of their education, and there have been many instances of a powerful and successful advocacy of the Native cause by these foreign friends. But still there is no doubt that the work of the Missionaries is viewed by the Natives with suspicious eyes. They conform in general to the external requisites involved in the receiving of instruction at mission institutions. They care more for the quality of the instruction given than for the ultimate object with which it may be offered to them. They feel strong enough to resist the attempt to convert them to the new religion, and do not feel any objection to the reading out of a prayer to the Common Father Of All at the beginning of the day's work. The Hindus are not prohibited as Hindus from studying the religious books of other nations, and they are under no compulsion to shut their ears against the advocacy of a religion different from their own. Thus the missionaries have been eminently successful in their educational work, in consequence of the liberal spirit of Hinduism, and of the discriminating judgment of the nation. Even where the missionaries have drawn upon themselves the ill-will of the Native races—for who can say that this is not the case in some parts at least of the country—they have done so more from the excusable bigotry of their calling than from the display of any more objectionable element of character. The zeal of the soldier of Christ has in some instances outrun the prudence and the moderation of the friend of humanity. But even here the Natives have been able to separate the individual bigot from the general institution, and has recognised the benevolent spirit of the nation that puts itself to immense expenditure for its support. But the spirit of the missionaries has been of late showing a tendency to change. The advance in the recognition of the truth of the Christian form of approaching our Creator, and the entry of the Hindus into the ever-open fold of Christianity, have not been commensurate with the zealous efforts of the missionaries for the education and conversion of the heathen. Nor have these results been commensurate with his material and mental progress. Railroads and steam navigation have given an impetus to the development of the resources of the country; and Western culture has roused the Native intellects from centuries of stagnation. But all this preparation of the soil has not led to the sprouting and growth of the good seed of Christianity. The Hindu youths have, under the guidance of their Christian and other teachers, received an impress of liberal thoughts and sentiments of which all those concerned may well be proud. The noble policy of Lord Macaulay has borne ample fruit, whether worked out by missionary or lay instruments.

But all this is but a barren spectacle to a missionary when not accompanied by corresponding accession of the Natives to the Christian religion. He may in apologetic tones dwell on the moral stimulus of his tuition, and secure a continuance of the pecuniary and for the conversion of the heathen under one claim or another. He may describe to a distant audience the cheerful submission of the Native youths to Christian influences; but he is not and cannot be blind to the spirit of antagonism to his cause gradually gaining force in the land. The Hindus are beginning to evince some concern for their religious needs. They, at least the prominent among them, have no doubt shaken off many of the external trammels of their creed; but its spirit is still with them, and seems to be taking shape and to get itself accentuated rather than crumble down into disrepute and decay. The Hindu youths imbibe the lore of the West with avidity; they readily adapt themselves to the new conditions of the country. And their religion, too, seems to have sufficient plainness. To the men imbued with western ideas, the Hindu religion glows with the radiance of high moral worth and presents the prospect of the glorious bliss of beatification. The language of the god-demented Seneca palls before the eloquence of the Hindu sage describing the Omnipresent Deity and the happy home that awaits the virtuous. Hinduism retains its idols and its Puranas to the uneducated, and can present even this phase of this worship so transformed as to prove that its several stages are adapted to the developing intelligence of its votaries. This feature of the orthodox religion is the strongest obstruction to the spread of the so-called religion of civilization, and the missionary finds in consequence the earnest labours of a century blasted in an hour by a sudden upheaval of the national enthusiasm.

This has soured the feelings of many a zealous believer in Christ, and has even perverted his estimate of the character of the Hindus. To the missionary, the Hindus appear ungrateful when conversion to Christianity does not follow as the natural consummation of their education, and the relation becomes worse when the recipients of missionary aid go the length of criticising the cherished tenets of their teachers.

The missionaries contributed largely in the past to the welfare of those who chose to seek salvation through the medium of Christ, and their benevolence did not exclude the stubborn from the sphere of its operation. But the times are changed. A new generation has come to the front full of spirit, and inquisitively prying into all secrets, whatever their sanctity. The Christian form of worship is submitted to the same severe ordeal, and it does not seem to come off with better laurels than the ancient religion of their forefathers. We find, therefore, a growing spirit of aggressiveness in the nation which does not promise a future of friendly intercourse between the heathen and the missionaries of the foreign religion. The lower strata of Hindu society may gradually submit to a change in the name of what is religion to them; but that is not likely to satisfy the aspirations of the advocates of Christianity; and the educated youths of India are never likely to be in a position to appreciate the truth of Christianity to the extent of gratifying by conversion the yearnings of the long-waiting missionary. Hence all anticipate a change ere long in their relations with the Natives of this country.

THE MEDIATION OF RALPH HARDELOT.*

Few, if any, of the reigns of English monarchs present more features of interest and importance than are to be found in the monarchy of Richard the Second. Times were then, indeed, dark; the horizon was gloomy, and clouds of disruption lowered over the sky of England's destiny. The danger and peril were, too, the more emphasised, in so far as the reign of Edward III. had been a period of unparalleled triumph and splendour. Then England had been the first nation in Europe; her arms were triumphant, her Court replete with pomp and magnificence. "The Kings of Scotland and France were prisoners together in his capital; his dominions stretched literally from the Orkneys to the Pyrenees, the chivalry of Europe gathered to his feasts and tournaments, and Christian potentates in the East looked to him, as the first Prince in Christendom, for aid against the Saracens." But on the succession of Richard II. "a change came over the spirit of the scene." Successful wars gave way to failing efforts to retain a supremacy which was too widely spread to be capable of prolonged maintenance. Inheritances and conquests began to fade away, till after a while of all the English Continental possessions but a few were left as an appanage of the British Crown. Then came a succession of indifferent commanders and incompetent statesmen. Even the very skies seemed to fight against the mistress of the ocean. Fleets were destroyed by storms, vessels were delayed till too late for their missions by contrary winds and adverse waves. "Indignities that twenty years before were never in the dreams of the gloomiest prophets of evil had become hard matters of fact, stern and urgent." As a result, discontent was rampant in the land. The people, ground down, taxed well-nigh to a pitch of beggary, began to complain; there were mutterings loud and deep. Sagacious men at the helm of State would have recognised the ominous warnings which rent the heavens towards the end of the fourteenth century. True statesmanship would have endeavoured to ward off a storm which, when it burst, might inundate in an ocean of ruin an empire which was too corrupt within to stand successfully a civil rebellion or a popular rising; but fatuity was written on the scrolls of destiny. No one heeded the omens—not a soul in high places cared to step aside from the path of venality and crime; those whose positions should have made them protectors became oppressors. The knightly spur pricked the horse in quest of plunder and booty, not the less welcome because attained in the pathway of robbery, murder, and outrage. Society was a seething cauldron of misery and wrong. The witches of mischief had done their work only too carefully and well, and it needed but a spark ere the whole fabric of national happiness should be consumed as in a moment.

Such, in outline, was the all-important, and no less interesting, period which Mr. Minto has selected as the foreground of one of the most charming novels which it is not often the lot of a reader to peruse. There is sufficient plot to render the tale attractive, and the leading characters are sketched with vividness and a due regard for historical truth; but what imparts to the work a charm which is quite its own is the wonderfully fascinating picture drawn of a time in English annals but too little studied, and not too clearly understood. The "People's Rebellion," with Wat Tyler at its head, was a popular outburst much misrepresented in the histories of the times. Our author treats this phase of the national character with becoming research and study; he portrays the plot in its true light, showing at once its aims, its weaknesses, and its results. Admirable in its design, the novel is no less charming in its execution, and Mr. Minto may well be proud of a very successful endeavour to open out history by means of fiction.

THE MOOR AND THE LOCH.*

"It is not to be denied that a keen appreciation of toilsome out-of-door sports and pastimes have made the sturdy race they are out of British Islanders, and that the young aristocrats who have the most means and opportunities for enjoying them are the finest fellows in Europe." So runs the language of Mr. Colquhoun in his "parting words on Sport." And assuredly none will disagree with the veteran who penned these words. It is true that some look upon the various pastimes as mere cruel brutalities, killing God's creatures for no cause or offence, but merely to afford personal gratification and pleasure. Of course, from an abstract point of view, the slaughter of wild animals is utterly indefensible; they have injured none, and none, therefore, have a right to injure them. But such arguments, it is contended, are opposed to all practical experiences amidst the world in which we live. What has a mouse done that a snake should gobble it up? What has a fly done that it should go down alive into the stomach of a fish? What has a dove done that an eagle should tear to pieces its trembling limbs, and give them as food to its young? Or, indeed, to come nearer home, what has a sheep done that it should be slaughtered to provide sustenance for its human, or inhuman, companions?

Such arguments, if pushed ad nauseam, justify the fanaticism of certain sects amongst the Muslims, who hold it as wicked to breathe the air because of the destruction thereby of countless thousands of minute insects. With such refinements we have as little sympathy as we have with wanton cruelty and senseless torture. A battue, in our estimation, little better than "butchery." To let loose a tame stag is no great way removed from brutality; but "sport" in its proper sense, develops the manly and noble instinct of the human heart. It develops endurance; it encourages skill; it inculcates habits of perseverance; it quickens powers of observation; it teaches lessons of patience; in short, it makes a man of a man. We gladly, therefore, welcome a seventh edition of Mr. Colquhoun's standard work on the "Moor and the Loch." For nearly half a century it has deservedly held its own in the public estimation, and rightly so, for it fulfils every requirement which a book of this nature should possess. Not only does it abound with technical knowledge and valuable experience, but it is replete with anecdotes and adventures. In a word, quite apart from the object with which it was written, it may with advantage be taken up to serve as a recreation for the many who never handle a gun or cast a fly. It is thoroughly readable from beginning to end; not a page should be skipped. And the variety is so endless; at one time deer forms the staple of conversation; then "poor puss" in the guise of a hare comes to the front, while the genuine article itself, in the shape of a wild cat, gets a chapter. There follow, too, in rapid succession essays on dogs, snakes, the denizens of the deep, and the fowls of the air. Taken as a whole, it is seldom that a technical work is so thoroughly interesting, and it would occasion no astonishment if in due course edition after edition should appear of a work which is at once artistic, well-written, and full of life and vigour.

Colburn's United Service Magazine (W. H. Allen and Co.) for October, has a thoughtful and intelligent paper, by Colonel Paske on "The Relations of Persia with Russia," showing that England should display greater interest in the preservation of Persia, bearing in mind that "Persia and Afghanistan, while independent, are outworks for the defence of India; subjugated by Russia they become the first parallels whence attack may be made on British India." Unfortunately, this is no "new thing" to British statesmen, who have allowed Persia for years past to grow more and more under Russian influence. The story of our third Burmese war continues to be well told by an officer of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers; and Captain H. D. Simpson, R.A., contributes an able paper on "The Tactical Employment of Mountain Artillery." The present number is not heavy; H. G. Keene, The Troubadour, and Hugh Coleman Davidson supplying excellent light reading. "On Leave" and the editorial notes are, as usual, good and interesting.

The Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine continues to keep up the high character it has gained under its present management. Besides the translation of the life of Suvaroff by Colonel Spalding, there is a very able paper from the editorial pen on "England and Russia—a Retrospect," in which the idea that Constantinople is not worth fighting for by England in case of Russian attack is very vigorously combated. But the Radical views which now obtain will not endorse the view taken by the writer that this country combining with Austro-Hungary should support with the whole of our resources the integrity of the Balkan Peninsula. Readers of this magazine will regret that Captain Wyll brings to a conclusion his very interesting paper on the Sikkim Expedition—a narrative which was well told and well illustrated by the sketches of his brother officer, Lieutenant Bowman. The papers which are continued, the "Wanderings of a War Artist," "Sketches of a Yachting Cruise," and Captain Willoughby Verner's able professional contribution do not lose in interest or value. The commencement of a series of "Glimpses of our Garrison Towns" will be generally welcomed. There is much in the present number to interest general as well as "Service" readers, and the illustrations, which are numerous, are well up to the mark of excellency already attained.

The Art Journal for October contains a very spirited etching by Raeburn of Riviere's well-known picture "Spilt Milk." There is also a very charming print of Salisbury Cathedral, while the illustrations in "Japan and its Art Wares" are unusually good.

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"A Moral Bigamist" (Swan Sonnenschein and Co.); "Tactics and Organisation," by Captain F. N. Maude, R.E. (W. Thacker and Co.); "Anglo-Indian Codes," vol. 2, by Whitely Stokes (Clarendon Press).

Cabled news from China as to the Tea market is of little interest this week. The export from Foochows stands at 21,600,000 lbs., against 32,625,000, but the stock is over 17,000,000 still. Rumours of heavy supplies in the country keep buyers quiet; also it is said that a heavy drop in the price of common Congou has taken place in Australia. A steady business has been done in Shanghai at advancing rates. The export of Congou from here to London is 39,000,000, against 40½ last year; stock is 3½,000,000, and similar quantity is expected to complete the season.

CHINESE AND INDIAN TEAS IN RUSSIA.—In Russia, as in Great Britain, the growing consumption of Indian teas seriously threatens the trade in Chinese teas. The Commissioner of Customs for Tientsin in his latest report, referring to the transit trade across Mongolia to Siberia points out that although the black tea sent by this route rose from 133,062 piculs (one picul equals 133 1-3lb.) in 1886 to 173,559 piculs in 1887, yet the brick tea fell in the same period from 306,043 to 271,077 piculs. An incident of this overland trade last year was that for the first time a British firm participated in it, and sent over 8,000 chests of Congou to Kiachta, on the Siberian frontier, under the same conditions as the Russian tea merchants. A great danger to the trade, however, is the growing taste for Indian teas in Russia. These are imported into Russia from London, as well as from Calcutta direct to Odessa, and are mixed by retailers with the Chinese teas. Already the leading Russian firm in Tientsin, in anticipation of further deterioration of Chinese teas and the tendency to improve them by mixing with Assam or Ceylon tea, has despatched an agent to India to participate in the purchases of the commodity, for which Russia affords, next to England, the greatest market. The trade which is carried on across Mongolia by caravans of camels under the care of Mongols is also threatened by the proposed construction of railways in Siberia.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1888.

HAPPY INDIA!

It is pleasant to turn, in these days of complainings and pessimistic views about the present and future state of India under British rule, to a writer who does not view all things in that country "through a glass darkly." Sir George Birdwood has contributed to the current number of the Asiatic Quarterly a paper which will be found very pleasant reading by those who do not make it the purpose of their reading or writing to dwell always on the gloomy shadows of historic pictures. The purport of Sir George's contribution is a defence of the Mahratta plough, written in reply to an attack on the vernacular implements and operations of Indian agriculture made in a paper read, on the 16th of July last, before the East India Association by Pandit Srilal, a distinguished student of the Royal Agricultural College at Cirencester, and late Secretary to the Agricultural Society of Bijour, in the Rohilkand Division of the North-West Provinces. The learned Pandit would have agriculture in India "improved" on European methods, but his equally learned critic insists that the Eastern tiller of the fields knows better what is most suitable to the soil and himself, and does not want the "progressive" agricultural science of the West. And so the upholder of his views writes in vindication of the indigenous plough in regard to its perfect adaptation to the surrounding conditions of the land, and life and labour, and "in so doing," he says, "I confine myself to that part of India known to me familiarly in the strict etymological sense of the word from my birth, and dear to me as my native country, the 'great' basaltic 'kingdom' of Maha-rashtra." Sir George was born at Belgaum, and he certainly has retained very bright and happy recollections of the scenery and people known to him in earliest years. The pages in his present essay which describe the Mahratta country are very charming reading, for he writes with the eye of an artist, and rivals Mr. Edwin Arnold in the poetic fervour with which he dwells on Orient beauty of Nature or humanity. He invests the Indian plough with associations which take it altogether out of the sphere of common, mundane implements of toil. "The Indian plough is part and parcel of a fixed crystallised life of which it is the primitive and primary integrant molecule, regulating the relations and determining the dimensions and ultimate character of the entire and indissoluble, economic, social, and religious system built up on it. In that life all are but co-ordinate parts of one undivided and indivisible whole, in which the provision and respect due to every individual is enforced under the highest and religious sanctions, and every office and calling perpetuated from father to son by those cardinal obligations of caste on which the whole hierarchy of Hinduism hinges."

After this it may be seen that the plough of Europe is utterly out of place in the East, and Sir George says that the introduction of the mechanism of Western agriculture into India is quite impossible in the present economic condition of the country; and every attempt at it has in his experience proved a ridiculous failure.

I remember a steam-plough being brought out to one of the Native States in the Bombay Presidency. It was led out festooned with roses and jasmine like an Indian bridegroom into a rich regur field, and all of us who were called together to witness the prodigies it was to perform were also wreathed with roses and touched on our hands and foreheads with atar, and sprinkled all over with rose water; and then with a snort, and a shriek, and a puff of smoky steam, the gigantic mechanism made a vigorous, loud-hissing rush forward, but, as was at once perceived, also gradually downward, until, after vainly struggling for awhile against its ignominious fate, it at last settled down silently and fairly foundered in the furrow it had so deeply delved into the soft, yielding soil. And then not all the king's soldiers and all the king's men, nor all the servants of the incensed Bhavani [Athene Boarmia, "the Ox-yoker" here], the hereditary blacksmiths and carpenters from the neighbouring palatine village, could do anything with the portentous mechanism. Nothing could be done with it as a steam-plough. It had been recklessly brought into a sacro-economic system wherein it had no place, except as another god, and a new god it was at once made. As soon as it could be moved out of the field it was sided into the village temple hard by; and there its huge steel share was set up on end, and bedaubed red, and worshipped as a lingam, or symbol of Siva; and there, I suppose, it stands an object of worship to this day.

But it is with the lessons which Sir George draws from the Indian plough rather than with the plough itself that we are more immediately interested in this article. He will not have it that India is anything but happy under her primitive forms and faiths:—

Unhappy India, indeed! I might rather bemoan the unhappiness of England; where faith has no fixed centre of authority; where political factions rage so furiously that men seem to have lost all sense of personal shame, confusing right with wrong, and wrong with right, and excusing the vilest treasons against the State on the plea of party necessity; where every national interest is sacrificed to the shibboleth of unrestricted international competition; and where, as a consequence, agriculture, the only sure foundation of society, languishes; and the plough, the mainspring of all industrial action, no longer holds its proper place of public honour and pre-eminence.

The truth is, that closet publicists and politicians, trained in the competitive political principles of the West, do not sufficiently distinguish between the prosperity of a country and the felicity of its inhabitants. Indeed, they do not discern the distinction. They dwell among their books, and not with the people; and that men do not live by bread alone is one of the strongest facts of life in India absolutely hidden from their eyes.

What we call prosperity exists only in figures, and has no place in the personal experience of the vast masses making up the population of the so-called "progressive" nations of the West. It merely means the accumulation of amazing wealth in the hands of a few, by the devouring, wolfish spoliation of the many; and in its last result, the cruel, bitter contrast presented between the West-end of London and the East. And do Europe and America desire to reduce all Asia to an East End?

Happy India! where all men may still possess themselves in natural sufficiency and contentment, and freely find their highest joys in the spiritual beliefs, or, let it be, illusions, which have transformed their trades-union village organisation into a veritable "Civitas Dei."

The extracts which we have made from Sir George Birdwood's most interesting paper leave us little room for further comment to-day, but we shall return to the attractive subject of the lessons of the Indian plough doing good and useful work to-day, and the English steam plough "laid up in divinity in the Jamkhendi State."

It is stated that Lord Clandeboye, Lord Dufferin's eldest son, joins the Mission to Cabul.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterized by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Government, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Atheneum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Seen from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE

CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

COUGHS,
COLD, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This system is necessary, as many persons have been deceived by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he wrote to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London. REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHOEA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE IS A Liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cures short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. Is. 1gd., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 86 & 88, Russell St., W.C.

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

THE AUSTRALIAN PARROT.

The last Cunard steamer which arrived at Liverpool brought a great living curiosity. It is an odd-looking parrot, whose conversation made the cabins lively during the voyage, and whose wisdom filled the fore-castle with awe. Externally he is unimpressive. Instead of the usual green and yellow plumage of parrots, he has a grey suit, that is not at all handsome. His form is rather striking, however, as he is as big as an owl, and his head is remarkably wide and flattened in front. Across the top of his head is a queer ridge of feathers, at the base of which there is a dark marking, making him look like a profound scholar of a bird, who has pushed his spectacles back from his forehead, rumpling up his hair.

The parrot is at present rather mopish. He evidently has not yet been able to reconcile himself to his new surroundings. Among the party of gentlemen who greeted the parrot's owner on his arrival was a member of a well-known wholesale drug house of Liverpool, who sympathetically inquired of the parrot: "What do you want, Polly?"

The parrot startled him by the reply delivered in a gruff tone and with a slow emphasis, quite unlike the rapid, rasping ejaculations of most talking parrots: "I—want—to—go—home!"

Home is now some 14,000 miles away, for the parrot was brought from Australia. He is an African bird, bought when young from a Sydney bird fancier, by Mr. Alfred Hay, one of the great sheep-breeders of New South Wales. Mr. Hay's estate, known as Boomanoomana, is on the Murray river. It contains about 300,000 acres, and pastures a quarter of a million sheep. It is remote from any town, the nearest post-office being the little hamlet of Mulwala. The piano in Mr. Hay's house had to be hauled by waggon about 100 miles from the railway station. In a family so isolated from society and so dependent on its own resources for entertainments, the odd looking grey parrot had a good school. He soon developed an astounding aptitude for speech, and the whole family took a lively interest in his education. Talking parrots are generally swearing parrots. Mr. Hay gave strict orders that the parrot should not be allowed to use oaths. If the parrot picked up a naughty word from a servant he was promptly cuffed, and so decorous became his speech that he was called the Deacon.

Eventually the servants were afraid to swear or do anything wrong in his presence, as the Deacon would be apt to solemnly report the fact to the family.

The present owner of Deacon made the parrot's acquaintance last Autumn, which in Australia corresponds with Spring in England, and is the sheepshearing season. That is a time of great bustle and activity on a sheep range. An army of labourers are collected into a camp, for the gathering of the sheep into paddocks, handling and packing the fleece, and hauling to market, takes many hands. At Boomanoomana two hundred men were kept busily employed at shearing alone. The operation is not near so nice and difficult as with English sheep, for in Australia, owing to the mild climate, the fleece does not crinkle or mat, and the wool is straight. Shearing is a factory process, instead of an individual manipulation. Helpers keep a continuous procession of sheep moving from a paddock to the shearers. At three sweeps of the long shears will cut off the fleece on one side. The struggling animal is flopped over. Snip, snip, snip! The fleece on the other side is off; the shorn sheep is released and wildly plunges down the fenced passage leading to another paddock.

It was during such a scene as this that Deacon's present owner first saw the grey parrot. Deacon always enjoyed excitement, and some one of Mr. Hay's family had hung its cage where it could see the shearers at work. Deacon was in a great flutter, and he had much to say. If he heard an oath, "Hush, you wicked beggar!" he would scream at the offender. The thing that most interested him was the occasional snipping of the sheep's hide. In such rapid work the shearers would not unfrequently slice off a piece of skin and draw blood. The practice was to give the sore place a rub with the well-known remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, which is in high favour in the colony. Deacon heard so much about St. Jacobs Oil that he got his phrases about it very pat. If a sheep had a sore or was nicked by the shears, he would shake his feathers, jump from perch to perch excitedly, and shout: "St. Jacobs Oil!" "Use St. Jacobs Oil!" "Rub on the Oil!" Again he would sententiously announce: "St. Jacobs Oil conquers pain," in recollection of the phrase on every bottle, and which he often heard repeat d.

The gentleman visiting the range was on a hunting trip into the interior of the country, when he called on Mr. Hay. He naturally took a great fancy to Deacon, and Mr. Hay finally presented the bird to him. At Sydney, Deacon's linguistic powers attracted great attention, and the Editor of the Sydney Daily News wrote an article describing the parrot's great intelligence. Deacon's owner left Australia last Autumn, taking the Pacific Mail steamer to San Francisco. While in that city Deacon was the subject of many notices in the newspapers. His owner lodged in the Palace Hotel, an enormous structure, whose extensive interior courtyard is laid off in lawns and gardens. Deacon soon after his arrival was hung out on a piazza overlooking the courtyard. As a coloured servant was rushing by, he shouted: "I say, you beggar, where's the sheep?" The tone was so gruff and peremptory, and the voice so unaccountable to the startled darkey, who hadn't noticed the parrot, that in his fright he dropped his tray and smashed the chinaware. "Rub it with St. Jacobs Oil," blandly remarked the parrot.

The parrot went with his owner across the American Continent, and recently crossed the Atlantic to this country, so that he has pretty nearly circumnavigated the globe. He was christened the Doctor by the sailors during the voyage to England, from his habit of recommending his favourite remedy. If he saw anyone get a knock or bruise, or limp as from pain: "Rub it with St. Jacobs Oil," would be his solemn advice. He picked up some sea phrases, and in rough weather he would cry, "Oh-h-h. Steward!" with an amusing sea-sickish drawl. He has not yet recovered his vivacity since his arrival, and except an occasional "Oh, dear me!" or a "I wish I was home!" has little to say. His owner thinks, however, that he will soon come round, and that as soon as he gets used to our climate he will begin to take an interest in English sights.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 28th September; from Allahabad and Madras to the 26th September; and from Calcutta to the 25th September.

LORD and Lady Dufferin were entertained to a farewell ball at Simla on Sept. 25 by the United Service Club.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on Sept. 19 the Hon. Mr. Scoble introduced a Bill supplementing certain provisions of the Bombay and Calcutta Municipal Acts which have recently received the assent of the Viceroy. The Bill amending the Code of Civil Procedure and the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act was also passed.

THE only new measure likely to be passed by the Council before the Simla session ends is a Bill amending the Punjab Courts Act, of which the Hon. Mr. Elmslie will have charge; while the Hon. Mr. Scoble will formally introduce the Merchandise Marks Bill, and leave it for further consideration in Calcutta.

THERE will be an investiture of members of the Star of India and Indian Empire before the Viceroy leaves Simla, but the date is not yet fixed. The Raja of Nahun will probably be invested with the G.C.S.I. and Sir James Lyall with the K.C.S.I. The K.C.I.E.'s are Sir Guilford Molesworth, Sir Frederick Hogg, Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan and Atar Singh of Bhadaur. Messrs. Westland and MacDonnell will receive their C.S.I.'s, and Mr. Irwin the C.I.E.

THE Commander-in-Chief of India makes an extended tour over Northern India and the frontier during the first half of the cold weather. He will leave Simla on the 17th of October, and will not rejoin the Government at Calcutta till the 12th of January. His Excellency's longest halt will be at Meerut, where he stops from the 11th of December until the end of the month.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT laid the foundation-stone of the new building for the Victoria High School at Poona on the 26th of September.

THE sitting of the Crawford Commission is postponed till October 23rd, Mr. Crawford having asked for time to prepare his defence.

THE Calcutta Gazette states that 150 square miles of country has been flooded in the Burdwan district, and that much damage has also been done from a similar cause in the Midnapore district.

THE British Indian Association, at their half-yearly meeting, decided to take measures to ascertain the extent of the distress resulting from floods and drought in Bengal and Orissa, and to assist the Government to relief measures by raising subscriptions if found necessary.

RAIN is greatly needed in parts of the Bombay Presidency; crops are failing, and in some places in Kathiawar the water supply is seriously threatened.

THE Hunmantrao case has terminated in the conviction of the accused upon charges of receiving two sums, of Rs. 3,000 and Rs. 2,000 a-piece, as corrupt consideration. The sentence is two years' simple imprisonment, and a fine of Rs. 2,000.

THE Bishop of Lahore will be on tour throughout the cold weather, as he wishes to visit all the principal stations in his charge before the meeting of the Diocesan Conference at the close of next year.

HEAVY rains have fallen in the Punjab, overflowing the rivers, breaching the railway lines, and rendering the Damoh bridge on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway unsafe.

DR. HEKUYS, an American physician, attached to the American Mission at Ranipett, in the Arcot district, died from hydrophobia on the 16th September.

SEVERAL riots, one of them attended by fatal results, were reported from Mofussil during the Mohurrum festival.

SIR MADHAVA ROW has called the attention of the Brahmans to their gradual decadence, advising them to stick to the learned profession, to love and support the British Government, preferring to be good and peaceful citizens rather than perfidious and restless reformers.

THE Indian Patriotic Association which Sir Syed Ahmed and his friends are organising to counteract the influence of the National Congress both here and in England is to be known henceforth as the "United Indian Patriotic Association." The addition to the title is intended to signify the support which the promoters are receiving from men of all classes in India—Sikhs and Hindus, as well as Mahomedans.

ON the night of Sept. 26 at Simla, after the performance at the theatre, several kerosine lamps were accidentally dropped and broken on the stage, and the theatre very narrowly escaped being burned down. Fortunately, some earth was at hand, with which the flames were extinguished.

MAJOR BROMHEAD lost his hand in a personal encounter with a Thibetan who, he believed, had surrendered. He was also severely wounded in other parts of the body.

THE views of the local Governments have all been received on the Public Service Commission's report, and a despatch on the subject will very shortly be sent home by the Government of India.

THE Government of India is still awaiting information from the Amir before deciding on the starting on the Kabul mission.

THE Amir's strong objection to Afghan news of any kind being sent to India has caused him to issue orders to Muhammad Hassan Khan, Governor at Dhakka, to prevent the Kunar tribe, who are ostensibly serpent-catchers and hakeems, from entering Afghanistan, because it is suspected that, under the cloak of mendicancy, they really go about collecting news.

IF the Mission goes to the Amir's capital, Lord Claude-bowe, Lord Dufferin's eldest son, will probably accompany Mr. Durand in the capacity of Aide-de-Camp.

THE operations of the Amir's troops against the rebels who have espoused Ishak Khan's cause seems so far to have been successful.

THE last letter from the Amir to the Government of India represents that Ishak Khan has retreated with his troops on Tashkurgan.

THERE seems to be no truth for the rumours that the Southern Ghilzais have again risen in rebellion.

CAPTAIN GRIESBACH remains in Cabul, his geological exploration north of the Hindu Kush being postponed owing to Ishak Khan's rebellion.

A COMMITTEE is now considering the best means for giving practical effect to the offers made by the Punjab Chiefs to assist in the defence of the North-West Frontier.

HIS HIGHNESS THE MAHARAJAH OF CASHMERE has proposed to maintain, in a state of efficiency for Imperial de fence, 2,500 men, to be quartered at Jammu, and to be instructed at Sealkote with our garrison there.

THE Punjab Government hold that the Black Mountain tribes will show considerable resistance to the Huzara Expedition, but a general combination, such as marked the Umbeyla campaign, is not anticipated. At the utmost they could not probably muster more than some 8,000 fighting men.

THE telegraph has been already laid to Mansehra from Abbottabad on the Oghi route.

MR. ATKINSON, formerly of the Indian Public Works Department, who for several years has been in the service of the Cashmere State, constructing the road to Murree, has been appointed Governor of Ladak.

THE high level railway through the Bolan Pass was finished a few days ago. So Quetta has now broad-gauge communication by two routes with the Indus Valley system.

THE Kalka-Delhi Railway project is, after all, hanging fire from Mr. Duff-Bruce and his friends finding unexpected difficulties in raising the necessary capital at home.

THE petroleum oil wells in Khelat and the Murree Hills are to be made over to the Frontier Railway authorities to manage.

CHOLERA has left Murree and Rawul Pindi, and the cholera camps have been broken up.

CAPTAIN MEADE, 8th Bengal Cavalry, will probably officiate as Private Secretary to the Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab during Major Drummond's absence with the Kabul Mission.

THE Parsees and Salvation Army at Bombay are having frequent petty collisions, owing to the Salvationists having made Parsee converts and the fact that influential Parsees are supplying money to the Salvationist funds. A batch of fifty officers, including General Booth's daughter, now the wife of Commissioner Tucker, had arrived just before the mail left for England, and were expected to add to the "trouble."

AYUB KHAN has moved into the four adjoining bungalows in the cantonment at Rawal Pindi taken for him by the Government. These have just been furnished at a cost of 10,000 rupees; Japanese hangings and curios predominate. Ayub is highly pleased. One house is for his favourite wife, and contains a square grand piano; the second house is for another wife and Ayub's sister; the third is for Ayub himself; and the fourth for his immediate attendants. The conduct of his thousand followers has been exemplary, not one case having occurred amongst them during the five months they have been there calling for police interference.

THE sphere of Mr. J. Duthie's botanical researches, which have hitherto been limited to Northern India, have been extended to include the whole country, and his services have been brought under the Government of India. It is intended that Mr. Duthie should be more particularly employed on service with military and other expeditions beyond the Indian frontier. As a beginning in that line he accompanies the Black Mountain Expedition.

THE Railway Conference at Simla has discussed circular tours in India; uniformity of issue of return tickets in through booking; concessions to owners of racehorses in carrying their animals to and from race meetings; the number of classes of railway carriages; uniform rates in through booking for several articles usually booked by passenger trains; the question of intercommunication between driver, guard, and passengers; and, finally, the revision of excess luggage and parcels rates. The Conference was to conclude its labours on the 28th September, when the majority of the delegates were to proceed to Bostankilla, the Abdullah section of the Sind-Peshin Railway, to witness experiments to be carried out with the vacuum and Westinghouse automatic continuous brakes.

THE offences for which Mr. Moylan (the Times correspondent at Mandalay, who has lately been "dis-barred" there) was struck off the rolls of the Grenada Supreme Court fell under three heads. The principal one was that, in his capacity of solicitor, he appropriated for his own use costs recovered on behalf of the Grenada Government from the owner of a vessel called the Kathleen, having been already paid himself in full by the Government. He was prosecuted by Government before a jury who found against him, the verdict being confirmed by an Appellate Court, and was struck off the Rolls on Jan. 15, 1885. Mr. Moylan intends an appeal to the Calcutta High Court.

A MEMORANDUM on the National Association has been written by Lady Dufferin, summarising all that has been done up to date during the three years of the Association's existence, and the lines laid down for its future progress. The paper, however, is much more than a mere Report, containing as it does a free expression of her Excellency's personal views upon many points outside the actual programme of the movement. It will be read with interest throughout India, and assuredly will be a valuable parting gift to the women of India, for whom Lady Dufferin has done all that it was possible for one human being to do.

NOTES.

THE news by the Overland Mail for the week ending September 28th is uneventful, but some important intelligence has arrived by telegram. The India Office has received a despatch by wire from the Viceroy stating that intelligence had been received from Hazara, dated the 10th inst., to the effect that the first and second columns of the Black Mountain Expedition had burnt several villages, and that part of the fourth column had had a brush with the enemy, two Sepoys being wounded on our side. All our wounded in the previous engagements were doing well except Lieutenant Cleve, whose wounds, we regret to hear, are dangerous.

THE tribes appear to have fought with considerable ferocity, but the strong force we have sent against them is evidently subduing all opposition with merciful rapidity. This is the course of action which will bring the turbulent gentry of the hills to submission and their senses. They will find that fighting at the bidding of the fanatical Hindustani settlers, who are the most hostile to us, does not pay. It is rumoured that the Bonerwal tribe will join against us, but this is only rumour. It is known that the Akazais have despatched a letter to General McQueen, offering to send a deputation to arrange terms of submission. This example is likely to be followed.

ALTHOUGH there is little gain or glory to be won by British troops engaged in such an expedition, gentlemen of the Press who write at home at ease must not come to the conclusion that there are neither toils nor dangers to be encountered. To be in the field for eleven hours, having to make a descent of 4,500 feet, and then an ascent of 1,500, would not be considered a trifling day's work for even born mountaineers; but when to the toil of marching and counter-marching is added all the risks and trouble of savage warfare it may be granted that the British soldiers and Sepoys now carrying out the punitive work allotted to them have no easy task. Up to the latest date of news the four columns have lost fifty-nine in killed and wounded. Both General Galbraith and General Channer have had narrow escapes from the hands of fanatics, who rushed at them. Their lives were saved, however, by the coolness and gallantry of private soldiers, Sepoys and European, near them.

It is satisfactory (also by wire) that the "little war" against the Tibetans is considered to be at an end. The hostile army is reported to be totally disorganised, and that of 11,000 men, who were to overrun British territory and capture Darjeeling, only some 3,000 remain, the rest having fled in all directions, some into Bhootan, and others through Phari into Tibet. Many were drowned by the collapse of a temporary bridge over the Mochu. The retreating braves appear to have succeeded in carrying off their guns, but it is suggested that the pieces were more probably thrown into one of the lakes.

'COLONEL GRAHAM visited Gantok on the 9th inst. At Tumlong the members of the party were greeted with an ovation from both the lamas and the villagers. They were received in durbar by the Rajah's sister. On one of the altars in the temple of the Phodong Lama the photograph of Queen Victoria was discovered, placed in the centre!

FROM Afghanistan there is no news, except that the report of the defeat of Ishak Khan and the capture of Toshkurgan has been confirmed. There is a rumour of a rising in the vicinity of Ghuzni, and Afghan affairs generally still remain in a very unsettled state.

FROM Burma all is reported quiet "except for a few dacoitees." It has been decided to have an Inspector-General of Police for all Burma, with deputies for Upper and Lower Burma, and General Steadman has been appointed Inspector-General. Considering the composition of the police force and the character of its work, the appointment of a military man is generally approved. No better choice than General Steadman could have been made.

THE Native Press in Calcutta is again distinguishing itself by its disloyal utterances. The principal organ of the Congress agitation in Bengal thus criticises the departing Viceroy:—

He has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. A statesman more heartless and unreliable never came to India within living memory. Glib in tongue, insincere in promise, untrue in performance, he has done more mischief than any of his predecessors. As a diplomatist he has been a convenient toy in the hands of Russia's Foreign Minister. He has shown a dishonouring ambition. He is a feeble imitator of Lord Dalhousie without his capability. In relation to the Native States he has exhibited imbecility and want of candour, and with Machiavellian policy has been playing the same game as Sir Lepel Griffin in fostering racial dissension between Hindoos and Mahomedans.

This will of course be republished in the vernacular Press throughout the country, and it may give Lord Lansdowne, if he sees it, an idea of the encouragement a Viceroy may expect from the enlightened Bengali Babu, the writer of such effusions and the product of our educational system. A writer in the Asiatic Quarterly this month pens an essay on the question, "Is India Loyal?" We are glad to believe she is—but Babu has a strange way of showing it:

THE Indian papers have it that Sir Lepel Griffin has declined Hyderabad. We have reason to believe that this is not so; he only hesitates, and is not being pressed for a reply. The offer is a tempting one, but a Parliamentary career in England may have greater attractions still.

HER MAJESTY has conferred the Albert medal of the second class on Lieutenant Malcolm, 4th Goorkhas, for gallantry in saving the life of a comrade at Dalhousie.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—The Shares of the Mysore Company on Saturday rose 1-16, upon the announcement of a dividend of 2s., being at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum. Other descriptions were steady. Mysore Shares were last quoted 4 to 4½, Nundydroog 1 15-16 to 2 1-16, Indian Consolidated 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 11s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., ditto fully paid (£1) 16s. to 17s., Ooregum 34s. to 35s., ditto Preference 32s. to 35s., Devala-Moyar 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d., Nine Reefs 16s. to 17s., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 10s. to 11s., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d., South-East Mysore 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., Indian Glenrock 4s. 6d. to 5s., Gold Fields of Mysore 1 7-16 to 1 9-16, New South-East Wynaad 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.

LEPROSY IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—Mr. Clifford has, in the Nineteenth Century for this month, called attention to the spread of leprosy in India. His article is called "The First-Born Son of Death."

There is no Poor Law in India. Multitudes may die without any notice being officially taken. The police officer when informed that a starved corpse has been found has no money at his disposal either for burying it, or burning it, or for carrying it to a river; the corpse is left to the jackals and vultures.

There are two kinds of leprosy. One, sunbehri, the whitening of the skin—which is not infectious—which is very common, and pervades all classes. A friend of mine, Rajpoot Rajah, used to cover his leprous hand with a handkerchief.

The other kind of leprosy, pukka korh, is very infectious. At Agra I consigned two poor wretches to the care of a man to feed and wash. In a week or two he showed me his own hands, which had caught the contagion.

In Oudh I had to try two sons who had buried alive their leprous mother. Day and night she had been crying aloud in her misery, imploring them, as a filial duty, to release her from a living death.

The disease sometimes progresses very slowly. At Seeta-poor I recorded the memoirs of a number of lepers, and some of them told me that they had had the disease for many years. Pukka korh appears to arise from poverty of blood from an absence of fat.

If the Indian Government could be forced to take care of all lepers suffering from pukka korh we would have the beginning of a Poor Law, and the starving could then receive a pennyworth of grain and oil a-day, and be put into the earth when dead. In each district twenty-four could be fed for one rupee (say, 1s. 4d.) a day, less than the cost of feeding one of the Viceroy's elephants.

October 6th.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

Sir Peter Lumsden has sent the following explanatory letter to the Times regarding certain statements lately made by its correspondent at St. Petersburg:—

SIR,—My attention has been drawn to an imputation on the character of British officers attached to the late Afghan Boundary Commission in an account of the Central Asian Railway by your St. Petersburg Correspondent, issued in the Times of October 4. I cannot allow such a statement to pass without emphatic contradiction.

The passage which I refer to is this:—

"The walls of the Colonel's (Alikhanoff) study are covered with a quantity of Asiatic arms and weapons, &c. . . . But among this collection there were two objects which attracted my particular attention. One was a good breech-loading fowling-piece of London manufacture which had belonged to Captain Peacock or perhaps Captain Yate, for I am not quite certain which, and was taken after the disastrous and discreditable flight of the British representatives at the battle of Koushk; and the other, standing in a corner, near the Colonel's writing table, was the silk banner of the new Turcoman militia, mounted, if you please, upon the tall bamboo spear of a British Bengal Lancer! The latter, I believe, was a present from the escort of the Boundary Commission. Without the lance, the Transcaspian possesses trophies enough of that wretched business at Penjdeh to form a small museum. The Afghan cannon have been placed round the base of the Skobelev monument at Askabad, and a pair of big boots, an Indian helmet, and several other things are cherished and exhibited by General Komaroff and others as relics of the English retreat."

The facts of the case are:—There was no British representative at the battle of the Koushk. That gallant and excellent engineer officer, Captain Peacock, was on distant survey work elsewhere; while Captain Charles Yates was employed, in his political capacity, successfully restraining the Turcomans in the Penjdeh valley, some five miles from the scene of conflict, from falling on the retiring Afghans. He, along with Captain De Lassoce, remained there until they saw that the Afghans had passed on their way to Bala-Murgab, and until some four hours after the Russian attack; and then only commenced their march when the Turcoman sirdars told them that they could not allow them to remain any longer, and insisted on their withdrawal, escorting them themselves to the confines of their lands.

So far from flight, Captain Yate retired with his baggage on his own animals, and attended by the few horsemen attached to him, in the most orderly manner, which, in a very trying position, reflected the greatest credit on his coolness and judgment.

Neither did Captain Peacock, or Captain Yate, nor did any other officer of the mission, lose any fowling-piece of any description. The trophy, therefore, so much prized may possibly be some of the guns presented by me at different times to Afghan and Turcoman chiefs, or may have been the property of some of the Afghan officers or men.

As for the bamboo spear of a British Bengal Lancer on which the Turcoman silk banner is mounted, I am assured that the lance in question was given as a present to Colonel Kuhlberg, at the latter's particular request, by Colonel Bax, commanding the escort, out of his reserve stores. Colonel Kuhlberg asked for one, as Sir W. Ridgeway, I believe, understood him to say, to send to Russia for the inspection of the Russian Lancers, Cossacks, &c., and Bax readily presented him with this lance when the mission was leaving. How it came in the hands of Colonel Alikhanoff to form the standard-pole of the new Turcoman militia I cannot say.

If the authorities in Turkestan have treasured up as relics the helmets and boots of officers who from time to time discarded them in Penjdeh, or other portions of the Murghab valley where the mission was encamped for a whole winter, such a fact cannot reflect on the conduct of British officers.

However much the wretched business at Koushk is to be deplored, the responsibility of it rested not with the British officers of the mission, on whom your correspondent cast reflections, but on those responsible for the position in which they were placed.

Yours faithfully,

P. S. LUMSDEN, Lieut.-General.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

Oct. 8.

The Headquarters Correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Doda Hill, which was strongly held by the enemy, was gallantly carried by the 3rd Sikhs and the Northumberland Fusiliers. The third column advanced through heavy pine forests, over an excessively rugged and precipitous country road, impassable for baggage, and was met with a continuous fire from the enemy on either side. General McQueen personally directed the operations, and eventually occupied Thaima, two miles above Seri, which was observed to be in flames. The column bivouacked there for the night, and retired on the morning of the 7th, the General deciding to meet the river column by the new route of Panji Gully. The enemy vigorously followed up the retreating column, harassing the rear guard with a continuous fire.

The fourth column stands fast at Kotkai. The road is impassable for baggage animals. Colonel Hawes reconnoitred towards Tilla, and found the road exposed to fire the whole way from the rocky ridges on the opposite side of the Indus.

General Galbraith is collecting bridge-material with a view to crossing the river and attacking the enemy, among whom are many Hindustani fanatics, who have crossed the river at Gavhi, opposite Kunhar. The Mada Khels have also crossed and joined the Basaizais.

Fuzal Ali Khan has escaped to Allai across the Indus.

Colonel Crookshank is progressing favourably. The further advance of all the columns will probably be delayed several days in order that the unknown country may be thoroughly reconnoitred, the present maps being misleading. The weather is severe, and the men are without shelter, but the health of the troops is reported to be good.

KINGALI, Oct. 9.

To-day parties of the Royal Sussex and Suffolk Regiments and the 34th Pioneers, with the Khyberees leading, passed down to Seri, under the command of Brigadier-General Channer, to destroy the place. The object of the expedition was successfully accomplished, and the troops returned to the camp on the crest without meeting with any opposition, the enemy not showing themselves even during the retirement of our troops. Under orders from headquarters some villages on the road were burnt by the Khyberees. These levies have shown themselves during this campaign well-adapted for hill warfare, and already they have done excellent service under Major Mahomed Uslam Khan.

A few shells were thrown into three or four distant villages at long range before the troops retired. General Channer conducted the operations with great judgment, and showed a wise clemency at this juncture towards the villagers, who were at his mercy.

The enemy's resistance seems to be broken, and there are signs that they are anxious to sue for peace. More stringent terms than were originally offered are now demanded; but the inducement is held out that the crops will not be destroyed if the tribes come in without delay.

I am glad to report that it has at last been decided to occupy Seri. This place commands the whole of the valley, which is the country of the Hassanzais and Akazars, and is thickly studded with villages. This occupation, owing to the position of the place, will make hostile operations against us from under cover of the forests impracticable, and will compel the villagers to abandon their homes, with the result, it is hoped, of forcing the headmen to come to terms. Seri affords abundant forage, has a plentiful water supply, and will form an excellent encampment, where the troops can remain for an indefinite period.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE ROAD TO RUIN.

(Englishman.)

It is certainly a striking proof of the spread of litigation in Bengal in recent years that the annual value of Court-fee stamps should have risen to the enormous sum over of 100 lakhs of rupees, the amount having gone on increasing at the rate of about three lakhs a year. Of course, of the vast wealth which is showered upon the Law Courts, the stamp fees are only a trivial part, and, as we have shown in a previous article, the Government receives a considerable share of the golden gains of litigation. Government, we know, spends its share in maintaining an efficient staff of Court officials, and in providing substantial and commodious Court Houses throughout the country. But the pleaders also receive a noble guerdon, and it is a matter of public interest to know how, as a rule, they spend the splendid proceeds of their professional labours. Speaking not only of Bengal, but of India as a whole, we believe that there is a strong predilection on the part of the pleader class for investments in landed property, for the purchase of Government securities, and for money lending. If they spent a considerable portion of their income in the improvement of their estates and in bettering the condition of their tenants, there would be nothing to be said against their landed investments. The utility of buying "paper" depends on the manner in which they expend the interest. The third mode of handling their savings only adds to and accelerates the impoverishment of the people, which their fondness for litigation must sooner or later bring about. It may be said generally that on law and on social ceremonies the people not only spend all their savings, but incur debts which they cannot liquidate in a lifetime. These considerations undoubtedly make the present reign of law no unmixed blessing. Those Natives of the old school who will soon be numbered among the past generation recall with regret the days of a more patriarchal, paternal, and personal Government; they cling with fondness to the old picture of the district officer—dispensing justice, not law, under a tree—whose word was their command, requiring none of the formalities and delays of the execution procedure of to-day.

The present generation has only seen the inability of executive officers to remedy abuses and acts of oppression and injustice—committed perhaps under their very eyes when in camp. All they can do is to refer the parties to the Civil Court—a case of giving a stone to those who ask for bread. The coming generation will probably see the next step in the process—the complete separation of executive from judicial functions, and magistrates unable to enforce even their own legal orders. The cry already goes up from the great body of the people that there is too much law and too little justice—summum jus summa injuria. Is it not time to pause and consider whether in our establishment of a reign of law we have not forgotten the character and surroundings of those whom we intended to bless, but whom we have rather cursed? It is the Native Press and the noisy agitators of the National Congress stamp who make their voices heard, not the dumb millions. Is no remedy possible? To cheapen the cost of litigation or to simplify the procedure would probably lead to an immediate and overwhelming increase in civil suits. To strike at the evil at all successfully we must strike at its roots. The innate passion for litigation which seems to be part and parcel of the character of every Bengali and the crowd of touts and other hangers-on of our Courts who foster and encourage the passion, must be eradicated. The first remedy lies with the people themselves, and must, like child marriage and the ill-treatment of widows, be left to public opinion aided by the moral code which the Government of India has ordered to be taught in schools. Even then it will take many generations to accomplish. The second remedy Government has to a large extent in its own hands. None but certificated pleaders, mukhtars, and revenue agents should be allowed within the precincts of our Courts. No petitions, plaints, or other written documents should be admitted by any Court but those written by registered petition writers, appointed and responsible to the Courts, and remunerated on a fixed and liberal scale. Power should be given to inflict summary fines for vexatious litigation in addition to the costs thereof; in other words, the provisions on this subject of section 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be extended not only to all civil cases, but also to all criminal cases whatsoever. It is an anomaly that any man may rid himself of liability to this penalty by merely changing the section of the Penal Code under which he charges his enemy. It is a still further anomaly that it may be inflicted on a complainant in the comparatively summary procedure of summons cases, while it cannot be awarded after on the fuller and more formal procedure for the trial of warrant and sessions cases.

EXPERIENCES OF AN INDIAN GAOL.

Not often does a prisoner return to society complaining that he has been too leniently dealt with. The ex-convict who favours the Times of India with his experiences while in the Madras Penitentiary is of this frame of mind—and, from his account, with good reason. He was sentenced to "six months' rigorous," and it would seem that his sentence was a just one. Hence he entered Her Majesty's Penitentiary (so polite is he that he never once alludes to it as a gaol) expecting to be punished. Instead of which they fed him sumptuously three times a day—a pint of coffee and twelve ounces of good brown bread in the morning; rice, potatoes, meat, dhall and vegetables for dinner; gruel, bread and tea for supper. The allowance of meat—four and a-half and seven ounces on alternate days—seems meagre, but the total amount of solid food at the lowest computation is nearly two pounds. The work was light. The ex-convict calls it "nothing to speak of," or only sufficient to give one a "roaring appetite" which the prison dietary amply satisfied. It consisted in pounding into coir the fibrous covers of from forty to twenty cocoanuts per diem. At first this employ blistered the hands and made the arms ache, insomuch that the ex-convict was forced to own his weariness in the presence of derisive fellow-prisoners whom he says pathetically, he could have "knocked down in a stand-up fight." After two or three days his hands hardened, and he in common with the others could afford to laugh at his daily stint of coir. Work began at 7.30 and ended at twelve, though it was "supposed" to go on through the afternoon. Altogether there seems to be a pleasant casualness in the penitentiary arrangements, for, when the ex-convict was told off to cook for his mates, he "invariably" received rations in excess of the proper amount—which generosity ended in sorrow; for though the cook did his best to give "one fellow something extra one day and another fellow something extra another day," they all made common cause against him and accused him of pilfering. Such ingratitude preyed on his mind, and "immediately after relinquishing his appointment" he went into hospital and found himself even better off than before in the matter of food creature comforts, and conversation. There were books to read and light chairs to sit in, and no more locking up than was necessary. In spite of these favours the ex-convict procured a pencil and paper without permission, and for this offence got three days' confinement in the solitary cells on bread and water. Even here he rejoiced: the "solitary confinement" permitted conversation all day long, and the "bread and water" meant gruel made of sojee with potatoes for dinner. The only really annoying feature seems to have been the absence of a mattress and the presence of bare boards to lie upon. The ordinary cells are embellished with a cot and a teapoy. On the latter the prisoner takes his meals and keeps his library. Most of the prisoners took a pride in "furbishing up" their apartments—sure proof that time hung heavy on their hands—and to this end unlimited tar and white and colour wash was available. The ex-convict is justly severe on some "lazy idle fellows" who "took no interest in their cells," and thus failed to keep up the esprit de corps of "H.M.'s Penitentiary." He appears to have a genuine affection for the place, and avers that, "were he lost to all sense of self-respect he would most willingly go to that misnamed penal institution where, supposing that I did not care for the loss of liberty, I know I would be excellently housed, fed and clothed."

COURTSHIP IN KAFIRISTAN.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

There is something melancholy in the following account, given by one of our frontier correspondents, of the custom of courtship among the remote tribes of Kafiristan:—A Kafir, having fixed his affection upon some female, acquaints his parents with his intentions. They apply to the parents of the girl, and if the latter do not consent to the union, a fight is inevitable. If the parties agree, the next proceeding is to appoint two expert female negotiators, who, by stratagems, gain access to the house with the object of broaching the subject to the young lady. The lady ambassadors carefully avoid any sudden or abrupt mention of the awful subject of their mission, but launch out in praises of the gentleman who seeks her hand. They speak of his possessions, his courage, and other like accomplishments. The girl, pretending to be affronted even at these remote hints, grows refractory, and runs away, tearing the ringlets of her hair as she retires; while the female ambassadors, having got the consent of the parents, drag her from her concealment, and carry her by force to the house of her destined husband, and there leave her, where she is compelled to remain for days, silent and dejected, refusing food, till at last, if kind entreaties do not prevail, she is made to submit by blows to the union. The Kafir who has the reputation of having committed a number of murders of Mahomedans enjoys exceptional privileges; he is respected by all in the neighbourhood, and experiences little or no difficulty in procuring a wife for himself. The Kafir woman is doomed to a life of toil and drudgery, and the husband has the option of discarding her any moment he feels so disposed.

HILL HOTELS.

(Pioneer.)

I really feel so sorry for you all stewing down in the plains that I must try and cheer you up a little by telling you how we are getting on up here. I can sum it up in one sentence—we are just having the loveliest time. When we first arrived here I thought it was going to be uncommonly dull; everybody sat at table in the staidest, most decorous manner, like a lot of old fogies. But in a few days two or three of my particular friends arrived, and now I can assure you things look very different. I flatter myself I have had no small share in this improvement. Indeed I have sometimes felt misgivings as to whether we have not gone just a little too far. Of course, I have no wish to disturb anybody or make a row, but things were really too dismal, and somebody had to wake people up a little. I soon found that all they wanted was a little encouragement. A week ago everyone talked almost in whispers, and behaved as if they were in church; now at dinner you can hardly hear yourself speak, napkin-rings and flowers are constantly flying across the table, and last night poor young Jones of the —th very nearly got his eye put out with a fork. I really thought I should have died with laughing. I don't know when we have had such fun.

But the jolliest time is after dinner. In the day we don't see much of each other; there is such a lot of calling to be got through, and tennis and all that, and then one has to look after the children sometimes, and the men will spend such a lot of time at racquets. But after dinner we all assemble in the drawing-room, and then we do enjoy ourselves. Sometimes we sing a little till the men come in; but that is not long I can tell you. As soon as they come we clear away the furniture and play all sorts of games. I can't tell you what a jolly time we have. We play Hunt the Slipper, Blindman's Buff, Musical Chairs, and ever so many more games. There are nine or ten young fellows here, and it does one good to see how excited they get and how they enjoy it. Some of them are up on language leave, and they really work so hard, poor boys! It is quite a kindness to persuade them to relax a little and have some innocent amusement. I think people are very unkind who say it is absurd to give them a few months' leave to learn the language. How can they be expected to do their regimental duties and pass their examinations too?

But I was going to tell you about these games. Almost everyone joins in them. There are one or two who go off to their own rooms and pretend that they think it wrong, or some such humbug. I do dislike people who give themselves airs, and try to make out that they are so much better than their neighbours. They would very soon leave off if they knew how we laughed at them for it. I have noticed also that some of the husbands stay in the dining-room and smoke, but I defy them to talk when we are playing in the next room. Grumpy old fogies! I overheard Colonel — blowing up his wife most awfully the other day—you know how thin the partitions often are in hotels, and I can hear every word they say (but I don't mean to tell them till we go). Well, this old duffer was scolding away and as cross as possible just because when we were playing Musical Chairs the night before she had accidentally sat down on a young fellow's knee and he had held her there for a minute or two! He only meant it for a bit of fun, and it was quite an accident on her part. But this jealous old idiot must needs declare that it was done on purpose, and that the next time he saw such a thing he would give up the rest of his leave and return to duty. Did you ever hear such tyranny? He wanted her to promise never to play any more, but she simply laughed at him—and quite right, too, I say. A pretty thing it would be if we were to allow our husbands to interfere in every little pleasure! I am glad to say my husband has no such nonsense about him, and I should not care if he had. I let him do as he likes, though really sometimes when we are playing Hunt the Slipper it is wonderful how long he takes to find out whether Mrs. — has it or not. She is a pretty woman, I admit, though she must be thirty-five if she is a day. Still, I shall not say anything; life would be unbearable if husbands and wives were always tormenting each other about trifles. One must give and take.

Now I think I have said enough to show you what a good time we are having, and if any of you can scrape ten days' leave together, do come here and we will show you how to make the time fly. Certainly the hotel is pretty full already; but never mind, we will double up somehow, and we are not so particular as to mind a little squeezing together. In fact we like it. M.

BENGAL.

THE system of allowing land revenue payments to be made by postal money-order seems to be viewed with much favour in Bengal. It was there introduced on April 1, 1887; there were 47,200 of these orders paid in during the year to the value of two lakhs. The Government and the Board are resolved to do all they can to extend the system. From the commencement of the current year it has been made applicable to all estates, irrespective of the amount of their revenue, and it has further been ruled that other public demands may be paid by ordinary postal orders, "provided the particulars given are sufficient for the department concerned." The Government have now under consideration the question of utilising the Post Office for collecting rents under the Tenancy Act. Meantime, the department to which so much business is cheerfully made over seems to swallow all its fresh jobs without the least sign of internal distension or discomfort.

TEA PLANTERS AND TEA AGENTS.—The Indian Planter's Gazette says that a tea-planter has "played it down low on the wily and infallible Calcutta agents," and distinctly scored off them:—"I had," says the tea-planter, according to the paper mentioned, "samples sent me (by my agent and was told to make similar teas, as they were considered 'desirable teas.' On receipt of these samples I repacked them in lead, put my own garden mark on them, and sent them down as my own. The report I received was to the effect that 'these teas are most undesirable; your system of manufacture must be seriously wrong. We would advise higher withering and less fermentation.'"

MADRAS.

(Sept. 26.)

On the 18th inst. a meeting of the Ootacamund Hunt was held at Ootacamund, H.E. the Governor presiding, when it was decided to buy a pack of hounds next year to hunt the country, and to raise Rs. 4,500 in debenture bonds of Rs. 100 at 6 per cent. each for the purpose of building new kennels, the hounds having suffered greatly this year from sickness in the present kennels. Most of these bonds have already been taken up.

H.E. SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS' scheme for the employment of Native military pensioners has been in working for three and a-quarter years in the Madras Presidency, and has exceeded the most sanguine expectations that were formed of it. There are now upwards of 3,500 men employed all over the Presidency in a great variety of posts, and in a wide range of salaries. Colonel S. Leigh Hunt is the Superintendent, and he has thus been able to open registers for the employment and applications for the services of Native military pensioners, through his agents, at seventy-one stations. At the Headquarters' Office a register is maintained, in which are entered the names of all men throughout the Presidency who have obtained or are desirous of obtaining employment, and circulars are periodically issued from the Headquarters' Office for the guidance of local offices. At the latter every assistance is given to pensioners seeking employment and to firms making application for the services of retired Native soldiers. In the Presidency there are now some six hundred Native military pensioners employed on railways alone as chowkidars, platform peons, gate-keepers, &c. The system must be a boon to old soldiers and a benefit also to the public, as a pensioner of good character is likely to make a good servant.

It is reported that thieves have broken into the house of Nawab Sarwar Jung at Hyderabad, and carried off cash and jewellery to the value of 25,000 rupces.

A FAREWELL banquet was given by Lord Connemara at Ootacamund to the Hon. Mr. Hutchins, at which fifty-six persons sat down.

THE Governor, in proposing the health of Mr. Hutchins, briefly referred to the excellent services he had rendered during his thirty-one years' service in Madras. He regretted that he was going to leave, but his friends must be proud of his elevation. The Governor, continuing, said with his experience of English statesmen he could fearlessly state no minister ever had a more able, industrious, fair-minded or loyal colleague than Mr. Hutchins. Though keenly feeling his loss, the Governor had not the slightest doubt that the mantle worn with so much honour and distinction by Mr. Hutchins would descend upon as worthy shoulders, both now and in years to come.

MR. HUTCHINS, replying, said he confessed to a certain amount the pardonable elation, that after his long career his endeavours to do his simple duty has met with such high appreciation from those best able to estimate their value. He said that Lord Connemara knew how to get the best work out of his colleagues and assistants. He referred to the constant sympathy, support, and most generous confidence, kindness, and consideration he had met with at the hands of Lord Connemara, and while keenly feeling leaving works to which he had given his best powers, he still hoped he might be able to be of service to Madras.

BOMBAY.

(Sept. 28.)

MAJOR J. S. KING has been appointed to act, on his return to duty, as Second in Command of the Kolhapur Infantry Corps and ex-officio Assistant Political Agent, Kolhapur.

THE following telegram has been received from the Political Resident, Aden, dated Sept. 26:—"Will impose quarantine at Aden and Perim against arrivals from Bombay."

At the Oothumna or third day ceremony performed on Tuesday in memory of the late Mr. Heerjeebhoy Hormusjee Sett, a sum of Rs. 15,500 was subscribed for charitable purposes by the members of his family.

MR. W. B. WRIGHT, Accountant, First Grade, and Honorary Assistant Examiner of Accounts, has been permitted to resign his appointment in the Public Works Department, with effect from March 28th, 1888.

BRIGADE-SURGEON H. V. CARTER, M.D., Indian Medical Service, is permitted to retire from the Service from August 31st, 1888, on a pension of £700 per annum, subject to Her Majesty's approval, and is granted the extra pension of £100 per annum under Clause 91, Indian Army Circulars, 1886.

THE Deccan Times says:—"There is reason to believe that Abdul Huq will return to Hyderabad by the end of the week. The order of the Nizam's Government has been regularly and officially forwarded to him, and being as yet an officer of this Government, seeing that he is only suspended, he will doubtless see fit to comply with the order."

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—"River falling and water supply deficient in Sind and crops suffering in consequence. Rain during week good throughout Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and beneficial to standing crops, but slight throughout Gujerat, Kattywar, and Konkan. Total rainfall generally insufficient, and more needed throughout the Presidency, especially in Gujerat, Kattywar, and parts of Khandesh and Nasik, where crops are withering. Standing crops damaged by insects in parts of Upper Sind Frontier and by blight in parts of Rutnagherry. Sowing of late crops progressing in parts of Hyderabad, Upper Sind Frontier, Ahmednugger, Poona, Bijapur, and Belgaum, and reaping of bajri in one taluka of Kaira. Agricultural stock good, except in parts of Hyderabad, Nasik, and Belgaum. Fodder scarce in parts of Khandesh, Nasik, Sholapur, Belgaum, Kattywar, and Baroda. Prices of food grains rising in parts of Kaira and Nasik, and of food grains and grass in Sholapur."

THE first report of the prospects of the cotton crop in the Bombay presidency for early districts up to the end of August, 1888, is as follows:—"Season late almost everywhere except in parts of Khandesh, and information incomplete. Khandesh.—Area 875,000 acres, that is, 50,000 acres below last year, but 25,000 acres above average. Prospects various: in places early rains seasonable, and crops promising; elsewhere rain backward, and sowing retarded, causing decrease in area. Crop adversely affected by long break. Rain is anxiously awaited. Ahmednugger.—Area 24,009 acres, that is, below last year's average, owing to want of rain for sowing. Crop withering. In other districts no comparison with former areas can be made owing to incomplete information. Reported areas are: for Nasik, 4,000 acres; Sholapur, 6,500 acres; Satara, 1,600 acres; and for Poona, 850 acres. Everywhere decrease is due to insufficiency of sowing rain, and everywhere crops are suffering. Deccan Jaghirs.—Area 1,926 acres; decrease everywhere except in Akalkot. In places there has been no rain for sowing, and the early crops are dying."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Sept. 26.)

THE BISHOP OF LAHORE will be travelling throughout the cold weather, bringing his tour to a close at Kurrachee on Easter Day.

THE LADY DUFFERIN FUND.—The Lucknow paper writes:—"The Maharani of Bulrampur has sent Colonel Erskine, the Commissioner of Lucknow, a subscription of Rs. 2,500 towards the building fund of the Women's Hospital to be erected in Lucknow, opposite the Bulrampur Hospital, in connection with the Lady Lyall Medical School. The Maharani has accompanied this gift with an expression of her warm appreciation of the great benefits which the women of India are certain to derive from the development of the humane schemes initiated by her Excellency the Countess of Dufferin; and has observed that her opinion is based on personal experience of a most pleasant and convincing kind, for during her recent illness she has experienced the great comfort and advantage from the ministrations of a trained female medical practitioner who went from Lucknow to attend upon her. It is satisfactory to know that a very generous support has been accorded to the scheme for constructing the 'Women's Hospital.' Without this Dr. Cleghorn's efforts to impart a sound practical training in nursing and midwifery can be but partially successful. But a number of charitable gentlemen of all ranks in the City, and in Oudh generally, have liberally responded to the application made to them for subscriptions. From Rs. 35,000 to Rs. 40,000 are required for the building and its furniture—Rs. 26,000 have already been subscribed, and the Committee is confident that the balance will be contributed."

LAUNCH OF A P. AND O. STEAMER.—A notable addition to the steam fleet of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation has been made by the launch of the Peninsular from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Caird and Co., Greenock, a firm that has built a large number of vessels for the same company. The Peninsular is between 5,000 and 6,000 tons register, and is designed to combine great speed with good carrying capacity and most luxurious and admirably appointed accommodation for first and second saloon passengers. This ship is intended for the mail service of the company between this country, India and China. A sister vessel, the Oriental, is well advanced towards completion, also at Messrs. Caird's yard.

THE POLICE AND CRIME IN BURMA.—A resolution by the Government of Lower Burma respecting the state of the police force in that province has been published. The Chief Commissioner expresses his intention of appointing a competent committee to inquire into the whole organisation of the police, and observes that this is a question which calls urgently for settlement, the present state of the force being eminently unsatisfactory. "If the evidence of statistics may be accepted, a process of deterioration has been going on during the last few years, unchecked by the various changes which have been made in the organisation of the force and by the rapid increase in expenditure which these changes have entailed." The resolution then reviews the history of the force during the past ten years, pointing out that the number of Indians in it has increased threefold. In 1878 it was composed of 5,150 Burmese and 1,602 Indians; in 1887 the numbers were 4,373 Burmese and 4,426 Indians; while in 1878 the total cost was a little over fifteen lakhs of rupees, and in 1887 23½ lakhs. "In spite of the increases which have been made from time to time in the number and pay of the police, and notwithstanding the rapid growth in expenditure, the efficiency of the force as an instrument for the prevention and detection of crime has steadily diminished." The figures show that since 1880 crime has been increasing, and the police have been less and less successful in dealing with it. Perhaps, pursues the resolution, this may be due to the growth of the system of employing Indians, a few of whom are placed in station for guard and sentry duties, and who make themselves obnoxious in many ways to their Native fellow-constables. The Burmese constables are not properly drilled, and in consequence of the distrust exhibited towards them, they take no pride in their work. Service in the police is unpopular, and only an inferior class of men enlist. The Chief Commissioner holds that the Burmese constable of 1888, on fourteen rupees per month, is inferior in courage, intelligence, and discipline to the constable of 1878, on eleven rupees. Nor have the Indian police improved in quality or training. The civil police belong to unwarlike castes, they are from necessity placed under Burmese sergeants, and they are valued chiefly because they are less likely to run away and abandon their arms when attacked than the Burmese. "It is obvious that the more this Indian element is increased, the less becomes the strength of the real police force properly so-called." The resolution goes on to appoint a committee to inquire into the whole subject, with power to extend their investigations beyond the points indicated, and to make what suggestions for improvement and reorganisation they think advisable.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.THE NATIONAL REVIEW.

The subject dealt with by Mr. Baumann in the first article of the present number of the National—the sweating system—yields to few in importance. The Committee of the House of Lords has done good service by instituting an exhaustive investigation into the whole subject, and, if personal accusations were not wanting, and if an unduly long period once and again elapsed between the making, and the refutation, of a charge, these incidents do not affect the general results of the inquiry, though they will doubtless be utilised to depreciate its value. For all practical purposes the woes of Messrs. Maple stand on the same level as those of Miss Cass. What is, above all things, brought into prominence, is the mischief, nay, the ruin, to British workers of the lower ranks which is caused by the indiscriminate admission into the country of pauper foreigners, especially of Jews. "Unskilled labour"—which is the only thing that foreign paupers can offer—"is to be got in any quantity . . . the price is kept at a ridiculously low level." . . . "A Jew glazier without a home is emigrated to Spitalfields . . . the Jewish Board of Guardians lend him a machine, and he is immediately a full-blown tailor" (pp. 153, 54). We have as yet heard of no steps, such as are taken in the United States, to prevent pauper immigration, being even contemplated by our own Government. But it is a safe prediction that, if our own workers are once brought to realise the actual effects on their interests of this influx of worthless aliens, we may expect an anti-alien crusade; and, more, particularly, such a "Judenhetze" (Jew baiting) as would gladden the heart of even that miserable fanatic, Herr Stöcker.

The noteworthy assembly at Oxford of nearly a thousand University Extension students for a ten days' sojourn was an experiment less bold in reality than in appearance. The genius loci of Oxford is propitious to study, and this the visitors to the world-renowned university cannot but have realised. "A Local Secretary" gives a very favourable account of the success of the gathering. The whole movement is, however, but in its second decade, and years more will be needed ere the innumerable details, the arrangement of which is indispensable to its permanent success, can be satisfactorily dealt with.

Closely connected with Oxford, from which emanated the great Church revival of 1830-1840, are the affairs of the Church. And, in considering these, the means with which the Church has, by the liberality of successive donors, been endowed, in order to enable her to carry out her mission, cannot be left out of sight. We all know how Henry VIII. dealt with ecclesiastical endowments. Mr. E. S. Norris gives us an account of the way in which the oldest ecclesiastical foundation now existing has been treated within the memory of many persons still living; when the Hospital of St. Katharine, founded in 1148 by King Stephen's pious wife, Matilda, was removed (temp. "Fum the Fourth") from the vicinity of the Tower to make room for some docks, which could as well have been placed elsewhere. It cannot surely be contended, in the face of late revelations as to the state of the East-end, that the locality of the original charity ought not primarily to benefit by its endowments. For this Mr. Norris argues, in an article to which we have but one objection to make. We should consider it monstrous to alienate any portion of revenues bequeathed expressly to the poor as a "true, free, and perpetual alms," to the overgrown clerical club which it is proposed to establish, under the name of Clergy House, at Westminster.

Captain Cameron always writes with authority on any subject connected with the Dark Continent, in which Englishmen, Germans, Frenchmen, and Italians, are all "looking out for Number One." His account of "Slavery in Africa" is an interesting as it is painful to read. No wonder the gallant Captain avows himself a fanatic in bringing about its suppression! It must, however, not be forgotten, that from one of the competing Powers, France, under whose flag nearly every slave dhow in the East African waters sails, the most uncompromising opposition to any measures to this end may be expected.

Mr. Watson vigorously assails (in his paper on "Some Literary Idolatries") the criticisms of Lamb and others, who admire the minor Elizabethan dramatists. It is, however, enough to ask, Whoever, nowadays, reads those criticisms? and to remember that Coleridge, who was assuredly, as a critic, equal to any of those who fall under Mr. Watson's lash, held very different opinions on this subject from his friend Lamb.

+ "Table Talk," Feb. 17, April 5, 1883, and March 15 and July 5, 1884.

In an article on "English Opera in Nubibus," Mr. Crowest makes a remark with which we cordially agree:—"It is beginning to be felt that, for a season or two, or even twenty, we might survive did we not hear another note of Italian opera." We have no lack of truly English composers, and should have none of excellent English singers did they but receive due encouragement. Mr. Sylvester gives a good rendering of Señora Bazan's description of Galician peasant women, and Mr. Holmes a pleasant sketch of Herbert Edwardes' services up to the Mutiny period. Finally, Mr. Gerald Massey contributes a—not too—learned article, one, too, eminently readable, on "Myths and Totemism."

THE ASIATIC QUARTERLY REVIEW.*

The request lately made by the Ameer of Afghanistan, that we should dispatch a special mission to his Court, and the (at least) temporary abandonment of that mission consequent on the revolt of Ishak Khan, recall attention to the affairs of Afghanistan, with especial advertence to the character and position of the present Ameer Abdur Rahman. The last number of the Asiatic Quarterly contained a well-considered forecast, by Mr. Boulger, of the "Next Phase of the Afghan Question," on which we commented at the time. In the present number, the opening article deals with the circumstances which led to Abdur Rahman's recognition as Ameer by the British Government, and to his installation as such; and, proceeding as the paper does from the practised pen of Sir Lepel Griffin, the principal English actor in the events which it records, it possesses no common interest. It is almost ancient history to say that Abdur Rahman was, with marvellous courage and foresight, selected for recognition as Ameer by Lord Lytton, to whose rare ability, displayed while Viceroy, scant justice has been done. Sir L. Griffin, while fully appreciating the boldness and statesmanlike prevision evinced in the Viceroy's policy, does not conceal that the circumstances made it a difficult one to carry out. The proposed Ameer, full of suspicion, and practically in the hands of fanatical followers ten times as suspicious as himself, had, at the very first interview, to be informed of the defeat brought about at Maiwand by "the crass imbecility and incompetence" of the officer in command, and, further, had to be persuaded to give his "active and instant co-operation" to the measures necessary to neutralise the military (and, still more, the political) effect of such a reverse. Sir L. Griffin narrates the circumstances as clearly as can be wished; and it will generally be felt, that few men but he could have conducted to a successful issue negotiations commenced under such unfavourable conditions. Especially interesting will be found his remarks on the character of the Ameer, "every inch a soldier," who said that he would rule "with the stick," and who has assuredly kept his word.

The so-called "National" Congress in India is the subject of some severe, but very sensible, observations by Uma Sankar Miska, who points out that political changes in India, except from one despotism to another, were unknown until the establishment of British supremacy, and that the "masses are politically untrained." What political training even the comparatively educated "classes" have is due to Lord Mayo, whose merits as Viceroy have never been duly recognised, though many will be inclined to question whether the premature encouragement of a desire for quasi-representative institutions should rank among them. The writer propounds, in this very able paper, a scheme for the gradual introduction, through Local Councils, into that of the Viceroy, of a very qualified form of representation. How far this would stand the test of experience we are hardly prepared to say. To us no more convincing proof of the inexpediency of needless change can be afforded than by the (most unwisely tolerated) seditious attitude of the Native Press. On this Mr. Carr Stephen, in his article, "Is India Loyal?" speaks a word in season! We do, he thinks, command the loyalty, though we have never taken trouble to deserve the "goodwill and sympathy," of the people of India. But even this loyalty the Native Press is striving to undermine. It may not "desire revolution," though doing its little utmost to promote it. But Mr. Stephen's belief, that the writers will not "so far forget their own interests as to endanger the security of the government under which they live," is ridiculous, unless confined to their power. Were they in a position to do real mischief, they would assuredly work it, not in the least realising, before the event, the cataclysm which they were contributing to bring about. This whole matter of the Native Press must, in short, be approached in a very different spirit from the mawkish sentimentalism which seems to be in the ascendant. Journals which deliberately defame Government officials should be relentlessly prosecuted, and a third conviction should entail the suppression of the paper, and the confiscation of its plant, and of the heavy caution-money, which each Native Paper should be required to deposit; the liability to lose said money would have a marvellously sedative effect.

In the course of a few remarks on "Medical Women in India," Mr. J. B. Rees gives instances from personal experience—and an ounce of fact is worth tons' weight of paper theorising—of having been asked, when outside India, to see and to prescribe for Mussalman women. He further refutes Miss Blake's assertion that Lady Dufferin's Fund is prone to employ "women very imperfectly qualified for their work;" showing that "medical tuition, medical relief, and the supply of trained nurses and midwives," are the aims of Lady Dufferin's Association, and that these objects are—in Madras, at any rate—steadily kept in view.

Captain Yate's paper on the Shans contains, perhaps, a larger share of novelty than any other contribution to the present number. The picturesque Shan country is, to a great extent, unknown, while its geographical position, coupled with its natural fertility, can hardly fail to bring it into prominence. It is remarkable that both here (p. 313), and, as we learn from General McMahon's notes "On the Effects of Civilisation in Burma," in Burma also (p. 285), education, if not compulsory in our sense of the term, has long since been practically so, owing to the exertions of the Buddhist monks.

Taking as his text, "The Mahratta Plough," Sir George Birdwood, after enthusiastically describing the beauties of his native land, Maharashtra, points out the eminent fitness of the simple implement for the soils on which it is used, and illustrates, by an amusing anecdote (p. 462), the absurdity of an attempt to supersede it by a Western—or rather (the steam plough being a Yankee "notion") to Mahrattas an Eastern—invention. This observation as to an individual case the able writer expands into a general, and by no means sparing, condemnation of the "spurious Indophiles" who desire to reconstruct India, in hot haste, à l'Européenne. European it will, we are rejoiced to think, never be, and would-be "reformers" of Indian traditional customs are likely to be nearest to true wisdom when, as regards any proposed change, they most ponder the sage suggestion, "Can't you let it alone?"

In Colonel Yule's notes on "Little-known Travellers in the East," and in Bishop Turner's Journals, we have narratives which, though relating to bygone times, are replete with interest. The "Episode of English Valour" given in the former paper (pp. 388-9) would alone make Colonel Yule's contribution worth perusal.

JAMES'S NAVAL HISTORY.*

For years "James's Naval History" has been a standard work of reference as regards the great naval battles which immortalised England during the last decade of the eighteenth and the first twenty years of the nineteenth century. Yet how few persons have ever read the work; nor is the reason difficult to find. In these days of pace and rapidity few can spare the time to wade through five ponderous volumes; and even the very shelves rebel against the consumption of space which so massive a compilation demanded at their hands. In these circumstances Mr. O'Byrne has conceived the happy notion of embodying in a single volume of moderate dimensions all the salient features of the original work, of which it is an epitome. A task of this nature presents difficulties neither few in number nor inconsiderable in weight. It is obvious that the omissions, though amounting in the aggregate to no less than four-fifths of the entire letterpress, must include nought which is interesting and valuable. A curtailment which curtails what is useful is worse than useless—it is fraught with injury. To attain the end in view sound judgment and keen discrimination are needed at every turn, and it is therefore no small modicum of praise to say that Mr. O'Byrne has succeeded most fully in the task which he has taken in hand. He seems to have an instinct as to what to omit and what to include; nor has he in any case spoilt the continuity of the original. Of course omissions are the order of the day, but the reader of the volume under review will have acquired a clear insight into the naval history of Great Britain during the period of its most glorious triumphs. The heroes of old—Howe, Hood, Duncan, St. Vincent, Bridport, Nelson, Camperdown, Exmouth, Duckworth and Sydney Smith—all appear on the scene fighting like bull-dogs, and conquering like heroes. Lesser warriors, too, dot the pages of glory; and when the work is laid aside a blush of pride will suffuse the face of every true son of Albion who can take delight in his country's greatness, and revel in the triumphs of her greatest sons.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1888.

HAPPY INDIA.—II.

SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, whose able and interesting contribution to the Asiatic Quarterly we noticed last week, is very Conservative regarding Oriental ways and ideas. He likes to take his stand upon those ancient ways, and to look well around and think and reason before allowing himself to be tempted into any new path, however attractive it may appear in the light of Western "progress" and "improvement." He evidently does not accept those terms as signifying in the East all that they are supposed to mean in the West. He prefers the Arcadian simplicity of a Dakhan village such as he depicts to all the advantages to be found in other localities, where Western ethics and philosophies have permeated and made the Hindu and Parsi "representative" types under British rule. Sir George in no way approves of the transformation from the older specimens of these races, and thus laments the change:—

Through this contact between the East and the West at the Presidency towns, the traditionary ideal of life among the Parsis and Hindus is gradually becoming superseded by the English ideal; according to which the basis of all social advancement and the standard of all moral worth is the possession of money. That hangs on the hazard of a rude competition, in the prizes of which but few, of the many called, are chosen to participate; and thus in the place of the old world content with the conditions of existence, we are arousing a universal spirit of discontent in India, the characteristic incentive of modern civilisation, and have needlessly exaggerated it through the malign influences of the fastidiously godless system of eleemosynary education enforced by us on the country. The dark shadow, as of the legendary Upas tree, on Western civilisation, is the slow poisoning, wherever it becomes rooted, of the vital atmosphere of the spiritual life latent in our human nature; and there was no necessity for anticipating, by a direct attack on the ancestral faiths of the people of India, led as it is by professedly Christian missionaries, the inevitable catastrophe that has everywhere dogged the steps of exclusively material civilisations, and at last involved them in self-destruction.

What will Exeter Hall and the many good people who spend thousands of pounds annually to "convert the heathen" say to the concluding sentences of the above? Sir George has the courage of his opinions, for in a note he reminds his Christian critics that the first and best triumphs of Christianity were won by absorbing and transmuting the classical paganism of Greece and Rome, and not by arrogantly defaming it, and that the true destiny of Christianity in India is not to destroy, but to purify Hinduism. If modern Christian apostles could only be brought to accept these truisms, the power of the missionary for good would be increased, although the missionary "Returns," showing the number of converts and the cost thereof, might have a very different appearance to the display which now delights those "telescopic" philanthropists who can discern unbelief and wretchedness in distant parts of the earth, but cannot see the despair, the poverty, the crime, and the utter want of faith and hope which is the damning destiny of millions crouching at their feet. So far we hold with Sir George Birdwood that the contact of the West with the East is not altogether to the advantage or good of the latter. That is to say, if from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which we have planted only the evil fruit be plucked—if the worship of money is to take the place of all other worship in the mind of the simple follower of the Mahratta plough—better far to cling to the older worship of the gods who his father told him brought the sunshine and the rain, and who blessed and banned at will. Better Hanuman than Plutus as the village idol. But those who have faith in human progress will not perhaps look upon impending changes and the breaking up of ancient institutions with the same fear as that which Sir George Birdwood would have all Iconoclasts feel. Out of the evil of change in the present they possibly hold that good will come in the future, and that in the end it will be better that the sweet simplicity of Cathay shall be intruded upon by the more realistic if rougher action of the West. We admit the beauty of the picture which Sir George draws of the social aspects of the Dakhan village, where all are as one family "living together that united life of contentment in moderation which is the perfection of human felicity," and where even the πυγιστόλος are to be found "loitering in the shadows of the big temple, not illicit, degraded, and depraved, but a recognised institution, established, endowed, and, indeed, sacramental."

Happy India! if it were and could remain this Arcadia of repose and contentment, and if there were no shadows there except those which lengthen under the light of Western innovations. But change is part and parcel of Life's law of existence, and Arcadia must be surrendered, though it be with sighs. Even the loss of Eden is no longer a matter of regret except to the poet, and then only in his song, not in his heart.

CAPTAIN HENRY HAY, Staff Corps, has been promoted Major on completion of twenty years' service.

BRIGADE-SURGEON H. V. CARTER, M.D., Indian Medical Service, has been permitted to retire from the service on a pension of £800 per annum.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL BURGESS, R.A., commanding Royal Artillery, Rurki, proceeds home by an early troopship on six months' sick leave.

MAJOR J. S. KING has been appointed to act as Second in Command of the Kolhapur Infantry Corps and ex-officio Assistant and Political Agent of Kolhapur.

THE Government of India have extended the grant of cooking prizes to British soldiers at hill depôts, the 1st prize of Rs. 10 and the 2nd prize of Rs. 5 being given to every 100 men of the summer strength per depôt.

In consequence of the cases of beer-poisoning last year the Government of India have sanctioned the supply of two porcelain capsules and 8 ozs. of copper foil to one station hospital in each division or district for the purpose of testing beer for the presence of arsenic.

MAJOR PATRICK DOYLE, Invalid Establishment, has been selected to pay Native military pensioners of the North-West Provinces Circle and to join the Allahabad Pay Office. Colonel P. Roddy, V.C., has been detailed to pay Native military pensioners in the Punjab Circle and to be at Rawalpindi.

MAJOR GARWOOD, now Superintending Engineer, Military Works, Quetta, will take charge of the Military Works, Rawal Pindi Command, during the absence of Colonel Beresford-Lovett, appointed to the command of the Royal Engineers of the Hazara Field Force.

THE Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that all soldiers belonging to the corps of the British Army under orders for active service with the Hazara Field Force named below, whose period of enlistment or whose period of Army service is about to expire, shall be detained, and their service prolonged for such further period not exceeding twelve months as may be found necessary:—3-1st South Irish Division, R.A., 2-1st Scottish Division, R.A., 2nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment, 2nd Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, 2nd Battalion Royal Irish Regiment, and 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders.

A CURIOUS memorial of the Thibetan war has found its way to Calcutta. This is a matchlock of primitive design which was picked up in the field some time ago, and which does not convey a very formidable idea of the armaments of the enemy. The weapon is comparatively new, and is a smooth-bore muzzle-loader, mounted on a long, narrow stock of the jhezail pattern. The barrel is fitted with a double pronged rest, the points of which are sharply shod, so that the rest may either be planted firmly in the ground, or used as a bayonet on occasion. The contrivance is certainly ingenious, and the weapon in some respects is not to be altogether despised. Attached to the gun is a belt on which are strung six hollow wooden plugs for powder charges, and a small horn for priming powder. The workmanship of the whole is very rough, and with hardly any attempt at ornamentation.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—An Army Circular notifies that, with the view of increasing the efficiency of the Hyderabad Contingent, certain changes in the conditions of service have been authorised. The number of British officers for each regiment will be increased from four to six, one to be added during the current year, and one during 1889-90. The batteries of the contingent will be linked together, and all enlistments, after the 31st of October, will be made for all four. Similarly the Cavalry regiments of the contingent will be linked together. The infantry will be linked in two regiments of three battalions each, the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd forming one regiment, the 4th 5th, and 6th the second. All enlistments in any battalion will be for all three battalions. The liability of recruits to transfer from battalions or regiments will only come into operation in case of war. An active and garrison reserve will be formed under Act 4 of 1888. These reserves will for the present be limited to the infantry. Free passes by rail will be granted to Native commission and non-commissioned officers proceeding on furough. All recruits enlisted elsewhere than at regimental headquarters will receive full pay from the date of enlistment, as well as marching batta or free carriage for baggage, to the date of joining. The good conduct pay of Rs. 2 per mensem now allowed after nine years' service will be given after six years' service. Good conduct pay of Rs. 3 per mensem will be allowed after ten years, instead of 15. The annual allowance in aid of half mounting is raised from Rs. 4 to Rs. 5, with effect from January 1st, 1888. The present invalid pension after twenty years' service is abolished prospectively for all soldiers enlisted after October 31st, 1887, and the ordinary pension will be granted on completion of twenty-one years' service. This pension will also be admissible after twenty-one years' service to all now in the service. The superior rate will be granted after thirty-two years' service. The scale of gratuities for short service commissioned and non-commissioned officers and men enlisted after October 31st next who may be discharged as unfit for further service will be for those above fifteen and under twenty-one years' service a gratuity of twelve months' pay of rank, including good conduct pay.

REORGANISATION OF THE COMMANDS AND STAFF IN INDIA.

The following Army Circular, dated Sept. 12, has been published:—

Under instructions from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India the Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify that Her Majesty's Government has approved of the Commands and Staff of the Army in India being reorganised as follows, with effect from Oct. 1, 1888:—

COMMANDS.

The senior commands in India will in future comprise only two classes, to be styled "1st Class Districts" and "2nd Class Districts," with fixed consolidated salaries of Rs. 3,500 and Rs. 2,200 per mensem respectively; and will be divided equally between the British and Indian services, except in Bombay, where the five second-class districts will be allotted in the proportion of two to the British and three to the Indian service. These rates of salary are provisional only, and are liable to be modified at any time should circumstances seem to require it.

The first class commands will be held by officers of the rank of Major-General, and the second-class commands by officers of the rank of Colonel (with the temporary rank of Brigadier-General); both classes being subject to the same conditions as now govern the incumbency of the existing divisional and district commands.

The junior commands will comprise:—

(1) Colonels on the Staff.—On a staff salary of Rs. 800 per mensem, in addition to Staff Corps pay of rank, and will be held for a limited tenure of five years:—In Bengal, 7; In Madras, 2; In Bombay, 1.

A Colonel on the Staff appointed to the command of a station will not be liable to supersession in that command.

When a Colonel on the Staff is absent from his command under circumstances which entail the appointment of a temporary successor, the latter will exercise command in addition to his other duties, and will receive the allowances of a second-class station command.

(2.) Second-Class Station Commands.—These will be held by the senior officer in the garrison, on a staff salary of Rs. 200 per mensem, in addition to regimental pay and allowances.

2. The redistribution of commands in the three Presidencies, consequent on the above changes, will be as follows:—

BENGAL.

Headquarters.—1. Allahabad, 2. Lucknow (Oudh), 3. Rawal Pindi, 4. Quetta, with existing territorial limits; 5. Meer Meer (Lahore), to include the stations of Jullundur, Phillour, and Ludhiana, within present limits; 6. Meerut, to exclude the station of Agra from present limits.

2nd Class Districts, 8.—1. Shillong (Assam), 2. Bareilly (Rohilkand), 3. Peshawur, 4. Abbottabad (Punjab Frontier Force), with existing territorial limits; 5. Port William (Presidency), to include the stations of Sambalpur (from the Nagpore Command) and Cuttack (from the Eastern District, Madras), within present limits.

6. Agra.—Bundelkand (Present Gwalior District).—To comprise the stations of Agra, Jhansi, Sipri, and Nowgong as its limits.

7. Jubbulpore.—Nerbudda (Present Saugor District).—To comprise the stations of Saugor, Jubbulpore, Sutna, Pashmarhi, and Hoshangabad (from the Nagpore Command) as its limits.

8. Umballa.—Sirhind.—To exclude the stations of Jullundur, Phillour, and Ludhiana from present limits.

STATION STAFF.

5. There will be four classes of Station Staff Officers (those at convalescent depots being classified in the second class), with the following staff salaries allotted to each:—

	Rs. per mensem.
1st class.....	250
2nd „	150
3rd „	100
4th „	50

The appointments of second and third class Station Staff Officers will continue to be held under the conditions now prescribed in the regulations for first and second class respectively, excepting that—

A.—A Station Staff Officer, first class, will be allowed, without reference to strength of garrison, permanently for all stations commanded by Colonels on the Staff, viz.:—

Bengal.—Cawnpore, Fyzabad, Sialkot, Ferozepore, Jullundur, Mooltan, and Delhi.

Madras.—Bellary and Bhamo.

Bombay.—Nusseerabad.

Officers holding these appointments, although in other respects subject to the rules governing the appointments of 2nd and 3rd class Station Staff Officers, will in the matter of leave and retention of pay while acting in other appointments, be treated as employed on the General Staff of the Army.

B.—A Station Staff Officer, 2nd class, will be allowed without reference to strength of garrison, permanently at—

(a) The headquarters stations of all first class District Commands.

(b) The headquarters stations of the following second class District Commands.

Bengal.—Rohilkand and Bundelkand Districts.

Madras.—Belgaum, Bangalore, and Myingyan Districts.

Bombay.—Bombay and Nagpore Districts.

(c) The following stations:—

Bengal.—Kohat, Dinapore, and Jhansi.

Bombay.—Ahmednugger and Neemuch.

C.—A Station Staff Officer, 3rd class, will be allowed permanently, without reference to strength of garrison, at—Madras.—Maymyo, Bernardmyo, Shwebo, Chindwin, Pymmana, and Pakoko.

7. Station Staff Officers of the 4th class will be authorised at all other stations where a 3rd or 4th class Station Staff Officer is under existing regulations allowed.

8. The existing distribution of the Commands and Staff in Upper Burma will not for the present be affected by this order, except as regards the pay of the Brigadiers-General serving there, who, in lieu of their present allowances, will, from October 1st, receive the consolidated salary of Rs.2,200 per mensem allotted to 2nd Class District Commands.

9. The prescribed tenure of appointment of General and Staff Officers now serving, who may continue to be employed under the revised distribution of Commands and Staff will reckon, under existing regulation, according to dates which will hereafter be specified.

10. The pay of the revised District and 1st Class Station Staff will, if available, be passed to officers from October 1st at the stations to which they are posted, whether permanently or as officiating, without regard to the dates on which they may join their new appointments.

HOLIDAY SEA TRIPS.—The immense benefits and enjoyment derivable from a trip on board a luxuriously-fitted modern steamer are leading a large number of people to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the well-known Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, whose steamers on the Eastern voyages touch at the Islands of the Mediterranean, Gibraltar, and Malta; at Marseilles, whence the Riviera or Algeria can be best reached; at Naples for Southern Italy, and at Alexandria, Port Said, and Ismailia for Egypt and the Nile. The entire change of scene and mode of life, the cheerful society and bracing air—in short, all the pleasures and advantages of a yachting cruise, without its discomforts—will, no doubt, render these trips fashionable with those whose means and leisure enable them to exchange the rigours of our winter for the sunny climes of the South.

INDIAN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—The German official trade journal (Deutsches Handels-Archiv) describes the Indian system of weights and measures as exceedingly confusing, not only because of the numerous different designations, but rather because the same designation may be applied to wholly different weights according to the article in question or the place where it is measured. A maund of barley is something different from a maund of indigo, or of cotton, a Bombay maund from a Calcutta maund. The standard weight of a seer is 5,040 grains, but that of five seers is not $5 \times 5,040$, but $5 \times 4,900$ grains, because the latter is regarded as 1-40th of the Bombay maund. The Government of Bombay drew the attention of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce to this inconvenience, and the Chamber agreed that five seers should be the equivalent of five times one seer, in place of something else.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KATE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth;
but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.England—per annum £1 0 0. In advance,

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions."The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements.""The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and working the rich copper mining property now called the Excelsior Mines, near West Broughton, County Megantic, Province of Quebec, Canada.

The property consists of 4,100 acres of rich mineral land, comprising 2,800 acres freehold, and 1,300 acres of mining rights, held in perpetuity from the Government, there being on the freehold part twelve finished principal shafts, varying in depth from two hundred to three hundred feet, with the exception of two, which are only 25ft. and 32ft. deep respectively. All are double compartment shafts. Galleries and tunnels on the top of and in the veins of copper in the mines, run considerable distances, one being 1,480 feet, while there are several galleries one or two hundred feet long. In these immense bodies of ore are in sight.

On the property already is a large quantity of machinery, plant and tools, and the extra machinery required to bring the mines into full working order, and to furnish an output of 100 tons of ore a day, together with additional buildings for same, would cost, it is estimated, £15,000. This machinery would give an immediate return of 160 tons of ore a day.

Labour in the district is plentiful and cheap, ordinary miners receiving from 4s. to 6s. a day.

There are buildings on the premises, giving ample accommodation for many men on the works, and within two miles of the mines stands the populous village of West Broughton, where an abundance of labour can be obtained.

The veins, as may be seen from the reports referred to below, vary from 2 feet to 7 feet in width, are well defined, and consist of very high-grade and valuable copper ores, technically termed "bornite," but known in the trade as "peacocks," "horseflesh," "grey silve," and copper "glance" ores, and assaying from 20 per cent. to 75 per cent. of metallic copper. Besides these veins, there are two distinct beds of copper at a depth of about 90 feet, one showing a thickness of 10 feet and another of 3 feet. With long galleries, possessing a large face, the beds could be worked after the manner of an open quarry, giving out immense quantities of ore, this ore being brought by a tramway into a neighbouring shaft, already constructed, and then by a shoot into an adit existing at the present moment at the base of the hill. The quantity of ore available is practically illimitable, the tests made throughout the property, by shafts and cuts, showing the immense extent of the ore bodies.

A good road runs from the mines to Broughton Station, on the Quebec Central Railway, about seven miles from the mine, but a siding can be put in at once, for a small cost, from Broughton to the mining property. An "air line" running close to the property is also in process of construction. Through rates for ore from Broughton by rail, via Port Louis to Liverpool or Swansea, or via Boston and St. John's, New Brunswick, or Halifax, Nova Scotia, vary, according to the season, from 20s. to 24s. per ton.

The well-known firm of Messrs. Vivian and Sons, Swansea, have entered into a contract to take the output of the Mines, at the ruling price of copper in the Metal Exchange, up to one hundred tons of ore per day, or ten thousand tons of metallic copper per annum for three and a half years, with option of three more years.

Assays have been made from various quantities of the ore as follows:—
Messrs. VIVIAN and SONS, Swansea (May 7, 1888), on a sample of specimens furnished them:—

METALLIC COPPER	60 per cent.	56 per cent.

Messrs. JOHNSON, MATTHEY and CO., Assayers and Melters to the Bank of England, Her Majesty's Mint, &c. (June 23, 1888):—

Mr. J. T. DONALD, M.A., Professor of Chemistry, Analytical Chemist and Assayer, 124, St. James's-street, Montreal (June 27, 1888):—

	Sample No. 1.	Sample No. 2.
COPPER	40.19 per cent.	41.95 per cent.

Mr. LUCIUS PITKIN, Assayer, 138, Pearl-street, New York (Dec. 15, 1887):—
COPPER (WET ASSAY) 44.31 per cent.

The following very satisfactory extracts are taken from the reports which have been made as to Mines, the originals of which can be seen at the Offices of the Company:—

Mr. J. OBALSKI, Government Mining Engineer of the Province of Quebec, Graduate of L'Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Mines de Paris, Quebec, Dominion of Canada, under date of 6th July, 1888—of whom the Hon. J. A. Chapleau, Secretary of State for the Dominion of Canada, writes:—"His reports are amongst the most valuable documents filed with the Government,"—says, after carefully giving the result of his examination of the Mines in detail:—"These are not accidental deposits, but are rather a wide field of fissures filled with mineral and interstratified beds. The property has a great value, proved by the work already done and by the high percentage of the ore. As stated above, I consider that there exists other beds and veins not yet discovered, and I have no doubt that the property, with proper plant and management, will give a large output. My opinion is confirmed by those of eminent geologists and engineers who have visited the property."

Colonel GAY, who was sent out specially to examine the mines and report upon them, says, under date of June 29, 1888:—"I have closely examined the shafts and tunnels of these mines, and, having regard to their extent, their proximity to sea and rail, the cheapness of working, and the immense quantity of high-grade ore in them, I consider the property is of very great and certain value, and it cannot fail to yield most satisfactory results in working."

Mr. SAMUEL FOOTE, Editor and Proprietor of the Montreal Shareholder, the principal financial paper in Canada, having personally visited these mines, thus writes on June 29th, 1888:—"With good supervision the mine will prove to be what all experts, from Sir William Logan downwards, who have examined them have declared them to be, i.e., as rich as any in the whole world. The English Company taking them over will secure a splendid prize."

Sir WILLIAM LOGAN, late Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, says in his Governmental report:—"The Leeds copper bearing rocks are exposed in a great number of places. In driving the lower cross-cut, quartz was met with, from which were taken 50 tons of rich ore, yielding 48 per cent.; on the 15th lot of the 14th range a shaft was sunk on a remarkable vein, which cuts a band of slate and contains vitreous copper and native gold."

Mr. CHARLES T. JACKSON, late Geologist and State Assayer, Boston, Massachusetts, reports:—"The copper ores of these mines exist in the state of interstratified beds. It is upon the interstratified beds, which are of great dimensions, and extend to the strata to unknown depths, that the mine chiefly relies. These beds are very thick in one locality, certainly more than 10 feet, for they have been cut in to that extent without finding their borders. The ores are, first, copper pyrites, containing 34 per cent. of copper; erubescite or purple ore, containing from 60 to 70 per cent., and copper glance, or vitreous copper ore, containing 78 per cent."

Mr. GEO. H. PIERCE, Agent of the Halifax Copper Mine, writes:—"On the whole I look upon these Copper Mines as of the richest, if not the richest, in Canada, and I believe there is a great future before them, and many years of labour will require to be spent before the deposit will be sensibly diminished."

Dr. LEWIS P. BOURKE, Geologist and Assayer, says:—"I have carefully examined this Copper Mining property, and can say it is one of the most wonderful copper regions it has ever been my fortune to visit. My opinion of the property is that it is capable of producing larger results in profit than any copper mine now known on this Continent."

The estimated profits on an output of 100 tons a day may be calculated as follows:—Cost of labour, fuel, &c., in getting out 100 tons of ore, freight to England, including cartage to Broughton Railway Station, £375.

At per ton of metallic copper	...	£35	£26	£24 10s.	£20	£33
Selling price of 100 tons of ore at 80 per cent.	...	748	1,342	1,685	1,741	2,100
of copper per ton, delivered at Swansea	...	375	375	375	375	375
Deduct cost delivered at Swansea or Liverpool of 100 tons of 80 per cent. ore	...	375	375	375	375	375

Leaving a net profit per item of ... £371 £267 £1,210 £1,366 £2,821
Assuming, therefore, that an average price of £35 a ton for copper is realised, the amount available for yearly dividend, reckoning 300 working days to the year, would be ... £111,400

If the price of copper stood at £26 a ton, it would be ... £220,100
While, should copper be quoted at £20 a ton, the yearly profits would rise to ... £54,900

In any case an immense return upon the capital invested may be anticipated.

The following is a list of the best known copper companies dealt in on the London Stock Exchange:—

Name of Company.	Share Capital.	Per Value.	Market Value.	Mortgage Bonds.	Total Capital.
Rio Tinto	£3,250,000	£10	23 1/2	£3,371,600	£6,621,600
Mason and Barry	1,851,640	10	11 1/2	nil.	3,551,610
Cape Copper	600,000	2	5 1/2	nil.	600,000
Copiapó	200,000	2	3 1/2	nil.	200,000
Namagata	210,000	2	3 1/2	nil.	210,000
Tharsis	1,250,000	2	6 1/2	400,000	1,650,000
Panulcino	200,000	2	8 1/2	nil.	200,000

The Vendor, Mr. James Naismith Greenshields, originally agreed to sell the property to the London and County Financial Association (Limited), but such agreement has since been cancelled by two agreements, dated Sept. 27, 1888, between this said Association and the Vendor; and by a deed of sale of the same date the Vendor has sold the property to the Excelsior Copper Company (Limited), for £400,000, out of which all expenses of promotion, &c., are paid up to allotment in shares of cash and shares. The contract between Messrs. Vivian and Sons, of Swansea, and the Excelsior Copper Company (Limited), is dated Oct. 5, 1888.

Plans of the property, reports and samples of ore, together with photographs of the buildings, &c., on the property, can be seen at the offices of the Excelsior Copper Company (Limited), 2, Copthall-buildings, London, E.C.; or at the offices of the Solicitors to the Company.

Prospectus and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained from the Bankers, Brokers, Solicitors, and at the offices of the Company.

In cases where no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned in full, and when a less amount is allotted than applied for, the balance of the application money will be applied to the amount due upon allotment.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 5th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 3rd October; and from Calcutta to the 2nd October.

THE Cabul Mission still hangs in the balance, no new development having occurred during the last few days. With Ishak still showing a bold front in Afghan-Turkistan and Badakshan, the matter may remain in abeyance for some time to come.

CAPTAIN DURAND, writing from Chitral on Sept. 18, states that the Chief gave him a most hospitable reception. Dr. Robertson was treating patients who were crowding in to see him. There was no further news as to Ishak having entered Badakshan.

THE latest news from Cabul, dating Sept. 28, states that Gholam Hyder, Orakzai, with the Bamian column was still at Haibak, where he had been joined by Abdulla Khan's forces from Khinjan on the 23rd. Ishak Khan would really seem to have left Khanabad, as that place is reported to be in the hands of Abdulla Khan's men.

GENERAL MCQUEEN will have supreme political as well as military authority during the Black Mountain Expedition. The Political Officers attached to the force are Colonel Ommauney, officiating Commissioner of Peshawur; Mr. Cunningham, Deputy Commissioner; Lieutenant Inglis, Assistant Commissioner of Hazara; and Mr. Davies, of the Punjab Police. This will give one Political to each of the four columns.

FAZUL ALI, the agent of the Khan of Agror and the supposed instigator of most of the outrages in Agror, has escaped from the Haripur tahsil. He will probably join Hassain Ali, and counsel him to resist the terms offered to the tribes.

AFTER driving the Tibetans from Nimla Ridge, on the 24th ultimo, our troops advanced the same afternoon upon the Jalep Pass, and captured the two sungars barring the road. Colonel Bromhead, who was among the wounded, has lost his right hand. The column which moved upon Entchi, nominally to support but really to secure the person of the Sikkim Raja, found after a hard night's march that he had gone off to join the Tibetans in company with the Catsuperi monk, who occupies in Sikkim politics much the same platform as the Tinedah Mengyi in Theebaw's Government. The detailed accounts of the fight show that the Tibetans must have lost altogether in killed, wounded, and prisoners nearly 1,000 men. Arrangements are to be made at once for withdrawing the force from Sikkim, but a small garrison will be left at Gnatong during the winter, special provision being made for their comfort. Guntok also will probably continue to be held. The Sikkim Field Force have been honoured with a message from the Queen, asking after the health of those wounded in the engagement of the 24th ultimo.

LATEST reports from Gnatong go to confirm the original impression that the Tibetans will make no effort to rally their forces with winter rapidly approaching. The efforts of our Political will now be directed mainly to establishing cordial relations with the Chinese Ampa, whose influence at Lhasa may be, expected to rise rapidly since the discomfiture of the war party.

In the Legislative Council the Hon. General Chesney introduced a Bill repealing certain enactments relative to the purchase of regimental necessaries from soldiers.

THE Staff College Dinner took place at the United Service Club on Thursday night, Sept. 27. The Commander-in-Chief presided, and some twelve officers were present, including Generals Elles, Chapman and Collen, Colonel Boyle, Rifle Brigade; and Major Cooper. General Elles proposed the health of the Commander-in-Chief, who replied in a speech in which he dwelt upon the importance of the training acquired at the college, though that in itself was not all that officers must depend upon in their career. His Excellency concluded by proposing success and prosperity to the Staff College, General Elles returning thanks.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD has arrived at Simla to resume the duties of Military Secretary to the Viceroy from Major Cooper, who has been officiating.

MR. JOHN NEILL, Commissioner of the Jubbulpore Division, officiates as Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, vice Mr. R. Crosthwaite, employed on the Crawford Commission; and Colonel Bowie, Inspector-General of Police, acts for Mr. Neill.

COLONEL MALLOCK, Director-General of Telegraphs, proceeds this month on three months' tour in Persia, to inspect the Indo-European line, which is now in the hands of the Government of India. Mr. Brooke will carry on the work of Director-General.

COLONEL R. P. NISBET, C.I.E., is to be the next Resident at Kashmir.

THE committee which was appointed to consider the offers of the Punjab Chiefs to take part in the defence of the North-West frontier have prepared their report, which will be presented to the Government of India shortly.

THE terms of the Government of India's despatch upon the Public Service Commission's Report were, it is stated, decided upon at last week's Council meeting. The fullest consideration has been given to this subject.

THE Nizam has written to Sir Syed Ahmed approving of the objects and aims of the Patriotic Association, and has given a donation of Rs. 4,000 towards its fund.

IN accordance with a special army circular, dated the 12th ultimo, from the 18th inst. the future designation of the Poona Command will be Poona District.

THE offices of Assistant Adjutant-General, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Brigade-Major will be amalgamated under the title of District Staff Offices.

THE 7th (Princess Royal's) Dragoon Guards celebrated their bicentenary at Umballa on the 1st instant.

It is understood that the Railway Conference adopted a new set of rules and regulations for working lines under construction, and new standard dimensions.

COLONEL MARSHALL, Private Secretary to the Nizam, has placed his resignation in his Highness's hands, and takes furlough from the 15th of November.

THE new barracks at the West Ridge, Rawal Pindi, will be ready for occupation during the coming winter, and four mountain batteries with one battalion of infantry will be located there.

DURING the month of August 11,617 bales and 7 bags of cotton, weighing 4,542,496 lbs., and valued at Rs. 11,11,498, were shipped from Bombay.

THE Government cash balances at the end of August amounted to 1,328 lakhs, compared with 1,183 at the same date last year.

BABA KHEM SINGH, C.I.E., has made an offer of service in connection with the Black Mountain Expedition and the Cabul Mission, which has been cordially acknowledged by Government.

NOTES.

WE give the full news received from India by wire in another column. It is satisfactory to learn that no further fighting is likely to occur on our frontiers, and that the work of the two military expeditions has, for the present, at least, been brought to a satisfactory conclusion.

THE following were the terms offered to the tribes of the Black Mountain, and which, had they accepted before noon October 2nd, would have prevented any further bloodshed or destruction of villages and crops:—

The Hassanzai clan to take from Hassim Ali and deliver up his two British captives; to pay a fine or give Rs. 1,000 in cash, arms, or cattle, or give up the following men at proportionable remissions:—Hassim Ali, Rs. 3,500; Sikandar Khan, Rs. 500; Sheikh Ata Mahomed, Rs. 500. The Turabaz to pay Rs. 300 for allowing the Hindustanis to cross the Indus; delivery of two hostages from their sections; unmolested march of troops through the country; future responsibility for Chief; freedom of movement for troops along the British boundary. If Hassim Ali is surrendered villages of the Khan Khel will be spared. The Akazais are assessed at a fine of Rs. 4,000. The surrender of Goojurs who attacked Major Battye will be accepted in part payment; two hostages from their sections; delivery of the arms, &c., taken from Major Battye's party; the abandonment of proprietary rights in Shahtoot; the unmolested march of troops; the destruction of Chauras; responsibility for Khankher Chief, and freedom of movement for our troops along the boundary. The Tikariwals are fined Rs. 1,000, and will furnish hostages if necessary. The other tribes have been informed that Government has no quarrel with them, but will punish them also if they join.

THE Hassanzais and Akazais preferred some fighting before accepting the above condition, and it was necessary for the punitive Expedition to make clear to them that the British Government was in earnest. So General McQueen and his troops had to do their duty, and they have done it excellently well, notwithstanding all that the home Radical papers have been saying about British "barbarity" in shooting some of the so-called "simple minded villagers" and destroying their crops.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON and the Total Abstinence agitators will be pleased to learn that the Black Mountain Expedition has been apparently conducted on teetotal principles. The Highlanders, it is reported, had been without beer or rum for twelve days. But then the report goes on to say "two rifles were stolen from their camp at Oghi." Can this mean that too much sobriety is not conducive to vigilance on the part of Scotch soldiers?

BE this as it may, a correspondent writing to one of the Bombay papers complains that the Indian-brewed beer, which is now the daily drink of 60,000 European soldiers in India, "is not palatable to the soldier, and produces drowsiness," and he more than hints that there is something wrong in the brewing. "A beer that produces a drowsiness of an unnatural kind is very probably due to the use of a narcotic, or if not a narcotic, then a sedative drug." The insinuation against the Indian brewers will possibly be very easily disposed of by themselves and the testing officers, but the writer has a philanthropic motive in view. He would substitute for beer Cape or Australian light wines, and thinks that a large supply might be annually obtained of these "if Government would offer a contract." Possibly, and possibly also the contributor might contract. He is candid enough, however, to allow that the demand for the recommended beverages would be limited at first, as it would take some time to educate the palate of the British soldier to relish such light wine.

WE should think so. Fancy Tommy Atkins asking at the regimental canteen for a glass of light Cape wine, and "preferring it," as the contributor says he would, "to any other liquor!" Tommy may give up his spirit dram in India, and perhaps wisely so, or he may wiser still become a teetotaler; but if he wishes for anything stronger than water or tea and coffee he will hardly take to the wine recommended, even though it be true, as the contributor assures him, that "it will preserve the stamina of the soldier because of its aid in alimentation, and this improved stamina will enable him to resist insanitary influences." Tommy will prefer the insanitary influences.

THE Pioneer says that it is practically decided that Colonel R. P. Nisbet, C.I.E., shall be the next Resident at Kashmir. As Commissioner of the Rawul Pindi Division, whose borders are conterminous with those of Kashmir, Colonel Nisbet has long had official relations with that State, which have worked the more smoothly from his long friendship with its late ruler, and the respect with which he is regarded by his son and successor. A man of large experience, of good administrative capacity and calm resolution, he is just the type of Resident who, if properly supported—and to be of any use he must be supported—will carry the weak but well-meaning Maharaja with him in the endeavour to substitute good government for the system of intrigue, plunder, and wrong which has too long usurped its place in a favoured but unfortunate country.

THE same journal adds that one of the things that the new Resident in Kashmir might see to is that the names of the Maharaja's two brothers, Rajahs Ram Sing and Umar Sing, are removed from the list of defaulters on the Indian Turf, in which they are now unpleasantly conspicuous. The Rajas, we believe, urge that, as far they are concerned, all their liabilities have been discharged in full, and that the money must have somehow "stopped" on its way to the right hands. But it might be explained to them that it is not the fault of the creditors, and that, in any case, it is hardly worth while appearing on the black list at every racecourse in India for the sake of a petty sum. A thousand rupees would cover the whole.

MR. ROBERT STEEL, of Calcutta, who ought to know, for he is one of the projectors, denies the statement that the Deli-Kalka Railway scheme is likely to collapse on account of financial difficulties. Mr. Steel says that the Company which is being formed will be brought out simultaneously both in London and Calcutta next month; that half the required capital has been promised, and that the whole will be guaranteed by financial houses at home. The idea of interesting the Native community in railway extensions by endeavouring to place some of the shares in India is still theoretically attractive.

LORD DUFFERIN has within seventeen years received another advance in the peerage for services rendered to the State. He is now Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, taking the latter name by special command of Her Majesty, who evidently does not hold the opinion of some of her Radical subjects that the annexation of Burma has been a discredit to her reign and a disgrace to those officials by whom it was planned and carried out.

THE committee composed of the Commander-in-Chief General Chesney, and the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, which has been considering the offers of the Punjab Chiefs to assist in the defence of the frontier, have drawn up their report, which will shortly be submitted to the Government of India for approval. The desirability of meeting the wishes of the various Durbars, that the services of British officers should be placed at their disposal to assist in reorganising portions of their armies has been acknowledged, and it only remains for Government to give effect to the recommendations of the Committee.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 21.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 18th inst., a Bill to amend the law relating to fraudulent trade marks on merchandise was introduced. The Bill follows the English Act, and affords protection to the manufacturers of all countries.

An Agricultural and Industrial Exhibition was opened by the Maharajah at Mysore on the 17th inst.

A Parsee Orphanage was opened at Bombay on the 20th, the donor, Mr. Nesserwanjee Manickjee, having endowed the institution with Rs. 800,000.

In Bombay a widow, her daughter, and her grandson have been murdered. An open verdict was returned, and there is no trace of the murderer.

Selected officers have been appointed to advise the Punjab chiefs on the reorganisation of their contingents.

A food riot took place at Bimlipatam on the 19th inst., when 300 bags of grain were looted. The police force being insufficient, the Volunteers were called out, and the disturbance was quelled.

The Mysore representative assembly met on the 17th inst. The Minister reviewed the past year's administration. The total revenue amounted to 132 lakhs, and the expenditure to 117 lakhs.

The Maharajah of Benares is dangerously ill.

Chapters of the Star of India and of the Indian Empire were held at Simla on the 14th inst. The Rajah of Vipmer was invested with the Grand Cross, and Sir A. C. Lyall with the dignity of Knight Commander of the Star of India; while the Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan, Sir W. Molesworth, Sir F. Hogg and Sirdar Allar Singh received the decoration of Knight Commander of the Indian Empire.

Severe scarcity is threatened in Jeysulmere, Mullani, and parts of Marwar. Considerable damage has been occasioned in other parts of India both by floods and by the deficiency in the rainfall.

In a lecture delivered at Simla Major Anderson has strongly urged the attaching of two machine-guns to each company of infantry. The effect of the fire at their battle of Kotkai is described as terribly severe.

Anti-Congress meetings have been held at Peshawur and Dacca. The movement was condemned as dangerous, and it was resolved unanimously that Mahomedans should keep aloof from it.

A Lahore newspaper contains an interesting account of an interview with the Rajah of Bhinga on the subject of the Native Congress. The following is a précis of some of the Rajah's opinions:—Danger would begin if the movement should gain hold of the Rajpoots, Sikhs, and other fighting classes. It was surprising to all loyal men that the Government should act as though it were unconscious of this risk, and should allow treason and sedition to be poured forth continually from the platform and the Press. To the majority this tolerance conveyed an impression of feebleness. The primary cause of the agitation was the high collegiate education of all classes at the expense of the State. The body of agitators consisted of discontented failures in the middle and lower classes. The claim of the Congress was presumptuous and unwarranted, and the delegates were chiefly pleaders and half-educated students. If the Congress agitators gained influence they would speedily create dissension and disorder. The questions on which the various peoples of India agreed were of the smallest importance as compared with those on which they fundamentally differed, and to tamper with the last would set the country in a blaze. There was no ideal form of government. The people of India had never shown any wish for popular government.

The Congress publications contain false and unfair representations regarding the English officers of the Government. In one of these publications there is a scurrilous libel on the Resident at Hyderabad.

A resolution passed at a meeting in connection with the annual report of the working of municipalities in Berar severely condemns the apathy of the Government. In some cases it is asserted that the accounts have never even been audited. There is passive acquiescence in preventable evils. Local self-government means the right to misgovern one's immediate neighbour, without being accountable when the duties of this position have been neglected.

Another case of the suicide of a child-wife is reported from Calcutta.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 21.

The Ameer will proceed at once to Turkestan to re-establish his authority, to investigate the history of the secret intrigues which fomented the recent revolt, and to reconstitute on a stable basis his civil and military government.

The details received of the battle fought at Tashkurgan between the Ameer's troops and those of Ishak Khan prove how perilously near the Ameer's general was to a disastrous defeat. The crowning success was almost entirely due to the deadly effect of the Martini rifle. The force under Gholam Haidar, the Ameer's officer, consisted of four cavalry and thirteen infantry regiments, and twenty-six guns. Ishak's force was superior in numbers. The battle commenced on the 29th, when a division commanded by Abdullah Khan, Governor of Badakshan, was utterly routed by Ishak's general. Gholam Haidar, nothing daunted, then delivered a determined attack on the enemy's main body, and, after overcoming a desperate resistance, completely defeated them with a loss of 1,600 killed, their artillery, baggage, and camp being captured. He then attacked and captured Mahomed Hosain's victorious division, and on the 30th occupied Mazari Sherif, where Ishak's general, Mahomed Hosain, was brought in a prisoner. Ishak had fled to Kerki, in Bokharan territory, where he had purchased some land with the consent of the Russian authorities. His three brothers, who had been arrested at an earlier date at Cabul, have been sent by the Ameer to Peshawur, whence they will be despatched to Rawul Pindi. The Ameer's troops have now occupied Andkhai and Shibirkan, and the whole of Afghan Turkestan is quiet.

SIMLA, OCT. 21.

The Ameer, having decided to visit Turkestan to organise the administration vacated by Ishak, has requested that the mission may be postponed till after his return.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 21.

The concerted resistance by the Black Mountain tribes has been well-nigh crushed. The expedition has throughout been most skilfully handled by General M'Queen. He has been ably supported by the energy and daring of Generals Channer and Galbraith. The work is not quite over, as some of the tribes have failed to make a complete submission. It was ultimately decided, after some division of opinion, that it was indispensable to occupy the Machai Peak. A force will also be despatched to occupy Thakot. The Akazais have been punished, their principal villages, Upper and Lower Khand, having been burnt. The ascendancy of the Hindoostani colony has been destroyed by the battle of Kotkai and the razing of the fortress of Maidan. Hashim Ali is in hiding, and is completely discredited with the Hassanais.

The attitude of the Chagarzais is one of passive hostility. The son of one of their principal chiefs was killed in a recent skirmish. It is necessary to compel them to make an open submission. The river column will shortly move on Derbeanner, whence the most populous portion of the Akazai and Chagarzai country can be dominated, and the plain below can be swept by artillery.

General Channer succeeded after a most difficult march in joining hands with the river column. The force descended 7,000ft. The enemy had prepared rows of huge rocks to be hurled down on the force when returning, but the General evaded this danger by adopting for his return a new route, pointed out by the prisoners. General Channer commands the newly-constituted advance column. All the troops are now luttled.

The first column has twice distinguished itself. On the first occasion, near Chittabut, on the 6th inst., Colonel Vincent being in command of the British force, the tribesmen were driven headlong from their stronghold, after a fierce struggle at close quarters, by the Northumberland Fusiliers and the 3rd Sikhs, commanded by Colonel Hammond. Revolvers were freely used, and sixty of the enemy were killed. The bandmaster of the Fusiliers distinguished himself conspicuously by his gallantry. Again, on the 17th, Saidara was attacked by a party of the Northumberland Fusiliers and the 5th Goorkhas, under Lieutenant Fayer. The bandmaster, who again showed conspicuous bravery, was wounded. The poles of the ambulance chair which had accompanied Major Battye were found, the discovery proving the complicity of the village in the attack upon him. The village was burnt.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 21.

The Rajah of Sikkim has arrived in Gantok. Orders have been issued to provision the whole force to November 15th. Snow has fallen at Gnatong. The wounded, including the Tibetans, are doing well. The prisoners have been released, and expressed gratitude for the generous treatment accorded them. Preparations are being made for withdrawing the force. The Pioneers, however, are to remain during the winter.

The Tibetan army was apparently composed of troops furnished from all the various tribes scattered over the whole of the Tibetan provinces. The Sava troops are the most important. These come from distant regions as far away as the borders of China, and some were more than three months in reaching Rinchagong. They made the last advance with the object of influencing the Ampan to secure favourable terms in the forthcoming negotiations.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

RICE SPECULATIONS IN BURMA.

(Rangoon Times.)

The amount of speculation going on in rice and paddy in Rangoon during the year must be enormous, and few people outside of the trade have any idea of its extent. We believe speculators have bought and sold something like half a million bags, or 50,000 tons, for delivery in the course of the next three weeks. The brokers should be making a good thing out of these constant speculations, a delivery order or bought and sold note sometimes going through half-a-dozen hands before the date of delivery, and when that time arrives the speculator last holding it pays and receives the difference at the market price of the day, without the least wish or intention of getting any rice. Bags of rice are as convenient for gambling with as dice, and shares, or race horses, that is, when you do not have to hand them over each time you want to play. September, it is said, will be a somewhat rough month for some of our speculators. We hope things may not be as bad as they have been reported to us, and that next month will not be worse in the matter of settlements than some of the previous months of the present year. Gambling, we presume, there will always be, in all trades and occupations, and so long as speculators have funds to meet their engagements, only the losers have grounds for complaint. What the general public have more concern about is, that there is apparently plenty of food grain still in the province, and that there is no probability of there being such a scarcity in the rice ports as to send up the price unduly, before the next early crop comes in towards the close of the year. In Upper Burma, in many parts, the price is nearly at famine rates, but this is principally due to the difficulty and expense of conveying food to such parts from more accessible situations, where, generally, supplies are ample if prices are somewhat high.

A BENGAL-MADRAS RAILWAY.

(Englishman.)

The air is thick with railway projects. Authorities may differ as to the route to be followed by the proposed new line through Bengal, but all are agreed as to the necessity for increasing the railway facilities of this province. The cry for railroad extension is not confined to one quarter. The public of the Madras Presidency have suddenly discovered a deep interest in this branch of material progress, and are pressing their object with an energy which thoroughly deserve success. No less than eight new lines have lately been proposed for construction, and in each case a survey has already been made and an estimate prepared, while those rival systems, the Madras Railway Company and the South Indian Railway, are actively competing for the construction and control of the new undertakings. A popular agitation, which seems to have arisen out of the general dissatisfaction caused by the irregularities and delays of the coasting steamers, has been excited, and has taken the form of public meetings in many of the towns on the western shore of the Bay of Bengal. Mr. Turner, the energetic collector of Vizagapatam, after fully exposing the shortcomings of the coast mail service, is now heading the movement which has for its object the construction of a trunk line of railway along the east coast. The proposed line, which Mr. Turner states that he has shown—"to the preliminary approval of the Government of India and to the acceptance of his own Government"—to be a sound and profitable undertaking, is to be primarily laid from Bezvada, near Masulipatam, to Cuttack, connecting the coast ports between those places. Eventually the line will be carried southward to Nellore, whence it will have communication via the South Indian system with other coast ports to the extremity of the Peninsula. It is proposed, also, that it shall be extended northward to Calcutta from Cuttack via Balasore, Midnapore, and the Hughli Bridge, on a plan submitted by Sir Guildford Molesworth.

The project is a grand one, and it is almost startling to find the "benighted" Presidency putting forward so bold a proposal. We should almost have thought that the people of Madras would look with some doubt and jealousy upon the construction of a through line to Calcutta, which would tend to draw the produce of their province away from a coast where the business of exportation is, owing to the absence of good harbours, a matter of difficulty and danger, to a terminus where such business is in every way facilitated. Our Madras neighbours, however, are determined to remain "benighted" no longer, and to their new-born enterprise have added a public spirit which is far from entertaining any petty jealousies, but pursues steadily a purpose which will result in wide and lasting benefit to the inhabitants of both Presidencies. A better opportunity has, indeed, rarely been afforded for combining in the construction of one railway the three chief objects of such undertakings in this country. Whether considered as a commercial, a famine or a military line, the proposed East Coast Railway will be a most valuable addition to the internal means of communication at the service of the Government and people of India. The distance by rail between Calcutta and Haiderabad will be lessened by about 1,000 miles; the travels of the multitudes of pilgrims who annually flock to the religious shrines of Orissa will be shortened and facilitated; the evils of famine in case of a recurrence of a scarcity in Madras will be more easily mitigated; and the trade of vast districts, now cramped by the inadequacy of the means of external communication, will be immensely developed. The supreme Government has weakly decided that, henceforth, railway enterprise is to go on without its direct encouragement and support. The Government of Madras, however, is busily interesting itself in numerous projects, and is setting an example of progress in this direction which might well be copied elsewhere. In the United States the construction of railways has been proceeding of late at the rate of 8,000 to 10,000 miles yearly; and the Russian Government does not hesitate to draw upon its impoverished treasury for the construction of military lines, which are no sooner laid than they become the highways of a growing commerce. Why, then, should the Government of India, whose credit yearly stands higher in the money markets of the world, fear to give its support to schemes for the development of the resources of an empire whose wealth has already been largely increased by such railway facilities as have thus far been provided?

NATIVES AND GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT.

(Bangalore Spectator.)

Year after year, as the time comes round where prizes are distributed to various Educational Institutions, the chairman almost invariably advises the students to strike out new paths for themselves, to exercise a spirit of independence, and not to look for Government employ. It must be a puzzle to many why the youth of India, after passing difficult examinations, look only after Government employ, in spite of all the advice given them. The employment sought for is generally a clerkship in some office. The work seems to involve much drudgery, and to be unsuited to a bright intellect. The vast preponderance of the Brahmin element in the arts course is probably one of the chief reasons why the alumni of the Universities adopt callings of a learned or clerical, as opposed to those of a scientific or practical character. A short time ago an analysis of figures for the B.A. and F.A. examinations was made, which brought to light the astonishing fact that there was one Brahmin candidate to every 125 Brahmins in the Presidency, while the proportions for other great sections of the population were:—Hindus, not Brahmins, one in six thousand; Mahomedans, one in twelve thousand. It is plain that Brahmins deliberately continue to work for Government and desk appointments. The desire for high and superior knowledge is fast growing, not only among Brahmins, but also among all classes of the community. This desire, however, requires to be directed into various channels. If this ambition could be directed towards the Sciences, and the Fine, as well as the Mechanical Arts, the rapid progress of the country might be confidently looked for. Of late years much has been said and written about Technical Education, and some efforts are being made to establish schools for the imparting of such knowledge. A change may, therefore, come over the face of the country ere long.

THE OUTBREAK OF CHOLERA IN THE PUNJAB.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Two very peculiar features have marked the visitation of cholera in the Punjab this year. The first of these—viz., the immunity of the Hindus from the disease in contrast with the Muhammadans and, at Murree, the Europeans—has been more than once commented on; but none of the causes suggested hitherto seems by itself, and scarcely all of them in combination, adequate to account for the difference. The second point presents even more curious contrast, between the India of to-day and India of the past. In former times cholera ravages were frightful in the great cities, and though villages doubtless suffered, their losses were as but drops compared to the ocean of calamity which swept over crowded centres of population. This year not a single city of any size has been attacked, although great comparative mortality has occurred in the neighbouring villages. Sialkote, Lahore, and Ferozepore may be quoted as instances in point. No doubt this remarkable change in respect to liability of towns and villages to cholera admits of easy explanation. The system of sanitation and specially the improvement in drinking water, which has been introduced into our cities, seems to have banished cholera to rage, with unabated and, by contrast, seemingly increased fury in outlying villages, where sanitation is as yet unknown. No more striking justification could, we think, be desired of the recent Resolution of the Government of India, recommending the extension to villages and rural districts of the sanitary improvement which have been partially effected in the towns. The evil of the cholera outbreak of this year will prove a lasting benefit to the country if its lessons hasten the action of the Government in seeing that Resolution carried into practice.

PHYSICAL DETERIORATION OF THE HINDU RACE.

(Hindu Patriot.)

The havoc that has been of late caused in the ranks of the educated Hindu community of Bengal by diabetes has invested that fell disease with a peculiar importance. Our climate, our food, our daily avocations are all against us. They make the course of our life sedentary in the extreme. And the evil is on the increase. The well-to-do among our ancestors were mostly given to horse exercise, and walking and wrestling were favourite pastimes among all classes. Seventy years ago there were few rich men under fifty years of age in Calcutta who did not take their constitutional on horseback. A friend at our elbow tells us that when five-and-twenty years old he purchased a large thoroughbred English stallion, which made him kiss the ground several times. The matter came to the knowledge of his septuagenarian father, who said: "That lad must be very lax not to be able to keep his seat on a horse. Let the horse be brought to me, and I shall see if the animal be really a vicious one." The horse was accordingly sent to him, and he rode it hard for a week, and returned it, saying that "It was, but for a little neighing, a pleasant hack to ride, as tame as a lamb." None of his descendants now can follow his example, and what is true of his descendants is true of the scions of those Hindu gentlemen who rode with him. One may now walk the streets of the northern division of the town for a fortnight without seeing a Hindu gentleman rider out. Wrestling grounds are also quite as rare. And while exercise is all tabooed intellectual occupation is greatly on the increase, and the two circumstances contribute greatly to the increase of the disease, which, for a general remark, may be said to be all but incurable.

THE VETERINARY DEPARTMENT IN INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Government of India, in these days of bad exchange, immense expenditure on Military Railways and Frontier Defences, with supposed impoverishment of the country, are cutting down expenses in other directions with a recklessness and disregard of the feelings and pockets of subordinates, both Civil and Military, which is certainly cruel, and we can but trust necessary. The officers of no branch of the service are suffering more acutely from this than those of the Army Veterinary Department.

When, in 1885, they ceased in India to be attached to regiments, and were placed in charge of station hospitals, we may, we think, say that the large majority were averse to the change. They consoled themselves, however, with the idea that if they had to abandon all regimental associations they would, to counterbalance their loss, be freed from regimental duties—such as stables, commanding officers' parades, daily shoeing inspection, and the hundred and one little odds-and-ends that went to form the day's work of the veterinary officer of a regiment. This, they reflected, would leave them more time for recreation, reading, &c. But hardly had they prepared to swallow the bitter pill, gilded by this sanguine anticipation, when all the gilt was ruthlessly removed by an order despatching to England several officers of the Department as superfluous under the new régime, thus doubling and trebling the work of those who remained. These unfortunates found themselves in charge of two—sometimes three—stations many miles apart, liable to be hustled off at a moment's notice to a cantonment a hundred miles away, where a commanding officer fancied the animals were suffering from some epidemic. In addition, the clerical work has been considerably increased. Matters which formerly were settled verbally in two minutes' talk with the commanding officer, have now to be duly sent through the proper channels, &c. We hear now that the supervision of Native regiments and transport is added to the duties of the Veterinary Department. This last order is most ingeniously double-barrelled. With the right barrel the unfortunate veterinary bird who chirps out a remonstrance against the accumulation of work, or asks for an allowance for extra duty, is peppered with the reply that he has no "extra charge"—he merely supervises; while should any question be asked in Parliament as to the want of skilled veterinary aid for Native regiments or transport, the second barrel is used to bring down the too curious fowl, loaded with the answer that these branches of the service are under the supervision of veterinary officers.

Foreseeing that extra charge money might be asked for, the old order granting it has been cancelled. We understand, too, that veterinary surgeons are expected to attend the stallions of the Government studs when the officers of that Department are unable to do so. So far, at all events, the Financial Authorities have scored all round, extracting three times the work that was formerly expected for about three-fourths of the pay. As to how these multifarious duties are performed they trouble themselves not one jot. But it seems self-evident that the foolishly zealous man will slave himself into premature break-down, while the judiciously indolent one will do nothing. With all this, it should be borne in mind that the junior officers are, at the rate of exchange, drawing actually less pay and allowances than they would in England, while the seniors get very little, if any more. It is hardly necessary to add that discontent is rife in the department. The remedy is obvious. If the Native Cavalry and transport require the services of veterinary surgeons, let the Indian Government have its own veterinary service, which, if they please, may have a civil branch to check the spread of cattle disease, &c., about which some people are now asking troublesome questions, and leave the officers of the Army Veterinary Department to attend to their proper duties, viz., the care of the British mounted troops.

MARRIAGE AND SILVER.

(Pioneer.)

While females of easy morality, theoretically speaking, have been discussing the institution of marriage from one side of view, the statisticians have been considering it from another, and on ground more definite are able to tell us that it is a failure. The investigations made in connection with the Currency Commission have brought out beyond a doubt the singular fact that the marriage-rate in England has declined coincidentally with the fall of silver. Now, as all the world knows, the commodity which most faithfully reflects the price of silver is wheat. Every fall in silver value for the last sixteen years has been accompanied by a corresponding fall in the price of wheat in the London market; until last year, when silver reached the lowest point known to modern economies, wheat declined simultaneously to a figure that had not been known in England for a century. But under normal circumstances the lower the price of wheat the higher should be the marriage-rate, because of course wages go further towards supporting a family. Yet since 1872 it appears that the marriage rate has been going down along with the wheat price, instead of rising inversely to it; and, further, that both corn and marriages have fallen in very much the same ratio as silver. This remarkable fact should prove a doughty weapon in the hands of bimetalists for the warfare of the platform. It has often been said, and no doubt will often be repeated, that the working-classes benefit by the general fall in prices which has been brought about by the depreciation of silver, because wages alter more slowly than prices, and, therefore, that Hedge and Roe gain more as consumers than they lose in their earnings. And though it was, of course, obvious that no one could benefit in the long run by farms thrown out of cultivation and factories out of work, the argument might have been dressed up so as to have some force with an audience of electors. It is now shown by the well-nigh infallible barometer of the marriage-rate that the English working population has not benefited, even temporarily, by the great and general fall of prices. The explanation of the apparent contradiction is in all probability to be found in the middleman, who breaks every fall of prices for the consumer.

MR. BRADLAUGH'S SPEECH.

(Times of India.)

Bradlaugh is a man of strong convictions and undoubted ability. He is something more than a tinkering Radical who goes about for petty tin pot grievances to repair. His mind inclines to big questions, such as perpetual pensions or the abolition of oaths. He has fought with varying success over these subjects; and latterly, in casting about for a fresh grievance to exploit, he has taken in hand the reform of our Indian administration. We have said that Mr. Bradlaugh is a man of ability; we, however, do not make such an apotheosis of his intellect as to admit that he can grasp the great problem surrounding the name, India, without ever visiting the country and without any practical knowledge whatsoever of the people. We should have imagined that Mr. Bradlaugh, speaking at Northampton, the city of boot and shoes, would have had before him the venerable adage, ne sutor ultra crepidam. If ever there was an example of the truth of this adage, it was afforded by the recent appeal he made through his constituents to the British people on behalf of the grievancemongers of India. Claptrap and misrepresentation were the two main elements that went to make up his perverid oration. He had under his wing the two stormy petrels of the Indian Political and General Agency, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji and Mr. W. C. Bannerjee. These gentlemen were exhibited on the platform before the shoemakers of Northampton as real live Natives of India—probably the very first ninety per cent. of the audience had ever set eyes upon. Yet this same audience considered itself thoroughly qualified to punctuate Mr. Bradlaugh's impassioned oration with hoots and hisses directed against the British administrators in India, and to interpolate such remarks as "shame," "hypocrisy," and "fraud," criticising the general conduct of England towards India. The whole affair would be ludicrous if it were not mischievous. An average English constituency comes to listen to an address on India with absolutely blank minds; they have no previous knowledge wherewith to correct the picture that may be presented to them. How grotesque, how distorted, how utterly untrue such a picture can be made by a Radical agitator determined to have a grievance and one black enough for his purpose, a persual of the Northampton proceedings will convince every fair-minded man who has a practical knowledge of the problems, political and social, which at the present day confront England in India.

SANITARY LESSONS FOR INDIA.

(Englishman.)

Mr. Chadwick's address to the Association of Public Sanitary Inspectors of Great Britain, of which he is the president, is deserving of special attention in India. Mr. Chadwick speaks with authority, for he has, for almost half a century, been at the head of sanitary enterprise in England, and his report on the condition of the working classes in England in 1842 was the basis of all the vast reforms which have since been carried out with such extraordinary benefit to the public health. He has now reached a term of life at which it is rare indeed for any man to be taking an active part in public affairs; but Mr. Chadwick devotes a hale old age to the demonstration of the truths which he has preached so long, and of which his own experience gives such convincing proof. He has lived to see the death-rate of the country reduced by some 10 per mille, to witness the elimination of several great causes of mortality, the restriction of others to altogether insignificant proportions, and lastly, to receive, in the history of the Union Schools of London, at which the pauper children of the metropolis are brought up, the most convincing demonstration that has yet been afforded of the truth that, even under the least promising conditions, a national conformity to sanitary rules will be attended by an extraordinary improvement in health and life. These children are taken from the very dregs of London pauperism. They have, of course, the least favourable hereditary tendencies; their infancy has been spent amid misery, squalor, and disease; many of them a direct constitutional taint. A high mortality might reasonably be expected and condoned.

At one time the death-rate in some of these institutions was as high as 12 per mille. But careful sanitation has done wonders. All the main diseases have been banished. Diphtheria, typhus, scarlatina, measles, whooping cough, are practically unknown. The thorough purification of the school premises from sewage smells by effectual drainage reduced the mortality by a third—from 12 to 8 per mille. Next the thorough cleansing of the persons of the children by tepid ablutions resulted in another reduction of a third; better ventilation and less crowded dormitories produced a still further reduction, until now the death-rate of these children is less than 3 in the 1,000, or below one-third of that which prevails in the corresponding classes outside those institutions. It is gratifying to know that, along with this improved physique, the education of the children, or what is known as the "half-time system," i.e., half industrial training and half education proper, so improves their powers as wage-earning members of society that their future maintenance is no matter of anxiety. The facts thus recorded are but additional proofs of the truth, now demonstrated beyond the possibility of cavil, that the main causes of human disease and mortality are of human manufacture, and that, with the removal of those causes, human life becomes at once healthier, happier, and longer. Sanitary improvements have reduced the mortality of the English army from 17 per mille to 6, of the Indian army from 69 per mille to 14. In the German army the mortality has been reduced to 5, a fact which, when it is remembered that the mortality of the Russian army is still as high as 17 per mille, is of enormous military significance. The financial results of these improvements have frequently been brought before the community of Calcutta by the Public Health Society. They are easy to calculate. A community in which a large class of wage-earners suffers every year from preventible disease and death, undergoes a money loss which far transcends the most lavish expenditure on sanitary reforms. In the Indian army the late Professor de Chaumont estimated the economy of six years' improvement at one-and-a-half millions sterling. In London itself the annual money waste arising from needless mortality and illness must, Mr. Chadwick says, be counted by millions. But London has now a death-rate of only 14 in the thousand.

What must be thought of communities like the suburbs of Calcutta or many of the great cities of India, where the death-rates range from 30 to 60 per mille, and where epidemics, not unknown in England, are perennial visitants? What accountant would venture to estimate the pecuniary loss thus inflicted on the survivors by the premature removal of the wage-earner who was competent, in favourable circumstances, to keep a family in comfort? It is inconceivable that ignorance, prejudice, and apathy shall be allowed to delay any longer in India the reforms which are shown to be so fraught with blessings to the population. The recent Resolution of the Government of India shows that the responsible rulers of the country fully appreciate the bearings of the question. Lord Dufferin has left his stamp on the subject, and we have good reason to know that his successor is fully aware of its importance to India, and is already giving it his serious consideration. The supporters of the Public Health Society are to be congratulated upon the complete adoption of their views by the Government. For years past they have contended for a central authority of experts in each province for the control of sanitation, such as was recommended by the Royal Commission of 1859. Such a body will now, under the resolution, come into existence in each Presidency, and will, we feel no doubt, inaugurate a new epoch of sanitation. Another of the Health Society's proposals was that the Government should institute the machinery for loans for municipal purposes, reverting to the system so thoughtlessly abandoned in 1879. This, too, is conceded, and, if we understand the resolution aright, municipal bodies will once more be able to maintain the necessary loans from Government without all the loss and anxiety attending on money engagements in the public market. These two reforms, if loyally and intelligently carried out, will of themselves put the matter of sanitation on a new and more hopeful footing. There will be intelligent and experienced supervision. There will be available funds. The other essential is a well-informed and conscientious public spirit on the part of the public which will insist on the necessary reforms, and cheerfully submit to the outlay which they necessitate. The city of Calcutta will, it is to be hoped, lead the van of improvement. Its past delinquencies have been the talk of the civilised world; they have been observed upon by sanitarians in London, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, wherever cholera is dreaded, and the history of epidemics is known. The scandal has been great. Great and deplorable also has been the needless suffering, sorrow, misery, mortality that follow in the train of bad sanitation. Much has been done, but still more remains to do before the disgrace can be effaced. The "African village" must disappear.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 2.)

At a meeting at Calcutta on Friday it was finally determined that a St. Andrew's dinner should be usual. There is every prospect of the dinner being held as a specially brilliant affair. Lord Dufferin has signified his intention of being present. Sir Alexander Wilson will preside for the second year in succession.

A SMALL successful shikar party, organised by the Assam-Bihar Railway engineers and sporting planters of Purnea, have just succeeded in killing a large tiger, ten feet two inches long. They also got a tigress, which wounded an elephant before she was killed. She was accompanied by two small cubs, both of which were caught and brought to camp alive, and are now being domesticated. Owing to the density of the jungles several other tigers escaped. The floods have now subsided, but if the river again rises another attempt will be made to kill some more tigers; they are reported to be killing cattle daily.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 3.)

THE Madras Mail reports that Mr. Farer, C.S., the Postmaster-General of Madras, is at present engaged in the investigation of an alleged attempt to commit an extensive fraud upon the Post Office. A Native Government official recently despatched an insured parcel from Srivilluputtur, in the Tinnevely District, to a relative of his at Conjevaram. The parcel was alleged to have contained 4,500 diamonds and 400 rubies, valued at Rs. 65,000, and it was insured for that amount. The addressee declined to take delivery of the parcel, and it was thereupon returned to the sender. On the return of the parcel to Srivilluputtur the sender was informed of the fact, and was requested to take delivery of it. He went to the Post Office, and on seeing the parcel he declared that it had been tampered with, as one of the seals was broken, and he declined to take the delivery of it. It was thereupon opened by the Sub-Postmaster, and found to contain copper coins. The sender of the parcel then made a complaint to the police, and the matter was reported to the Postmaster-General, who immediately proceeded to Tinnevely to conduct inquiries.

ACCORDING to a Madras contemporary the Meingoon Prince is still a resident of Pondicherry, where he lives in strict retirement, receiving an annual pension from the French Government of 10,000 francs, which appears to be his only income. Until within the last few months he used to receive, from time to time, a good many strange-looking visitors, but these gradually dropped off, and now a new arrival very seldom turns up at his residence. He did not go to the reception held at Government House on Sunday evening, the 16th ult., and no official calls seem to have passed between the Prince and the Acting Governor. The three Punjab Sirdars are still living in the town, and have lately removed into more comfortable quarters near the sea, not very far from the residence of the Meingoon Prince. The paper seized by the local Government at Lahore implicated the father only who had been carrying on a correspondence with Maharajah Dhuleep Singh for some time past, but there was no evidence of any sort against the sons. The old Sirdar fled precipitately directly it got noised abroad that the police were making inquiries, and immediately after his papers were seized and sealed. But he reached Pondicherry without hindrance, and very soon afterwards was followed by his three sons, the eldest of whom was a Deputy-Commissioner of the Punjab. The old Sirdar died, and was buried in Pondicherry about a year ago. The sons were present at the Governor's reception on Sunday, the 16th ult. The Sirdars are quiet and gentlemanly men, and have made themselves very popular in Pondicherry.

MADRAS DIAMOND FIELDS.—The Madras Presidency Diamond Fields Company is landing to-day 225 packages of diamond mining and washing machinery, value Rs. 20,000, ex Navarino, which completes all its present requirements. This affords us an opportunity of modifying the reply that we gave on Saturday to "Shareholder," who asked whether the registration has been completed. We said that the documents arrived by the mail of Wednesday last, and are ready for signature, but there may be a slight delay in executing them, as the solicitors have been instructed to search the register carefully to see that there is no flaw in the title. This is not quite the case, for it almost seems to imply that the company is only now examining the title, whereas this has already been done, although there may be some question as to one or two out of fifty-one pieces of land, and respective documents, upon which, possibly, the lawyers themselves could give no positive opinion.

BOMBAY.

(Oct. 5.)

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT has been pleased to found a permanent prize for drawing in connection with the Poona Native Institution.

MAJOR O. M. CREAGH, V.C., Commandant Merwara Battalion, has been granted leave for one year, on private affairs.

CAPTAIN H. S. A. FULLER, Staff Corps, Assistant Commissary-General, has been allowed furlough to Europe for one year and 128 days.

MR. H. E. WINTER, C.S., Acting Collector of Tanna, has been allowed privilege leave for one month and fifteen days. Mr. B. M. Kennedy, C.S., acts for him.

THE services of Surgeon J. W. T. Anderson and Surgeon G. H. Bull, M.D., Indian Medical Service, have been placed at the disposal of Government for temporary employment in the Civil Department.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL is pleased to direct that the 5th Bombay Cavalry and the 6th Bombay Cavalry shall be designated, respectively, "Sind Horse" and "Jacob's Horse," instead of "Jacob-ka-risala."

MR. STUART, Presidency Postmaster, Bombay, will officiate as Postmaster-General of the Punjab during the time Mr. Thompson acts as Deputy Secretary of the Financial Department. Mr. Merrett, Deputy Postmaster, will officiate as Presidency Post Master during Mr. Stuart's absence.

THE following Ecclesiastical appointments have been made:—The Rev. P. H. LeFebvre, B.A., to be Chaplain of Deolali; the Rev. A. G. Cane, M.A., to be Chaplain of Satara and Mahableshwar; the Rev. P. B. Horne, M.A., to be Chaplain of Poona; the Rev. J. A. Sella, M.A., to act as Chaplain of Kirkee; and the Rev. W. E. Scott, B.A., to be Chaplain of Byculla.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—River still low in Sind, and want of water felt in Kurrachee. Rain during week good throughout Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, where prospects are generally improved; slight in parts of Konkan, Surat, and Panch Mahals. Total rainfall generally insufficient, and more needed urgently. Standing crops damaged by blight, rats, and crabs in parts of Kurrachee and by blight in parts of Rutnagherry. Harvesting of early crops in progress in parts of Hyderabad, Ahmedabad, Kaira, and Nasik, and sowing of late crops in parts of Shikarpur, Hyderabad, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Bijapur, Belgaum, and Dharwar. Fodder scarce in parts of Hyderabad, Khandesh, Nasik, Sholapur, Belgaum, Dharwar, Kattywar, and Baroda. Agricultural Stock good, except in parts of Hyderabad, Nasik, Belgaum, and Kattywar. Prices rising in Kaira and parts of Nasik. Water supply in Sholapur improved.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

(Oct. 3.)

It is practically decided that Colonel R. P. Nisbet, C.I.E., shall be the next Resident at Cashmere.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab intends spending a few days at Naldria, near Mushobra, before starting for Lahore.

FROM January 1st, 1876, to December 31st, 1886, there were 4,530 murders committed in the North-West Provinces and Oudh. There were also 2,979 cases of culpable homicide, thus making up an average of two lives taken per diem. Besides these cases there are about sixty every year in which death is caused by a rash or negligent act. One unsuccessful attempt at murder is made every fourth day, 942 abortive murders having been recorded during the eleven years. The number of suicides is nowhere stated, but the attempts and abetments of suicide during this period were no fewer than 13,317. Comparing one year with another, the number of murders were highest in the two years of famine—1877 and 1878. The record rose to 471 in the former year and to 546 in the latter. Many starving mothers made away with the children whom they despaired of nourishing, jumping down wells, as their manner is when despair or anger drives them mad. For the other nine years the average run of murders is 390, or less than one to every hundred thousand of the population per annum.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN LAMBERT, 2nd Punjab Cavalry, having been appointed Provost Marshal of the Hazara Field Force, has handed over the office of Assistant Advocate-General, 3rd Circle, to Major Impey, Royal Sussex Regiment. Captain Hubert DuCane, Royal Horse Artillery, and Captain Edwards, King's Dragoon Guards, are appointed Assistants to the Provost Marshal. Lieut. Williams, 20th Punjab Infantry, has proceeded to Hassan Adal in charge of ammunition and Snider rifles for the use of the Khyber levies, whose services have been accepted for the Black Mountain Expedition.

COLONEL BOWNESS FISCHER, Madras Staff Corps, retires from the service on the 15th October.

MAJOR O'CREAGH, V.C., Commandant of the Merwara Battalion, has been granted a year's leave out of India.

E. EWING, Veterinary Surgeon, First Class, has been detailed for duty with the Hazara Field Force.

CAPTAIN H. S. A. FULLER, Assistant Commissary-General, has been granted furlough to Europe for a year and 128 days.

SECOND-LIEUT. CHARLES SPOTTISWOODE STACK, 6th Dragoon Guards, has been appointed a probationer for the Bombay Staff Corps.

THE "Station Staff Officers" perform the duties of Superintendent of Police, Bazaar Master, Pension Pay Officer and Secretary to "Cantonment Fund Works," and act as "Sanitary Committee" officers. The latter is an arduous and onerous duty, if sanitation is enforced, especially in the "Sudder bazaars."

WITH the sanction of Government Major C. Egan, officiating second in command of the 11th Bengal Infantry, has been provisionally appointed for six months as Remount Agent in the North-Western Provinces as an experimental measure; and Major E. W. Chalmers, second in command of the 7th Bengal Cavalry, has been similarly appointed Remount Agent in the Punjab.

OWING to the recent orders of the Government of India the following officers have been appointed "Station Staff officers" of the Hyderabad Contingent, of the following stations:—Lieut. A. F. Montanaro, R.A., No. 3 Field Battery, Second Class, Aurungabad; Lieut. D. W. Purdon 6th Infantry, Second Class, Bolarum; Captain F. S. Sorrell, 1st Infantry, Third Class, Allichpore (Berar); Lieut. F. Oswald, 1st Cavalry, Second Class, Hingoli; Captain E. C. M. Lushington, 3rd Infantry, Special Class, Jalna; Lieut. E. L. Wright, 2nd Cavalry, Special Class, Mominabad; and Lieut. M. T. Shewan, 4th Infantry, Special Class, Raichore.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. EUPHRATES.

Her Majesty's Troopship Euphrates, 4,173 tons, Captain J. R. E. Patterson, arrived in Bombay harbour on Wednesday morning, Oct. 3rd, from Portsmouth. She sailed from that port on the 5th ult., calling at Queenstown on the 7th, Malta on the 16th, Port Said on the 20th, and Suez on the 22nd idem. She brought from Portsmouth 22 officers and a few men, and from Queenstown 29 officers and about 1,123 men belonging to 1st Worcester, 2nd Royal West Surrey, 2nd Warwick, 2nd Liverpool, 2nd West York, 1st Welsh Fusiliers, 2nd South Wales Borderers, 2nd Manchester, and the 2nd Horse Light Infantry Regiments. Besides the officers noted above, there were 13 ladies, 13 children, 37 women, and 35 children. During the voyage Miss Whitmarsh was landed at Malta, and Miss L. E. Sammut embarked; one private of the Royal Fusiliers was embarked at Suez. The wife of a Corporal of the South Wales Borderers while in a delirious state consequent on an attack of fever, attempted to jump overboard in the Bay of Biscay, and on arrival at Malta the Corporal, his wife, and three children were sent to hospital. The following are the names of officers and their families:—

FROM PORTSMOUTH.—Quartermaster (Hon. Lieut.) and Mrs. H. Duke, Royal Munster Fusiliers; Lieut. and Adjutant H. J. W. Hamilton, 2nd West Surrey; Surgeon-Major and Mrs. F. Lyons and child, Med. Staff; Surgeon R. Porter, Med. Staff; Surgeon A. P. Aldridge, Med. Staff; Surgeon E. M. Hassard, Med. Staff; Surgeon R. W. Wright, Med. Staff; Surgeon E. Eckersley, Med. Staff; Surgeon B. J. Twiss, Med. Staff; Surgeon M. W. Russell, Med. Staff; Lieut. A. E. Barton, 1st York Light Infantry; Lieut. T. A. F. R. Oldfield, 1st Munster Fusiliers; Lieut. A. S. Arnold, 18th Hussars; 2nd Lieut. H. J. L'Estrange, 2nd Leinster; Lieut. J. O. Travers, 1st Devonshire; Veterinary-Surgeon and Mrs. W. A. Crow and child, A.V.D.; Veterinary-Surgeon and Mrs. W. R. Hagger and three children, A.V.D.; Captain and Mrs. C. A. King Hall, 2nd Munster Fusiliers; Surgeon K. Prasad, I.M.S.; Lieut. and Mrs. F. A. C. Kreyer and two children, Bombay

Staff Corps; Lieut. J. Parker, 2nd South Wales Borderers; Rev. Mr. F. B. Bickerstaffe, R.C. Chaplain; wife of Captain R. Hyslop, 2nd Leicester; wife of Captain H. W. Ind and two children, R.A.; wife of Captain H. W. Wharry and two children, Madras Staff Corps.

FROM QUEENSTOWN.—Major J. D. Edge, 1st Cheshire; Surgeon-Major R. H. Robinson, Med. Staff; Surgeon and Mrs. J. M. F. Shine, Med. Staff; Surgeon R. G. Thompson, Med. Staff; Surgeon C. J. Macdonald, Med. Staff; Veterinary-Surgeon and Mrs. S. M. Smith and two children, Med. Staff; Major E. R. Evans, 1st R.W. Fusiliers; Lieut. H. B. Ford, 1st R.W. Fusiliers; 2nd Lieut. H. O. S. Cadogan, 1st R.W. Fusiliers; Captain M. R. Hyslop, 2nd Leicester; 2nd Lieut. E. N. Obbard, 2nd Leicester; Captain W. W. Handcock, 2nd Derbyshire; Lieut. A. W. Taylor, 2nd R.W. Surrey; Lieut. and Mrs. J. G. King, 2nd R.W. Surrey; Lieut. S. N. Bevington, 2nd R.W. Surrey; Lieut. V. S. Smyth, 2nd Warwick; 2nd Lieut. F. B. Hill, 2nd Warwick; 2nd Lieut. A. Cuning, 2nd South Wales Borderers; Lieut. C. FitzClarence, 1st Royal Fusiliers; 2nd Lieut. J. L. Rose, 2nd Highland Light Infantry; 2nd Lieut. J. H. Purvis, 2nd Highland Light Infantry; 2nd Lieut. C. H. G. Moore, 2nd West York; 2nd Lieut. W. J. Windsor, 1st Worcester; 2nd Lieut. C. B. Westmacott, 1st Worcester; 2nd Lieut. T. B. Blois Johnson, 2nd Liverpool; 2nd Lieut. H. A. Vallings, 2nd Liverpool; Captain R. F. L. Farrer, 2nd Liverpool; 2nd Lieut. A. W. V. Plunkett, 2nd Manchester; 2nd Lieut. E. B. Reade, 1st East Lancashire; daughter of the Hon. Lieut. A. Lytle, Bengal Commissariat Department.

The Euphrates also brought out fifteen foxhounds for the Meerut Garrison, which were landed on Wednesday and sent to their destination. The troops disembarked at the Sassoon Dock, and were sent by two troop trains to the undernoted stations:—2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey, Umballa; 2nd Battalion West Yorkshire, Mooltan; 2nd Battalion Manchester, Agra; 2nd Battalion Highland Light Infantry, Peshawur; 2nd Battalion Royal Warwick, Jubbulpore; 2nd Battalion Liverpool, Fyzabad; 1st Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Lucknow; 2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers, Bareilly; and the 1st Battalion Worcester, to Quetta. The Euphrates leaves for England on the 14th instant.

OUR KIN ACROSS THE SEA.*

Yet another account of a tour in the United States! Well may Mr. Froude proclaim the subject "hackneyed and threadbare," yet, withal, he adds with truth:—"Mr. Firth brings to it a new mind, and he has studied his American cousins from an original point of view. We have had impressions of the Great Republic from Englishmen, from Irishmen, from French and Germans; but we have here, I believe for the first time, the impressions of a Colonist." This is the raison d'être of the work under review; and, assuredly, no apology is needed for its appearance. From beginning to end it is one of the most readable publications which have been recently produced. It teems with sage and practical reflections; it holds up a mirror alike to the vices as the virtues of the great American nation; it never spares, but it never wounds; and what an astounding array of facts it places before the reader! Fancy a city like New York literally honeycombed with "Dives"—a "place or hole where men go to imbibe various drinks," and taking its name from the fact that the place is underground, and only accessible by a descending flight of steps, the approach to which is none too safe to the liege subjects of the Republic. Fancy, too, the whole traffic of a great city absolutely stopped twenty or thirty times a day because a swing bridge is opened at intervals to allow vessels to pass. Surely the ingenuity of a great people could invent some plan calculated to save time and avoid the inevitable "jam" which the present arrangement cannot and does not fail to produce? Imagine, once again, a monster pump, the rod of which is 3,250 feet in length, weighing 185 tons—the whole machine being capable of raising 1,000,000 gallons to a height of 1,500 ft. every twenty-four hours! What, too, have Englishmen to say to the astonishing fact that the railways in the United States can boast of nearly as many miles of metalled way as all the rest of the world combined—the figures being 125,379, as compared with 151,322; yet America is not to be compared, as regards either size or population, to our great and glorious possession of Hindustan, which cannot lay claim to more than about 12,000 miles. Let us confess that, at least in this direction, we have been whipped by the Yankee.

These facts and figures, and hundreds more of a like nature as regards interest and marvel, are to be found at every line, accompanied by reflections as original in some cases as they are deep in all instances. The great and pressing questions of the day are discussed calmly, dispassionately, and without fear. Mr. Firth never "funks" a matter, even when the case hinges upon the most delicate problems of human life; yet there is nothing nasty or indelicate. There is scarce a line which, even by inference, could raise a blush; and in the few pages where things are otherwise it is only because, however modestly handled, the subject matter itself could not be otherwise than repulsive.

We gladly welcome Mr. Firth's contribution to the stock of universal knowledge. As a colonist, he has seen things in a different aspect from that which is familiar to Englishmen, and his work can be read with no less profit than pleasure.

A FEW PLAIN TRUTHS ABOUT INDIA.*

Anything which comes from the pen of so talented and respected a writer as Sir Richard Garth is entitled to careful consideration and patient investigation; yet, withal, his pamphlet does not in some respects commend itself to our judgment. The fallacy which underlies all his arguments is that some of the difficulties and dangers connected with India arise from the fact that people in this country as represented in Parliament will not take an interest in the East. Undoubtedly; but this is, in our opinion, the one redeeming feature in the whole case. Malcolm—we fancy it was he—was wont to say that we should lose India on the floor of the House of Commons. True, supremely true; but why? an astonished, untutored Englishman might be tempted to ask. The answer is simple: The East cannot be governed by the principles which obtain in the West. To rule the 250 millions of people in Hindustan in the same manner and on the same lines as are familiar to us all in this favoured land is simply and purely impossible. An instance will suffice: Some years ago the ruler of Baroda was suspected of being an accomplice in the attempt to poison the British representative at his Court. A commission of inquiry was constituted; he was convicted, and deposed from his throne. Yet all this was done in the teeth of a second Treaty, which declared that the British Government would never interfere in the affairs of the State. So, according to Western notions, Government interference was not permissible, and the whole proceeding opposed to the solemn promises of a solemn Treaty. But would anyone but an ignoramus in the House of Commons contend for an instant that the Guicowar ought not to have been hurled from his seat of sovereignty? Why, if such offences against the Paramount Power were allowed to pass unpunished England's sway in the East might be reckoned rather by months than years. No, a thousand times no. Parliamentary interference in the affairs of the great dependency across the sea is India's greatest curse. Not long ago a well-known authority from the Land of Sun went to hear one of the desultory debates in which ignorance reigns supreme and lack of knowledge arrogates an evening to itself. And what was his experience? We had it from his own lips. That the orators (Heaven help the mark!) did not even know the monetary system about which they talked so glibly and argued so plausibly. Illustration after illustration could be adduced as to the absolute, the crass, lack of knowledge which characterises every utterance in this country as to the ways and doings of our brethren in the East. And we revel in the thought that it is just too delightful that, when foolish faddists get up and rant with glowing fervour, no listeners will give ear to the endless string of misstatements which follow in the wake of every simple-minded fool traversing the ocean of ignorance.

Please, Sir Richard Garth, do not lament this state of things; it is the one safety-valve which may save India. We do not deny that there is much in the pamphlet under review worthy of careful consideration by those in high places, but for mercy's sake let the House of Commons wallow in the mire of their own conceited absence of even a glimmering notion of what is what in India. It would be too dreadful if 656 members really understood the East; and a man of penetration and experience like the late Chief Justice of Bengal would be better employed in placing his views in a channel which might lead to practical good than in trying to enlighten the understandings of men who (from an Oriental point of view) understand nought but to proclaim their own shortcomings in the realm of legislation.

GLADYS FANE.†

"Series" are the order of the day. So Mr. Fisher Unwin, who is always first and foremost in the path of energy and enterprise, follows in the wake of public opinion, and gives to the world an "Unwin Novel Series," opening the campaign with Mr. Wemyss Reid's most charming tale, entitled, "Gladys Fane." Of the many wonders of a most wonderful age nothing is, perhaps, more striking than the flood of cheap literature, which flows, like a deluge, incessant and overwhelming. The allusion is not to the ocean of filthy trash—low, obscene, impure, and unhealthy—which saps the very life-blood of a nation's decency and self-respect; this blight is, alas! only too apparent, and needs not a reviewer's pen to direct attention to its pernicious effects and baneful influence. The reference is rather to the high-class literature, the appearance of which, in a cheap and accessible form, brings the high works of the language within the reach of the humblest of the land. Fancy a novel penned by a first-rate writer, published by one of the first houses of the day, printed in clear type and on good paper, and bound in cloth—and all for the insignificant sum of two shillings!

If this be not a marvel it is difficult to conceive what can be more marvellous. Mr. Unwin, too, has, in our judgment, done well in selecting "Gladys Fane" for his opening volume. It is a fine novel; it touches upon the passions of mankind with a clear, penetrating judgment, analysing, with precision and acumen, the motives which underlie the actions of the world. And if all will not agree with all he writes, at least none will refuse the gifted author the meed of praise which attaches to the clever analyser of the thoughts and ways of a foolish and giddy world.

THE INDIAN MAGAZINE.*

The two last numbers of this excellent magazine fully sustain its reputation. In the September issue "Southern Indian Vernacular Literature" is the subject of an interesting monograph by the Rev. Dr. Pope, of all men the most qualified to deal with such a topic; and whose admirable rendering of the "Sacred Kural of Tiruvalluvar" is noticed, with due appreciation, by Mr. Pincott in the October issue. It is characteristic of the modesty and devout self-abnegation of the author of the Kural that his name, and even the date of his existence, are alike unknown. The great skill with which Dr. Pope's translation has been made is evidenced by the extracts given by the reviewer. In the same (October) number is a letter from Pundita Ramabai, complaining of the coldness of the English feeling on behalf of her project of school-homes for Hindu child-widows. It must, however, be remembered that (as pointed out in an Editorial Note, p. 507) the scheme was launched (and the Pandita's book on the Hindu child-widows published) in America, and that Ramabai has been led to abandon her visit to England, during which it would have had the advantage of her personal advocacy. We are well assured that the subject needs but to be duly placed before the public to receive the liberal consideration which it well deserves.

In both numbers Dr. Francis continues his useful hints on the "Means of Preserving Health in India;" these hints may be described as medically expressed common sense, and are in many respects such as might be beneficially adopted in this country as well as in India.

We notice with pleasure the uniformly satisfactory reports on the progress of Female Education.

"Following the Drum" is the title of a charming and most attractive little brochure illustrative of a soldier's career. It would be difficult to speak too highly as to the artistic merit of the thirty plates which Mr. Simkin has so well designed, and which Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., the enterprising publishers, have no less admirably reproduced. When, too, it is considered that the whole affair is procurable for the insignificant sum of a few pence, and that the verses are in every sense suitable to the pictures which illustrate them, what more can be said or written?

‡ The students of the Calcutta and Ripon College are at loggerheads. For some weeks past they have, says a contemporary, used unwarrantable violence during the services in the chapel attached to the mission premises in Amherst-street. Bricks have been thrown through the glass windows during prayer-time, and more than once the preachers have been severely wounded.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the Hygio-Electric Belt, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigny's Medicated Pumilio-Pinol Espr. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bond fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltameter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

THE CURSE OF INDIA.

THE above is the attractive heading given to a leading article in a late issue of the Calcutta Englishman. Anglo-Indians, whether of the Services or the Press—whether of the employed or unemployed—have from the earliest times found something to be, in their opinion, the curse of India during their sojourn there. In the good old days of "John Company Bahadur," the official eye possibly regarded the English "Interloper" as the one great curse of India; and when at length the non-official Englishman was allowed to settle in the country and pursue his avocation of planter, merchant, or trader, he had to endure for no inconsiderable period the stigma of being still looked upon as an intruder into pastures which belonged of right to "his betters"—the heaven-born civilians of Haileybury. Time sped on, and opinions began to vary as to what really was the curse of India, and those opinions are now so many that it would take up more space than we can afford to-day to enumerate only a few of them. Possibly the present rate of exchange would be voted by the majority of Englishmen in India as being the greatest curse to them at this moment; but this is not the evil to which the Calcutta journal refers. The curse of India on which it comments, under the heading we have quoted, is that of "Local Self-Government," that pet scheme which found such an advocate in Lord Ripon and those who hold the politics, if not the faith, of that nobleman. The experiment is being tried in India, more especially in Bengal, where the present Lieutenant-Governor has done his best to carry out the idea in view of testing its merits fully and fairly, and in the interests of the people themselves. What has been the result? The Native Municipal Committees have in various parts of the Presidency had a long and patient trial; every opportunity has been given to them to prove that they apprehend the responsibilities which have been entrusted to them, and that they understand how to make the best use of the means and powers at their disposal. As our contemporary points out, Government officers cannot be expected to put themselves in deliberate opposition to the head of the administration, but almost to a man they deplore the continuance of the system. But there is one official who may speak out, and who from the nature of his office is bound to do so—and that official is the Sanitary Commissioner. Government has just published its resolution on the Sanitary Commissioner's report for the year, and here is its own account of the state of things in Bengal:—

The recorded deaths from cholera rose to 172,578, as against 118,368 in 1886, and a quinquennial mean of 139,869 for 1882-86. The number of villages attacked was 23,894, against 21,567 in 1886. The severity of this disease varied greatly in different places, but the suburbs of Calcutta maintained their pre-eminence with a death-rate of 8'31, against a mean rate of 8'58 for the previous five years. The bad sanitary condition of Ranigunge, due, according to the Sanitary Commissioner, to neglect of duty by the Municipal Commissioners, afforded a breeding ground for cholera. Cholera appeared at Ranigunge in the cool depôts, and was transmitted thence through Northern Bengal, causing much loss of life. In Serampur there was an outbreak ascribed to the use of bad water. In Midnapur cholera was imported by the pilgrims returning from Puri. In Behar the number of deaths was 84,530, against 25,709 in 1886, and a quinquennial mean of 41,415, giving death-rates of 3·65, 1·11 and 1·79 per mille respectively. The districts most affected were Gya, Chumparun, and Shahabad, with death-rates of 8·05, 7·50, and 7·15 per mille. In Gya town, where the death-rate was 8·78, sanitary improvement is greatly needed.

In Shahabad the Civil Surgeon inquired as to the cause of the outbreak, and says, "for all there is the same tale to relate—foul wells, foul tanks, human and animal ordure everywhere, damp houses, damp surroundings, and neglect of the first principles of sanitation." In Sarun the death-rate was 3·46, the largest on record for that district. It was most virulent in Sewan, in the municipality and rural circle.

The above are official facts and figures, and are not the "inventions" of the aggressive Englishman, who cannot respect the sacredness of ancient institutions. This modern institution is one for which the talking Baboos of Bengal have most loudly clamoured; and now, after six years of bitter and costly experience of its working, it is found to be not only impracticable, but to have been the means of thousands of lives being annually sacrificed for an idea. Our contemporary sums up its notice of these startling facts and figures with these remarks, which, it is to be hoped, will not be allowed to pass away unheeded in the highest official quarters:—"On all sides, indeed, the signs of failure—and of failure entailing the most disastrous results upon the poorest classes of the people—are becoming painfully visible. The 'writing on the wall' is not to be ignored. By education and genius the people of India are, for the present at least, unsuited for the lowly but important work that has been entrusted to them, and it will be well for the interests of Europeans and Natives alike if the fact is frankly and speedily recognised."

THE QUEEN has been pleased to confer the dignity of a Marquisate upon the Earl of Dufferin, who will take the titles of Marquis of Dufferin and Ava and Earl of Ava. The title of Ava—after the ancient capital of Burma—is assumed by Her Majesty's special command.

AN officer of the Bengal Staff Corps, Captain de Brath, heads the list of successful candidates for admission to the Staff Corps at the recent examination. This is the first time an officer of the Indian service has occupied that position, and, considering how much an officer from this country is handicapped in the competition, it must be considered a very good performance.

THE POPULATION OF INDIA.—The Statistical Abstract of India, which has just been issued, contains an estimate of the present population of India. According to the census of 1881, the population of British territory was 198,790,853, and of the Native States 55,191,742, giving a total of 253,982,595. The estimated population of Cashmere (which was not included in the census) in 1873 was 1,500,000, of Upper Burma in 1886 3,000,000, and of the Burmese Shan States 2,000,000. The yearly increment of the population is at least $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. With these additions, and with allowance for annual increments since the census of February, 1881, the population of India in March, 1887, would be:—British territory, 207,754,578; the Native States, 60,382,466; giving a total population for all India of 268,137,044. Both in British territory and the Native States the number of males is much larger than that of females. In 1881 in British territory there were 101.2 males to 97.4 females, and in the Native States 28.7 males to 26.4 females, and in all India there were in that year just 6,013,419 more males than females.

A PECULIAR CUSTOM.

At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, the General Secretary read the following account, by Mr. W. H. P. Driver, of Ranchi, of a peculiar custom amongst the aboriginal tribes of those parts, called "Era Sendra," or "Women's Hunt":—

"We have just witnessed a peculiar custom of the people of these parts. It is called the 'Era Sendra,' or 'women's hunt,' and on this occasion the expulsion of the cholera demon was its purpose. It is an ancient custom, amongst the aboriginal tribes, that when any great calamity, which they cannot cope with, overtakes the land, the women dress themselves up in men's clothes, arm themselves with weapons, and go out to hunt. They do not, however, take to the jungles in quest of game, but visit the nearest villages lying to the east of them, when they hunt the pigs and fowls, and everything they kill is their legitimate spoil. They also levy 'blackmail' from the heads of the villages for the purchase of liquor. The owners of the pigs and fowls cannot prevent their killing and taking away their property, but the headmen generally compromise matters by giving the visitors a pig, as well as some pice 'Pour boire.' Towards evening the shikar party retire to some neighbouring stream, where they cook and eat the meat, and drink the liquor which, thanks to a benevolent Government, is always handy. They eat neither rice nor anything else at this meal. After supping they bathe in the stream and then return home. On such occasions no men are allowed to accompany the women, who, for the time being, conduct themselves in a very masterful and masculine fashion. They are decked out with pagries, coats, and all the finery they can borrow from their husbands and sweethearts, and they flourish their spears, axes, and sticks, beat their nageras (iron drums), shout, sing hunting songs, and dance the Sendra and Kharia just as the men do. The ceremony commences in the west, and each village that has been visited goes out on a similar excursion to its neighbours, but always to the east. By this means it is supposed that the evil spirit is safely conducted out of the district, without offending its dignity. There is one village near Ranchi which is a notable exception. Its title is Mahadaiva, i.e., devoted to Mahadev, and there the Amazonian huntresses are not allowed to enter, as it is supposed to be under the special protection of its patron saint. Were cholera to appear in the 'Mahadaiva' village, it would be because Mahadev had been offended, and he would have to be propitiated before it could disappear."

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China was held at the offices, 65, Old Broad-street, London, on the 16th inst.; Mr. J. N. Bullen, the chairman of the board of directors, presiding.

Mr. W. Jackson, the chief manager, having read the notice convening the gathering, and the minutes of the last half-yearly meeting, which was duly signed, the report was taken as read.

The Chairman said the directors were pleased to see them again and present to the meeting a statement as to the business of the bank, which he thought they would consider satisfactory. The gross profits were £97,658 2s. 6d., after providing for bad and doubtful debts, and after deducting from it the expenses of management they had a surplus of £58,949 3s. 2d., and they carried forward to next account £40,200. They thought that a very satisfactory statement, and they hoped the shareholders would agree with them on the point. (Hear, hear.) They had been asked why, as the balance was about three times as large as the amount taken for the dividend, they did not propose a larger distribution? The answer was that they intended, however great their profits, not to pay a larger dividend than 5 per cent. until they had accumulated a reserve fund sufficient to enable them to write down their capital, which was estimated in silver, to its gold value. (Hear, hear.) They had now in the reserve £150,000, and he hoped the amount they were carrying forward would in due time also go into the reserve. This would bring it up to £190,000—rather more than was needed in order to write their capital down to 1s. 6d. for the rupee. Two years ago they would have considered that a reasonably safe limit, but within those two years and under the last two months the exchange had stood at 1s. 4d. for the rupee, and therefore they must conclude there was no safe resting place below that sum, and they would see they had a considerable distance to cover before they arrived at that figure; but they still felt confident that if they escaped misfortunes—and they had no idea of any overtaking them—they would within a reasonable space of time reach that goal. Meanwhile, however, the shareholders must rest satisfied with 5 per cent., which, calculated on the present value of the shares, amounted to about 6 per cent., and was therefore not a bad investment. What he had said of the effect of the exchange on their capital would show them the effect of the depreciation of silver on their operations; for every half year in bringing home their profits they were cruelly handicapped by the fall in the exchange. In former times, what with the 2s. exchange would bring £150 profit was now represented by £100. Perhaps shareholders were a little apt to forget that fact when they compared the results of recent years with those when the exchange stood at 2s. for the rupee. As regarded the balance sheet, the figures and items were nearly all nominal, and he would not therefore take up time by referring to them at great length, but if any shareholder required information he should be pleased to give it. Their charter expired on the 15th of last month, and had been renewed for ten years. The new one gave them the same rights and privileges as they had under the old charter. Another thing he had to mention to them was the approaching departure of their chief manager to visit their branches in the East. Since Mr. Jackson was appointed manager six years ago he had not been abroad, and since his appointment great changes had taken place, new business had sprung up, and new ways of conducting business had come into vogue, and the directors thought it would be much to the advantage of the bank if their manager were brought into contact with things as they existed in the East, and if he had the opportunity of consulting on the spot the managers of their branches there and of generally overhauling the business of those branches. The directors thought it was very important Mr. Jackson should go, and although they could not disguise from themselves the fact that Mr. Jackson's absence would add much to their anxieties, labours, and responsibilities, they knew it was to the interest of the bank he should go, and, therefore, they were content to let him go. Mr. Jackson would start the following day to overtake the steamer at Naples. The secretary (Mr. J. M. Reid) would undertake the duties meanwhile. He had only to tell them, in conclusion, that the business of the bank was going on quietly and smoothly; and, although the profits were cut down in Eastern banking as in everything else, the results of their work were satisfactory. The state of the Money Market was not favourable to them. They had had a high rate of interest in London, but the rates of money out in the East were really very low. That was not in their favour, because they thrive best when the rates of money were high in the East. The second half of the year was always the lean half; still he hoped whoever addressed them from the chair in six months' time would be able to refer to as satisfactory a state of things as now. As that was only an interim meeting he had no resolution to propose with reference to the accounts, but he would repeat that he would be glad to afford any gentleman information.

Mr. Richardson congratulated the chairman and his colleagues on the successful business of the past six months, and said he was sure the shareholders were quite satisfied with the manner in which the affairs of the bank had been conducted. He fully concurred with them in making a large reserve fund, for the rupee had fallen many times, and might fall even again, and they should be able to write down their capital before they divided the whole of the profits. If they were able to do as well for the next twelve months as they had done in the last six he saw no reason why they should not have the £250,000 which was necessary to write down capital. When that was accomplished they would be able to establish a real reserve fund, for at present the money put by out of profits was only to make up a deficiency of capital.

A Shareholder drew attention to the fact that they might let some of their premises, and asked whether the past half year had derived any benefit from the sale of securities?

The Chairman, in reply, said that of course they went on the system followed everywhere of valuing their securities at the end of the month, and that it so happened that at the end of June some of the stocks were higher than they had been on Dec. 31. That, however, was of little consequence. The directors thanked Mr. Richardson for his expressions of approval. They had not always been so successful in their conduct of the business as they could wish, but they had always done their best, and it was satisfactory to them to have the commendation of the shareholders. They had a tenant for the third story of the offices, and several applications for the first and second floors, and they were quite alive to the necessity of letting. Whatever credit was due to that side of the table for the satisfactory account was more than anything owing to the chief manager. He did not believe any man in the city of London had more experience in Eastern banking than their manager. He was at the office early and late, his heart was in his work, and they were sure the journey he was about to make would conduce to the interest of the bank.

A hearty vote of thanks having been proposed to Mr. Jackson for his past services, with the expression of the good wishes of the directors and shareholders for a successful journey and his safe return,

Mr. Jackson, in acknowledging the compliment, said his endeavour would be to serve the bank as well in the future as he had in the past.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders in the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China was held at the Cannon-street Hotel for the purpose of declaring an interim dividend for the half-year ended June 30, and of confirming the election of Sir Alfred Dent, K.C.M.G., as a director of the bank. Mr. William Paterson presided.

The Chairman: I have no accounts to lay before the meeting, which has been convened simply to obtain the sanction of the proprietors to the payment of an interim dividend which the board recommends should be at the same rate as that paid for the last eight years, namely, 7 per cent. per annum. They have certainly not been fat years, and under the circumstances we hope the shareholders will be satisfied with what has been done. While there is such continued uncertainty with regard to silver, we have necessarily to keep our capital as much as possible in gold, which of course somewhat curbs our operations. This quondam precious metal, as I may call it, has been on the minds of a Royal Commission for at least two years past, and I have seen a paragraph lately which stated that they seemed to be still at sixes and sevens on the subject. No one, I am sure, can feel this state of things as much as those who are connected with India, and more especially those who have invested money there, realising as they do that fifteen rupees are now required to return a sovereign as against ten in former days. This great uncertainty, with regard to the value of silver, undoubtedly checks the development of India in many ways, and it is to be hoped that some satisfactory conclusion will be arrived at ere long. It is an anomaly that while British capital has been spread all over the earth it can scarcely be got for Indian railways without an imperial guarantee that the principal and interest should be paid in gold. With regard to our own business, I am glad to tell you it is going on as satisfactorily as can be hoped under all the circumstances; but we cannot look for any very great improvement while this uncertainty in the value of silver continues. All I can say is that we shall do our very best. I now propose, "That an interim dividend for the half-year ended June 30 last at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum (free of income-tax) be now declared, payable on and after the 24th inst."

Mr. Levita seconded the resolution.

Mr. Jones asked whether the capital of the bank was written down to 1s. 4d.

The Chairman: I have great pleasure in informing you that our capital is virtually in gold, by which I mean that our accounts are all made up at the current rates of exchange of the day.

The resolution was then put and carried unanimously.

The Chairman: At the last meeting I had the pleasure of proposing Sir A. Dent as a director. We have had his valuable services during the last six months, and we now ask you to confirm his election. I beg to move that Sir Alfred Dent be elected a director.

Mr. Whittall seconded, and the motion was carried unanimously.

THE Mysore Government has authorised the opening of a pony breeding establishment, on a small scale, at Tumkur. The operations will be carried on under the orders of Colonel A. C. Hay, the Amrut Mahal officer.

THE Nizam's Government has not been unmindful of the fact that the late Sir Frank Souter began his career in the Hyderabad Contingent under the auspices of that State, for it has subscribed Rs. 1,000 towards the Souter Memorial Fund.

It is intended to present a farewell address from the Bombay Corporation to Lord Dufferin on his departure from Bombay. An address of welcome will be presented to his successor, Lord Lansdowne, during the first week of December.

SPEAKING at the Club Ball at Simla, on the 26th ultimo, Lord Dufferin said that a Viceroy is so "secluded all day within the four walls of his office that he is compelled to lead a monastic—indeed, so little does he see even of his own wife, I might almost say celibate—existence." Yet, as to Lady Dufferin, "I am almost disposed to refer to her as my colleague on the Viceregal throne rather than as my wife."

LORD REAY left Poona recently for Ahmednuggur to see with his own eyes the state of things in that part of the Deccan, which is giving rise to such anxiety. If it be found necessary, His Excellency will make provision for famine works, on which those suffering from the apprehended distress will find employment. The rains have been keeping off for some time past, agricultural prospects in the district are more or less gloomy, and fodder is selling at famine prices. The water-supply is running short.

THE prospects of the Bombay cotton crop are somewhat anxious, the season having been late almost everywhere except in parts of Khandesh, where the crop has been adversely affected by the long break in the weather. In Ahmednuggur the area is below last year's average, owing to want of rain for sowing, and the crop is withering. "Everywhere decrease is due to insufficiency of sowing rain, and everywhere crops are suffering." In the Deccan Jaghiis there is a decrease everywhere in the area except in Akalkot. "In places there has been no rain for sowing, and the early crops are dying." The average condition of the cotton crop in the N.W. Provinces and Oudh on the 31st August was reported to be 60, a full average being denoted by 100.

THE BALAGHAT-MYSORE GOLD MINING COMPANY, LIMITED.—A Circular, dated Oct. 18, from the Secretary of this Company states as follows:—"In sending you the enclosed notice of third call of 2s. 6d. per share on your shares in this company, the board request me to say that they had hoped to avoid the necessity of calling up further money. At one time the board were encouraged to believe that the returns from the mine would so increase in the course of the present year as not only to cover the outgoings, but also to leave a margin of profit. However, the end of the 270-foot level north is now unproductive, and it has been found impossible to extract a sufficient quantity of ore from the stopes alone to keep the mill continually supplied. Nevertheless, the operations so far have exposed a large body of valuable quartz in the above-mentioned and other levels, which has usually assayed more than 2 oz. per ton. Developments are being carried on both in depth and by cross-cutting and levels, and these can hardly fail to open out fresh points of attack, and, in due course, to produce larger supplies of quartz for the mill."

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1888.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAY, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.There are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally doddle and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth;
but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.England—per annum £1 0 0 In advance,

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions."The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements.""The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux
of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and
public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This caution is necessary, as many persons have been purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUM PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 12th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 10th October; and from Calcutta to the 9th October.

MR. J. P. HEWETT, Under-Secretary in the Home Department, has been appointed to officiate as Private Secretary to the Viceroy during Sir Mackenzie Wallace's employment on special duty.

MR. SCOBLE, the Legal Member, and Mr. Harvey James, Legislative Secretary, pay a visit to Burma this cold weather in connection with questions raised by the proposed establishment of a Chief Court at Rangoon.

ON the departure of Mr. Master, in January next, Mr. Garstin succeeds him on the Madras Council.

DR. THOMPSON, from Bombay, will succeed Dr. Madden as Surgeon-General with Her Majesty's Forces in India.

THE Commander-in-Chief will be accompanied on his winter tour by Generals Elles and Chapman, Brigadier-General Nairne, Colonels Nicholson and Pole-Carew, and Captains Sherston and Rawlinson, Aide-de-Camps.

THE Commander-in-Chief will, during the earlier part of his tour, pay a flying visit to Oghi, if not to the Black Mountain itself.

ISHAK KHAN has been defeated by the Ameer's troops at Tashkurgan, and he is now a fugitive.

THE rebellion may now be considered as practically at an end.

INFORMATION has been received from Gnatong that the Chinese are taking energetic measures in the interest of peace.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL GRAHAM's despatch concerning the close of operations in Sikkim has reached Army headquarters, and will be published shortly.

THE RAJA OF SIKKIM has expressed a desire to come in and see the Lieut.-Governor at Darjeeling.

THE medal presented annually by Lord Dufferin for a competition at the Viceregal tennis court has been won this year by the Maharaja of Kooch Behar, who, starting at odds of minus thirty in the final tie, defeated Captain Mackenzie, 9th Bengal Lancers, by three sets to love.

THERE will be manoeuvres at Quetta from November 1st to 10th, the troops being exercised in attacking and defending the group of positions embraced in the general line of defence, running from Ghazarband, through the Murgi Kotal, and in rear of Takatu to Gharkai and Kuch.

THE Gaekwar arrived in Bombay by the last mail steamer, and proceeded the same evening to Baroda.

DR. HOJEL has been summoned to Baroda to attend on the young Prince Yeswantrao, who is now lying seriously ill.

THE Bombay Presidency Rifle Association meeting commenced on October 8th, when H.R.H. the Duchess of Connaught fired the first shot.

H.E. LORD REAY opened the Poona Native Arts Exhibition. It is the best which has yet been held.

THE Governor of Madras has left Ootacamund for tour on the West Coast and the Ceded Districts. He will be on tour for a month, joining the Government at Madras, whither it moves also immediately.

THE health of the Bishop of Madras is causing considerable anxiety, he having been taken suddenly ill during an ordination service he was holding at Ootacamund.

THE earliest of the cold weather visitors to the Nizam's capital is Mr. Tom Palmer, who has arrived at Hyderabad.

MAJOR AFZUR JUNG, the Nizam's representative on the Kabul Mission, the starting of which has been delayed, has gone to see the fighting on the Black Mountain.

SOME months ago Lieut.-Colonel Bulkeley, commanding the 17th Bombay Infantry at Mhow, was placed under arrest on grounds connected with serious deficiency in the regimental accounts. In the absence of the Adjutant, Lieut. F. A. C. Kreyer, proceedings were held in abeyance. Lieut. Kreyer returned to India by the Euphrates, and on landing at Bombay was immediately arrested and sent to Poona, where the Court-martial was to assemble on the 15th inst. for his trial and that of Colonel Bulkeley.

NEWS has reached Simla from Kabul, dated the 4th instant, to the effect that the Amir's troops under Gholam Hyder had defeated Ishak's forces at Tashkurgan on Sept. 27th, and had occupied that place. Ishak himself was reported to have fled, but whither is not known. The loss of Tashkurgan is a serious blow to the rebels, as it commanded the approach to Mazar-i-Sharif and Balkh. On the other hand, there has been trouble in the rear of Gholam Hyder's force, the Hazaras having checked some reinforcements sent from Ghazni. Simultaneously with the above report another was received stating that the Amir's troops had been beaten. This was due to their having been checked temporarily at the outset of the engagement.

As a specimen of the facility with which rumours to the prejudice of the Amir are started, one account of the action at Tashkurgan which reached Simla was to the effect that Ishak had gained a decisive victory, and that Gholam Hyder was a prisoner. The occupation of Tashkurgan is a solid contradiction of any stories of this kind. Further details of the fight show that a division commanded by Ishak in person routed Abdulla Khan's troops, but that Gholam Hyder, on his part, beat the rebels opposed to him, and then swung round upon Ishak's division and eventually dispersed it. Ishak's defeat seems to have been complete, as Gholam Hyder occupied Mazir-i-Sharif on the 28th, and the rebellion may be considered as practically at an end.

THE papers to hand to-day contain many detailed accounts of the fighting during the Black Mountain Expedition, which was very severe while it lasted. Although hostilities commenced on the 3rd inst., no serious loss on our side occurred until the 5th. On the morning of that day the River Column, after a night of rain, during which the troops were wet through, in spite of the possession of extra blankets, moved down from the heights of Chamb at 6 A.M. by precipitous paths to the bed of the Indus. The enemy were found in possession of Shinjur village, from which they were driven after a slight skirmish, our only casualty being the Subadar-Major of the 34th Pioneers, severely wounded. After advancing two miles, during which they continued to fire desultory shots from the heights, the enemy were discovered in great force holding strong positions at the village of Kotkai. All along the heights to the right the enemy occupied strong sungurs. The 4th Punjab Infantry were sent up the hill to turn the left flank, and meanwhile the mountain guns and Gatlings covered the advance. A wood in front of the enemy's position was occupied by Hindustani fanatics and Ghazis, who opened a hot fire; but it was carried at the point of the bayonet, the enemy charging bravely.

The Royal Irish then carried the position, being covered by the guns which shelled the village. The enemy's loss was estimated at two hundred. Our casualties were Captain Beley, Staff, dangerously, and Captain Radford, 4th Punjab Infantry, and Lieutenant Cleeve, Royal Artillery, severely wounded; one private Royal Irish killed and three wounded—one severely. The 34th Pioneers lost two killed and three wounded, and the 29th two privates severely wounded. Several drivers and followers were also wounded. Fighting commenced at 10 A.M., and did not cease till nightfall.

Fighting continued the next day. Colonel Crookshank made a reconnaissance towards Konsar at two in the afternoon. The enemy were found occupying a strong position on the other side of the river and behind inaccessible rocks overhead, from which they opened a heavy fire. The enemy lost several men. The casualties on our side were Colonel Crookshank, severely wounded, and a Sepoy of the 29th slightly wounded. Captain Beley and one private of the Royal Irish have died of their wounds. Lieutenant Cleeve is in a critical condition.

The 3rd Column reports having been engaged, and that Hasham Ali is wounded. The Mada Khels have returned home after their defeat.

NOTES.

THE telegrams have, of course, anticipated all the eventful news from India concerning the Black Mountain and Sikkim Expeditions, but several interesting details have come by mail. The latter affair ended, so far as fighting was concerned, as we always expected that it would; but the political and commercial difficulties which now remain to be overcome are neither few nor far between.

THE Indian papers are discussing the question of the annexation of Sikkim from different points of view. On one side the argument is pressed that it will open a peaceful and profitable trade for us. This is an old view, for on April 8th, 1861, the Hon. A. Eden, then Secretary to the Government of Bengal, wrote with regard to the probable trade with Thibet:—"If commercial intercourse is more fairly established it is certain that a very considerable trade will spring up between Thibet and Bengal. They (the Thibetans) will give gold, silver, ponies, musk, borax, wool, turquoise, silk, and munjeet for broadcloths, bleached goods, tobacco, and pearls."

On the other hand, the project which is said to be "in the air" is as vigorously denounced. The Statesman says:—"We do verily believe that to commit ourselves to an enterprise such as this, for the sake of opening 'trade with Thibet,' would be the greatest act of madness ever yet committed in the world. Arrived at Lhasa, what could we do? It is improbable in the last degree that the Lamas would stay there to meet and receive us. Our army of 6,000 or 8,000 men would find no one to treat with them, and would have to march back again, having made the English name a horror to the Buddhist world. We should be fortunate if we were not followed at every step of our retreat by hordes of Tartars and Chinese, to our own frontiers. The cost of such an expedition would be enormous, but it would be well for us if that cost did not prove insignificant in comparison with the moral ruin it would bring upon us."

THIS is strong, but there is more reason in it than always comes from the same clever pen. It would not do to send with a light heart to Lhasa a British expedition which would require certainly not less than 6,000 men, with three times that amount of camp followers, and with much baggage impedimenta. If trade can be opened up, and the Thibetans are gentlemen who thoroughly understand the science of barter, well and good, but it will be better to try the effect first of the pen of diplomacy rather than that of the bayonet, which might bend unexpectedly.

THE mountaineers of Agror have, after the manner of mountaineers, shown fight well at first, and now appear to be taking their licking in good part. Their resistance was no faint-hearted one, as the casualties on both sides have shown. One band of fanatics charged the Royal Irish in the usual desperate Asiatic fashion, and were killed to the last man. The three forces appear to have passed through the same experience in reaching their present positions—namely, immense difficulties of country, aggravated by constant opposition. We hear nothing now of the expedition having been extravagantly large. To do the work quickly and sharply was the wisest and most merciful policy in the end. The troops of the different columns have been well handled, and soldier and Sepoy have vied with each other in upholding the honour of the British arms. That the loss of valuable lives on our side has not been greater has no doubt been owing to the policy which was condemned at first, but which now has been triumphantly carried out in skilful hands. But little as that loss has been, comparatively speaking, it is heavy enough for much sincere regret.

MANY Anglo-Indians at home will join with the Englishman in its expressions of regret at the somewhat sudden death, on October 9th, of Mr. L. E. Sanderson, of Messrs. Sanderson and Co., the well-known Government solicitors at Calcutta. "Few men," says our contemporary, "were so familiarly known in recent years in Calcutta society as Mr. Sanderson. Possessed of a voice of a very high quality, a singer of unusual excellence, he was always ready to give his services whenever and wherever a concert for any charitable object was organised. Season after season his labours in this connection were unremitting and ungrudging, and his cheerful unselfishness proverbial. He sang for the last time with Miss Gomes at that lady's farewell concert, and driving home he caught a chill that led to the melancholy and untimely ending of a life which apparently had before it many years of usefulness. He was a prominent member of the Calcutta Mounted Rifles, and at the Ballyganj annual sports he always distinguished himself. The news of his early death will be received with profound regret, and Calcutta will not easily forget one who so cheerfully gave his services whenever asked to assist those numerous charitable objects which in India are so frequently in need of help."

THE latest news published in the Indian papers from the headquarters of the Expedition, under date October 6, say that "Colonel Crookshank is progressing well." We now know by wire that that gallant officer is no more, and the opinion in which he was held by Sir Frederick Roberts and the officers of his regiment is given in the telegram which his family has just received from India.

THE following telegram from the Commander-in-Chief in India has been received by the family of the late Colonel Crookshank:—"SIMLA, Oct. 25th.—General, Commanding officers, men 2nd Brigade Hazara Force, beg to convey to late Colonel Crookshank's family heartfelt sympathy in bereavement, and deep regret for loss of gallant Christian soldier who led column to victory on 4th. Add my own deep sympathy."

CAPTAIN BELEY, of the 25th Punjab Infantry, and who was General McQueen's Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, was also a brave and popular officer. General Galbraith, in a telegram to headquarters reporting his death, said, "Her Majesty could not have lost a more gallant and gifted soldier, or one who is more universally regretted."

A CORRESPONDENT writes to us:—

The author of Distinguished Anglo-Indians may well feel indignant with his Calcutta reviewer, who, in a notice of his work—where opinions are expressed quite at variance with some of the best critics of the London Press—misrepresents or falsifies the author's text. The reviewer coolly quotes Colonel Laurie as saying, with reference to Sir Lepel Griffin, "firmly standing in the pedestal of purpose"—following up his own error with the self-satisfied remark, "We must treasure up that phrase"—whereas, at page 222, "so firmly standing on" is clearly printed. The reviewer also says that Colonel Laurie speaks of the "Babu Press," and that Sir Lepel Griffin "can well afford to treat it with contempt." Now, the author distinctly remarks that the term "Babu Press" is from an Anglo-Indian journal; and, as will be also seen at page 356, it is Lord Dufferin who thinks that Sir Lepel Griffin can afford to treat the attacks on him "with indifference." If this, as in the first case, be not carelessness or wilful misrepresentation in reviewing, we would like to know where it is to be found?

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 28.

The Commission appointed by the Government to inquire into the charges of bribery and corruption preferred against Mr. Crawford, Revenue Commissioner for the central division of the Bombay Presidency, commenced its sittings on Tuesday. Mr. Justice Wilson, of the High Court of Bengal, presided. The Advocate-General represented the Government; and Mr. Crawford was defended by Mr. Inverarity. The charges, thirty-three in number, were read out, and the accused pleaded not guilty to the charges of bribery and corruption. He admitted having borrowed money from certain persons residing within his division. The Advocate-General then opened the case at considerable length. Each charge will be dealt with separately. A very large number of witnesses will be examined, and the investigation is to be so elaborate that it will probably last a month at least. With so able and experienced a president, however, there is no possibility of the public time being unduly wasted.

The Government has issued a resolution dealing with the material condition of the lower classes of the population in India. It is pointed out that over the greater portion of the country no sufficient cause exists for Government interference. Still in some portions of India the population is so dense that a comprehensive plan of emigration is indispensable as a safeguard for the future. Behar and the districts east of Lucknow and Ratnagiri, in the Bombay presidency, especially require precautionary measures. It is believed that these will be most successfully accomplished by promoting emigration into Burma. It is therefore proposed to reserve 100,000 acres in Upper and Lower Burma for this purpose. The Mandalay Railway and its "feeder" lines will bring excellent land within easy reach of the colonists.

A synopsis of the guaranteed railways' transactions to the end of 1887 has been published. The increase of capital during five years amounted to £4,396,262. The results show a profit in this period of Rs.10,70,000. Up to 1883 there was a loss of over 17 lakhs.

Special officers have been deputed to report on the administration of the gaols throughout India, with a view to effect more uniformity in their management. The death-rate at present varies from 11 to 72 per thousand, and the cost of maintenance from Rs. 44 to Rs. 91 per head, while the cases of punishment of offenders against gaol discipline range from 33 to 328 yearly.

In introducing the Railway Bill in the Legislative Council at Simla the Legal Member alluded to the great development of Indian railway traffic. In 1854, he said, 20 miles only were open, in 1874 there were 8,216, and at the present time 14,191. The separate lines had increased from 26 in 1874 to 50 in 1888. During the same period the capital expended had grown from 131 to over 183 millions, the passengers from 44 to over 96 millions, the tonnage carried from 8,775,000 tons to over 20,195,000 tons, and the gross receipts from £11,952,590 to £13,450,622. The existing railways formed five classes:—First, State lines worked by companies with a capital expenditure of £62,500,000; secondly, State lines worked by the Government with a capital expenditure of £50,000,000; thirdly, lines worked by guaranteed companies, with a capital of £61,333,000; fourthly, lines worked by assisted companies, with a capital of £3,750,000; fifthly, lines owned by Native States, with a capital of over £5,000,000.

The Bill provides, among other important enactments, for the appointment of a commission of reference for all disputed points, to consist of a High Court Judge and one railway and one mercantile expert.

At the conclusion of the business the Viceroy expressed deep regret at the death of Colonel Crookshank. He had, said Lord Dufferin, served the Government for a considerable time in the important capacity of Deputy Secretary of the Military Department. His career as a soldier had been distinguished, and he had now lost his life while discharging his duty as the colonel commanding one of the four columns despatched against the Black Mountain tribes.

A telegram from Aska reports great scarcity in the Ganjam district, where the grain merchants are holding back their stocks. Looting has occurred in several places.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

CAMP AT MAIDAN, OCT. 27.

The Akazais have paid the whole amount of their fine. This tribe, the most recalcitrant of all, had never before submitted or paid a fine. The Allaiwals, who never paid a fine previously, and have been boasting that they would raise a man to fight in place of every rupee of the fine, have sent a message intimating willingness to receive an envoy to treat for peace. Hostages for their good behaviour will be exacted. Survey parties with escorts are to be sent out.

We anticipate the return of the force to Oghi in the first week of November.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 28.

The Black Mountain campaign is virtually concluded, all serious opposition having been completely crushed. The important question now arises in what manner we are to render our success most effective, with a view of compelling these wild mountaineers to pay due regard to our border rights. The conviction grows more assured every day that unless we make the Indus our frontier line we shall find it impossible for any length of time to control effectually the predatory instinct of these robber tribes.

In the meantime, whatever may be the ultimate issue of the policy now under consideration, it has been resolved that the immediate work of the expedition shall be thoroughly carried out. Permission has been accorded to the general commanding to proceed to Thakot and explore the whole district. The Thakotis number 1,500 fighting men.

The Commander-in-Chief arrived at head-quarters on Wednesday and inspected the force there. He subsequently went on to visit General Channer at Maidan, and inspected his brigade.

Bachrai and Ghari have been burnt. Eight hundred Cashmere troops have crossed into Mundehar. The Chagarzais are maintaining strict neutrality. The Parari Sayads are still defiant. The Khyber levies, with their chief, Major Adam Khan, have proved invaluable allies by reason of their wonderful activity. They have proved more than a match for the enemy in the harassing guerilla warfare of the tribesmen, and have succeeded by ceaseless alertness in entirely disconcerting the strategy of ambushes.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 28.

The latest telegram from Sikkim reports the meeting at Guntok of the Rajah's Council. Congratulations on our recent victory have been received at Gnatong from Bhotan. The Chinese Ampa is not expected to arrive till November 10th. Six hundred ponies have been ordered to meet him en route.

Colonel Bromhead is progressing favourably. General Graham is at Padong, awaiting the arrival of the Ampa.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 28.

The Ameer left Cabul for Balkh last Thursday. The Kurram Mission has proved a failure, in consequence of continuous obstruction on the part of the Ameer's envoy, and it will return immediately.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 27.

Tha-do and Nga-Chak, two notorious dacoit leaders, have been killed by the police in the Pakoku districts. Lieutenants Gastrell and Atkinson, with 123 of the military police, attacked the Setkya pretender on the 25th inst. in a strongly-fortified position in Kyoukse, and expelled him after two hours' fighting, our loss being four killed and fourteen wounded. Mr. Atkinson, who was severely wounded, killed two dacoits with his own hand. The camp was destroyed, and three dacoits were found in it dead.

The Chins have made a raid from Indin, carrying off a number of women and children and brutally massacring nine persons. The despatch of a punitive expedition is considered necessary.

An expedition will start in December against Sawlapaw, chief of the Eastern Karennues, who has invaded the land of our tributaries, and refuses to pay us allegiance. The expedition will start from Upper and Lower Burma in two divisions, and the Western Karennues will probably co-operate with us.

THE GHAZIS OF AGHOR.—A telegram to the Civil and Military Gazette says that so desperate was the charge of the Ghazis on the 4th that several hand-to-hand encounters took place, revolvers being freely used. Surgeon-Major Deakin, the Medical Officer of the Pioneers, was seen defending himself with one whilst dressing a wounded man. General Galbraith was charged by a fanatic who had lain hid. The General fired at him twice, and he was shot down by an Afridi of the 4th Punjab Infantry.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

RETIRED OFFICERS IN ENGLAND.

(Times of India.)

The case of William Frost Nuthall, of Edith-terrace, West Brompton, a retired general in Her Majesty's Indian Army, which has been recently published in the papers, is one that cannot fail to have a mournful interest for officers in this country who are about to retire on their pensions and live in England. It appears that this unfortunate officer has been declared bankrupt, and that his liabilities are £6,261, and his assets £140. He seems to have left the service in 1873, and in 1877 to have joined with some others in the purchase of limestone leases in Anglesea. What an officer who has spent the whole of his life in drilling Sepoys can be supposed to know about limestone leases in Anglesea is not apparent on the surface. It is not with the view of dwelling on the gallant general's embarrassments that we have called attention to his affairs. Everybody will sympathise with his misfortunes; but we doubt whether our readers altogether realise what a very common case his is. There is no delusion more common than that which leads the retired Anglo-Indian to imagine that he has business talents which cannot fail to make his fortune in any branch of commerce or speculation to which he may turn his attention. And thus we have, time after time, the curious spectacle of a colonel of Sepoys, who has spent all his life in India, diligently drilling and disciplining his regiment, finally retiring to England, and at once plunging into pursuits and undertakings of whose very existence he has hitherto scarcely been aware. He goes on the Stock Exchange, or he buys a dairy farm, or he starts a co-operative store, and writes to all his old friends in India to deal with him. In these pursuits it can scarcely be said that his previous knowledge and experience stand him in much stead. The last scene is the bankruptcy court, and our sanguine dealer in cows figures in the schedule as "general in the army and dairyman." Nor can it be said that the retired Anglo-Indian who turns his attention to co-operative stores fares very much better. Those who are curious in such matters have only got to consult the advertisements in any London daily paper, and they will see general officers, retired judges, and eminent Anglo-Indians in retirement figuring as promoters and directors of companies of all kinds and sorts, from recovering treasure from shipwrecked vessels to extracting sunbeams from cucumbers, like Swift's famous philosopher. The end of these things is not wealth, and one cannot help being more sorry than surprised when one reads how a whilom colonel of Sepoys having failed to make his fortune in diamonds, as he fondly hoped, has appeared in the list of bankrupts instead. And when a similar destiny overtakes a collector who has utilised the leisure of his retirement by promoting a company to do the washing and getting up of the linen of the inhabitants of London on a new and improved principle, we cannot help regretting that a man should have so misdirected his energies. That retired Anglo-Indians will cease to invest their capital and earnings in all sort of wonderful ways no one expects. That they will make money out of it no one but themselves can venture to hope. That they get a little amusement and excitement out of their strange ventures is the most one can look forward to for them.

THE PRICE OF SILVER.

(Englishman.)

The fall in the price of silver from 44½d. an ounce to 43½d. seems to justify the general doubt whether the late rise, to whatever influences it may have been due, can safely be accepted as a sign that the metal is beginning to recover its position. In the absence, however, of any precise information as to the cause of the advance it might be unwise to conclude that we shall hear no more of it. If it is true that Messrs. Rothschild are active buyers there ought to be good reasons of some sort for expecting silver to go up; and even if the rumour is incorrect the increased demand may still prove to be more than a momentary spurt. News comes by the mail that some American capitalists have found a plan for making New York, instead of London, the great silver centre of the world by issuing silver certificates against deposits in the United States and Mexico, of which they are now arranging to obtain the sole control. As these certificates are intended to be negotiable everywhere the scheme must be very powerfully supported to achieve even partial success; and complete success, in the face of the fact that London is the centre of the world's trade, none but a very sanguine speculator would look for. At the same time it may be admitted that as a means of rehabilitating silver there is something very taking in this American idea. Silver certificates have long been in use in the States, where they are an approved form of currency.

What is to prevent their use becoming general in all silver countries? American experience goes to show that no great practical difficulties stand in the way of this method of turning surplus bullion to account; and any serious effort to give the silver certificate system a wider field must react favourably on the price of the metal, which will then become in greater demand. Granted the formation of a Syndicate with this end in view, the late fluctuations of the market cease to be a puzzle, while the chances of a further improvement may yet be worth considering.

COLONEL MARSHALL.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Colonel Marshall has been withdrawn from the position of Private Secretary, to which he was appointed at the request of his Highness the Nizam nearly two years ago. That appointment, which was unprecedented, had for its special purpose and its justification the desire of Lord Dufferin to enable the Nizam and the Minister of his choice, Sir Salar Jung, to carry on the work of administration, by furnishing as an intermediary a man of tact and savoir faire, who, it was hoped, would be able to soften the personal incompatibility which had unfortunately arisen between the youthful Sovereign and his young Minister, and which threatened to interfere with the satisfactory performance of the functions of Government. The new arrangement was understood to have been suggested by Mr. Cordery, and it was cordially welcomed by the Nizam, and pressed by him upon Lord Dufferin on the occasion of his visit to Hyderabad, his Excellency giving his assent somewhat reluctantly, out of deference to the wishes of his Highness. For a time the novel arrangement worked satisfactorily, Col. Marshall acquitting himself of the very difficult and anomalous position with address and discretion. Eventually, however, the tension between the Nizam and the Minister became so great that the latter sent in his resignation, the Private Secretary performing the part of a mutual friend in negotiating terms which were equally creditable to the better feeling of the high personages whose estrangement he had done so much to mitigate. At the moment of Sir Salar Jung's resignation his successor in the Ministry, Sir Asman Jah, was in London, representing his Highness during the celebration of Her Majesty's Jubilee. Until the return of Sir Asman Jah to take up his post as Minister, the Private Secretary held a unique position, and was popularly regarded as to all intents and purposes the ad interim Dewan. After the return to Hyderabad of Sir Asman Jah, with whom personally his Highness the Nizam was on excellent terms, the special need for which the appointment of a British officer to the post of Private Secretary was intended to provide ceased to exist. But the Nizam asked for a continuance of an arrangement to which he had grown accustomed, and the Viceroy consented to lend Colonel Marshall's services for a further period. The inconvenience, however, of having a British officer interposing between the Nizam and the Minister under ordinary conditions as a permanent arrangement could not be overlooked. Besides, there was the possibility that a dignified officer in such a position might be held to overshadow the Resident and diminish his just influence. While Mr. Cordery, who had himself devised the combination as a means of surmounting a difficulty, was Resident, things might work smoothly, but there was no guarantee that under his successors possible misunderstandings might not arise which were best avoided. There was never any question of the appointment being made permanent; the only doubt was as to the moment when Colonel Marshall could be most conveniently withdrawn. Sir Asman Jah, it is understood, was himself desirous that the Nizam's wish to have the advantage of Colonel Marshall's assistance in the transaction of business should be acceded to. The Viceroy, however, has written to his Highness a letter couched in very cordial terms, setting forth that as the special circumstances under which the services of Colonel Marshall had been lent being now at an end, that officer will be withdrawn. The Nizam has very cordially acknowledged his obligations to Colonel Marshall for zealous services always rendered with geniality and tact.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 9.)

THE LATE POLICE TORTURE CASE.—At the High Court on Monday, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Macpherson and the Hon. Mr. Justice Trevelyan, Mr. Monmohun Ghose applied for the admission of an appeal on behalf of the prisoners in the case of Empress v. Dltto Doyal and Abdool Kurrim, late police officers attached to the Alipore Thanna, who were convicted at the last Alipore Criminal Sessions of torturing one Johurruddin, and sentenced—the first to two years' and the second to one year's rigorous imprisonment. The learned counsel stated that the prosecutor, Johurruddin, and his wife were charged on the 9th of June last of having robbed one Chintamonee Bewah, of the sum of Rs. 30 from her house. The complaint having been laid at the Alipore Thanna, Inspector Campbell and the two prisoners went to the house of Johurraddin, and searched it, but did not find any money there, and it was then found that the charge was false, as appeared from the statement of the woman Chintamonee, made subsequently. Inspector Campbell accordingly entered in his diary the charge was false. Johurraddin and his wife were, however, told by the Inspector to attend at the Thanna the next morning to draw up his report. The case for the prosecution was that Johurraddin and his wife were arrested and taken to the Thanna by Inspector Campbell after searching their house, and were kept in the hajat all night, and at about seven o'clock the next morning Johurraddin was tortured by the prisoners to confess to having stolen the money. The learned counsel submitted that the charge of the Sessions Judge, Mr. Beveridge, to the jury by repeatedly telling them that if they believed that Johurraddin and his wife were taken to the Thanna in the night time, and confined in the constables' sleeping-room, then the jury might very easily believe the rest of their story that Johurraddin had been tortured. Such a direction had materially prejudiced the prisoners, and, unfortunately for them, their case was tried at a time when the sensation of torture by the police was at its highest. Mr. Ghose then read the charge of the judge, and also the evidence in the case, pointing out how weak the case for the prosecution was. Their lordships, after hearing Mr. Ghose, admitted the appeal, and allowed the prisoners to be released on bail, to the satisfaction of the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnas, pending the hearing of the appeal.—Daily News.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 10.)

PEARL FISHING IN INDIA.—The Madras Mail writes:—"The Board of Revenue has requested Dr. Thurston, the Superintendent of the Madras Museum, now on leave in England, to visit on its behalf the several electrical establishments in Europe in view to his selecting for use at the various pearl fisheries in India an electric globe light that would burn in twenty fathoms of water. The want of such an appliance has long been felt, and the work at the pearl fisheries at present has to be confined to pearl banks situated in less than twenty fathoms of water. Dr. Thurston's expenses will be paid by the Board."

EURASIAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—The anniversary meeting of the Eurasian and Anglo-Indian Association was held last Saturday afternoon in the People's Park, Madras, and the Town Hall was largely attended. Mr. White presided, and delivered an address. Referring to the satisfactory report for the past year, he claimed that the Eurasian colonies near Bangalore were a success, the settlers having settled down to agricultural work with benefit to themselves and their children. The latter were certainly thriving on ragi and other grain better than on bread. He also spoke in favour of the National Congress. Other speakers were the acting Archdeacon of Madras, the Rev. Mr. Whitmore, the Vicar-General Mayer, Mr. Gantz, Mr. Elliot, a delegate from the Colonies, and Mr. Sausman.

THE MORGAN-ROSS DIVORCE CASE.—The suit filed by Mr. Rhodes Morgan, Deputy Conservator of Forests, on the ground of his wife's adultery with Mr. H. T. Ross, District Judge of Madura, came before Mr. Irvine, District Judge of Coimbatore, on the 28th ultimo. Mr. Winterton appeared for the petitioner, and Annaswamy Row for the counter-petitioner. Mr. Winterton, addressing the Court, disclaimed any intention of unnecessarily introducing the name of the man who had not been made party to the suit, but the circumstances were such that it was absolutely impossible to prove his case without bringing Mr. Ross's name forward. The Judge said there was no necessity to take further evidence, as a clear admission of the truth had been made by the counter-petitioner. Mr. Winterton said he would prove his case with competent witnesses. From the beginning he did not intend to inflict the whole of the evidence on the Court, but he would select one or two acts of adultery and prove them conclusively. The Judge did not consider the evidence necessary, and thought its publication would be inexpedient. He was satisfied that there was no collusion, and did not doubt the bona fides of the petitioner; and he gave judgment for the petitioner, in accordance with the language of the section. The question of alimony was next discussed. The Court said it had no power to make an order. Mr. Winterton said that his client intended to make proper provision, and had already insured his life for the lady's benefit in case of his death.

BOMBAY.

(Oct. 12.)

THE Rani Sahab of Mudhol was delivered of a son at Mudhol on Thursday, the 4th inst.

THE Bank of Bombay on Thursday raised its rate of interest on demand loans on Government Paper to 6 per cent.

THE Bombay Catholic Examiner announces the death at St. Benuo's College, North Wales, of the Very Rev. Thomas Porter, S.J., Vicar Apostolic of Jamaica, and brother of the Archbishop of Bombay.

AMONG the passengers who left by Friday's mail steamer was Colonel Sir Oliver St. John, the Governor-General's Agent at Baroda, who went home on three months' leave. Mr. and Mrs. Cornforth were also passengers by the same mail.

MR. J. ARCHER has made some studies of Natives in the neighbourhood of Poona, two of which he sent to the Exhibition, where they attracted much attention. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught purchased both pictures. Mr. Archer, at the desire of the Committee of the Poona Fine Arts Exhibition, prepared a report on the exhibits, which has been published in pamphlet form.

A MEETING of Parsee Justices of the Peace for the town of Bombay was held at Mazagon Castle, at the residence of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., C.S.I., on Saturday evening last, for the purpose of selecting a Delegate of the Parsee Chief Matrimonial Court in the room of Mr. Eduljee Bomanjee Morris, resigned. Sir Jamsetjee, who presided, explained the object of the meeting, stating that he had been requested by the Government to call the meeting and to submit the name of any Parsee gentleman conversant with the English language, whom a majority of the Justices present at the meeting would recommend for the vacant office. On the motion of Mr. Hormusjee Dadabhoy, seconded by the Hon. Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, Mr. Dadabhoy Bomanjee Jeejeebhoy was unanimously elected a delegate.

A GENTLEMAN having written to Mr. Chatfield, Director of Public Instruction, calling his attention to the fact that the Maharajah of Benares' speech against the National Congress had been distributed amongst the public libraries in this Presidency, in official envelopes, endorsed by Mr. Chatfield's head assistant, received the following reply:—"Sir,--In reply to your letter of the 29th ult., I have the honour to state that the only communication I have received on the subject was a letter from the Private Secretary to the Maharaja of Benares, dated Aug. 20, 1888. This letter inquired whether I would distribute a copy of the Maharaja's lecture to every village school. In reply, I stated that I could not undertake to distribute a political pamphlet to schoolboys. After I had sent this reply, and probably before my reply had reached its destination, I received 200 copies of the lecture. These copies I sent to public libraries, and I have no objection to send 200 copies of your pamphlet to the same libraries. You have also presented me with twenty-five copies, so that 175 additional copies are required. After the distribution of 200 copies you will have the advantage of the Maharajah, whose lecture was in Hindi, which is little understood by our people.—I have, &c., K. M. CHATFIELD, Director of Public Instruction, Poona, Oct. 2, 1888.

A PRESENT TO THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT.—We had the pleasure of inspecting a tastefully got-up table cover to be presented to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught by the girls of the Poona Native High School. The work is of maroon silk neatly bordered with gold. The acceptance of this unpretentious gift by Her Royal Highness has gladdened the hearts of the diligent little ones, whose pretty handiwork will no doubt find a conspicuous corner in the Royal household in India.—Deccan Herald.

THE Indian Mirror thinks that any kind of Latin is good enough to make an impression upon the educated Baboo. But the Government of India will hardly be frightened by this terrific piece of learning which the Mirror hurls at its head:—"Senos Deus vult perdere prins dernen tat."

THE value of gold imported into India during the first five months of the current financial year was Rs. 26,93,123, and that of silver Rs. 3,63,01,405. As the value of both metals exported was Rs. 66,02,541, this leaves a balance in favour of imports of Rs. 4,94,19,528. The amount coined and examined at the Indian Mints was Rs. 3,36,91,605.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These Shares on Saturday were unaltered. Mysore Shares were last quoted 3½ to 4 xd, Nundydroog 1 13-16 to 5 15-16 xd, Indian Consolidated 7s. to 8s., Balaghat-Mysore (15s. paid) 10s. 6d. to 11s. 6d., ditto fully paid (£1) 17s. to 18s., Ooregum 35s. 6d. to 36s., ditto Preference 35s. to 36s., Devala-Moyar 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d., Nine Reefs 15s. 6d. to 16s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (16s. paid) 10s. 6d. to 11s. 6d., Mysore-Wynaad (17s. 6d. paid) 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d., South-East Mysore 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., Indian Glen rock 4s. to 4s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 1½ to 1¾, New South-East Wynaad 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d., Wentworth (17s. paid) 2s. to 4s., Wynaad Perseverance 2s. 9d. to 3s. 3d., and Mysore West (fully paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d.

LADY DUFFERIN AND NATIVE LADIES.

The following is the address presented to her Excellency the Countess of Dufferin by the Purdanashin ladies of Lahore:—May it please your Excellency,—We, the undersigned purdanashin ladies, forming the deputation appointed by the public meeting of the purdanashin ladies of Lahore, held on 2nd October, 1888, beg most respectfully to approach your Excellency with a cordial and affectionate welcome for this your Excellency's visit to our city. We find special cause for welcoming your Excellency to Lahore in the fact that this visit is connected with the formal opening by your Excellency of an institution which will confer countless blessings on us, and which is the direct result of the noble scheme of supplying medical aid for Indian women so graciously established by your Excellency. We are very grateful to your Excellency for having afforded us this opportunity of expressing our deep, sincere, and heartfelt gratitude for the very noble and arduous work done by your Excellency, at considerable self-sacrifice, in establishing on a really useful and permanent basis the National Association for Medical Aid. We take great pleasure in thinking that on account of the fact that the prejudices against medical treatment on the European lines, which at one time were rampant among us, are rapidly disappearing before the progress of scientific education in the country, and that at no distant date adequate female Medical skill will be abundantly available to the Indian women whose beds of sickness, even in very serious feminine ailments, no male doctor can approach, signal and unique success will attend the noble and humanitarian efforts of the National Association for Medical Aid. We can assure your Excellency that our feelings of heartfelt gratitude and respectful love and affection for your Excellency are shared by thousands upon thousands of our sisters in this Province who are not formally represented in this deputation; but whose gratitude and affection for your Excellency are none the less deep and genuine, because they are not evidenced by signs and tokens visible to the outside world. We can also assure your Excellency that your Excellency's noble and benevolent exertions, which, we are aware, must have told heavily upon your Excellency's constitution and health, to supply your Excellency's Indian sisters with the incalculable blessings of medical aid, have secured for your Excellency a place in our hearts among the noblest and greatest heroines of the past, those types of all that is best and brilliant in our history. In fact, we are sure, that when the history of the period during which your Excellency graced this country with your presence comes to be written, your Excellency will figure in its pages as one of the noblest and greatest benefactresses India ever had. We are aware that the work your Excellency has done for your poor and helpless Indian sisters is so permanent and enduring that your Excellency's name will always be remembered by them and their future generations with sentiments of the deepest veneration and esteem. In taking leave of your Excellency we most earnestly pray that may the Great Almighty confer upon you and yours every blessing, happiness, and prosperity.—Civil and Military Gazette, Oct. 5.

GOOD SERVICE PENSIONS.

Colonel A. G. F. Hogg, C.B., Bombay Staff Corps, who has been awarded a good service pension, entered the Service in January, 1854. Colonel Hogg has held many important staff appointments, amongst which were those of quartermaster-general, Bombay Army; and brigadier-general commanding the Aden Brigade, and political resident at Aden. He served as adjutant of the 1st Sindh Horse in the Persian Campaign of 1857, receiving the medal with clasp. In 1858-59 he served with the forces in Khandeish and the Nizam's country, and was with his regiment at Canton during the China War of 1860. He served throughout the Abyssinian Campaign as deputy-assistant quartermaster-general, and was present at the action of Arogee and capture of Magdala, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the medal and brevet of major. Colonel Hogg served in the Afghan War in 1879-80 as director of transport with the Bombay Reserve Brigade on the Candahar line, and was present during the investment of Sherpore and in the operations round Cabul in December, 1879. He was again mentioned in despatches, and received the brevet of colonel and the medal with clasp.

Colonel R. C. Stewart, C.B., Madras Staff Corps, has been awarded a good service pension. Colonel Stewart, who entered the Service in Aug., 1853, has held many important staff appointments, among which may be mentioned those of quartermaster-general, Madras Army, and brigadier-general, commanding the Hyderabad Contingent. He served in the Indian Campaign of 1857-58, was present at the storm and capture of Meangunge, and served as deputy assistant adjutant-general to Sir Edward Lugard's division at the siege and capture of Lucknow in March, 1858. He was severely wounded, and his horse was wounded in three places. He was mentioned in despatches, received the brevet of major, and the medal with clasp.

A good service pension has been conferred upon Colonel Sir J. Browne, K.C.S.I., C.B., R. (late Bengal) E. Sir James, who entered the service in December, 1857, has seen important service. He took part in the Mahsud-Waziri Expedition of 1860, and was present at the forcing of the Barara Pass, receiving the medal and clasp. He also distinguished himself, and was slightly wounded, in the Ambela Expedition of 1863, being mentioned in despatches (clasp). He was superintending engineer of the 2nd Division Quetta Field Force in the Afghan War of 1878-79, and was present in the engagement at Takht-i-Pul and in the advance to Khelat-i-Ghilzie, being mentioned in despatches and receiving the medal. He also served in the Egyptian War of 1882 in command of the Royal Engineers of the Indian Contingent, and was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. He was mentioned in despatches, awarded the C.B., and received the medal with clasp and Khedive's star, and the order of the 3rd class of the Osmanieh.

THE INDIAN PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION.

The Secretary of the Indian Patriotic Association recently sent a circular to various Mahomedan Anjumans, explaining the objects of the Association, requesting that the circular might be laid before the Anjumans, and that if they agreed with these objects they should allow their names to be entered in the list of Anjumans sympathising with the Association. The following Anjumans have up to the present time expressed their concurrence with the aims of the Association:—

Anjuman Islamia, Lahore, Punjab.
Anjuman Islami Haqani, Ludhiana, Punjab.
Central National Mahomedan Association, Calcutta.
Anjuman Islami, Amritsar, Punjab.
Anjuman Himayat Islam, Amritsar, Punjab.
Anjuman Islamia, Bareilly, North-West Provinces.
National Mahomedan Association, Bhagalpur, Bengal.
Anjuman Islami, Chapra, Zilla Sarun, Bengal.
Anjuman Ilni, Budaon, North-West Provinces.
Anjuman Islamia, Budaon, North-West Provinces.
Jubilee Mahomedan Association, Budaon.
Anjuman Islamia, Bankipur, Bengal.
Majlis Islami, Ludhiana, Punjab.
Anjuman Islami, Dindigul, Madras.
Branch National Mahomedan Association, Midnapur.
Majlis Islamia, Meerut, North-West Provinces.
Anjuman Islamia, Mymensingh, Eastern Bengal.
Branch Mahomedan Association, Shaikpura, Behar.
Anjuman Islamia, Gujerat, Punjab.
Anjuman Islamia, Jhajhar, District Rohtak, Punjab.
Mahomedan Anjuman Mufid i-An, Kasur, Punjab.
Anjuman Islamia, Jubbulpore, Central Provinces.

The last named Anjuman passed the following resolution on the 8th Oct.:—

(1.) That the differences amongst the people of India as regards their religion, manners and customs, the variety of wants and interests which their respective circumstances create, and their ignorance of politics, disqualify them from forming a body such as the National Congress. The good of the Mahomedans lies in helping the Government to do what it has been doing in the past, educating us, and giving us more and more power as our knowledge advanced.

(2.) In the present state of the Mahomedan society, especially in a country like India, where the number of Hindus and their influence predominate, the vote system, which is the fundamental principle of the Congress, is highly injurious to the Mahomedans; and if the Government pleases to introduce such a system in the administration, the oppression of the minority by the majority will be established, which is worse than the most aristocratic Government; for in the former case the oppressed will look in vain for sympathy to the public. The concrete example of such a measure will be found in the local and municipal self-Government, where the Mahomedans are disproportionately represented.

(3.) The chief promoters of the Congress are Bengalis, and the Mahomedan community of India has kept aloof from it, and those who have joined are not influential amongst us nor worthy of being called our leaders. The Mahomedans of this place should, therefore, stand apart from this agitation.

THE salt revenue for the first five months of the year shows a most satisfactory increase over that of the corresponding period of last year, having amounted to Rs. 3,06,25,000, as against Rs. 2,57,63,000. The quantity of salt on which duty was paid was 12,654,000 maunds, as against 13,331,000 maunds in the previous year.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL SIR E. HAYTHORNE, K.C.B.—General Sir Edmund Haythorne, K.C.B., died on the 18th inst. at Silchester House, near Reading. He was the son of the late Mr. John Haythorne, of Hill House, Gloucester, and was born in 1818. In 1862 he married Eliza, fourth daughter of the late Mr. J. Thomas, of Bletsoe Castle, Bedfordshire. He was educated at Sandhurst, and entered the Army in 1837 as ensign of the 98th Regiment. In 1841 he embarked for service in China, and was present with the expedition to the north of China in 1842, including operations in the Yangtse-Kiang, the attack and capture of Chin Kiangfoo, and the operations before Nankin. He served as brigade-major to the Chusan Field Force under Brigadier-General Campbell from July, 1843, until the island was given up to the Chinese authorities. He acted as aide-de-camp to Sir John Campbell, commanding the 3rd Division of the Army in the Punjab Campaign of 1858-9, and was present at the passage of the Chenab and the battles of Sadoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat, and in the pursuit of the Afghans to the Khyber Pass. In 1850, as major commanding flank companies of the 98th Regiment, he was present at the forcing of the Kohat Pass under Sir Charles Napier. During this service he commanded a detached column, which successfully carried out the destruction of two villages and towers. In 1851, as aide-de-camp to Sir Colin Campbell, he was present at the operations against the Momund tribe at Michnee, on the North-West Frontier, and in the affairs of the 7th, 8th, and 9th of November. In 1855 he proceeded to the Crimea with drafts, and assumed command of the 1st Battalion Royal Regiment, being present at the siege and fall of Sebastopol, afterwards as assistant adjutant-general of the Highland Division until the evacuation of the Crimea. In 1859, when in command of the garrison at Hong Kong, he was nominated chief of the staff of the army formed at that place for service in the north of China, and had the sole responsibility of the organisation of this force until the arrival of Lieut.-General Sir Hope Grant. He was made a K.C.B. in 1873. His services have several times been mentioned in despatches, and were especially recognised by Lord Herbert, Secretary of State for War, when proposing a vote of thanks to the troops in the House of Lords. He was appointed to the colonelcy of the 1st Battalion Hampshire Regiment in February, 1879.

COLONEL A. C. W. CROOKSHANK, C.B.—Colonel Arthur Chichester William Crookshank, C.B., commander of the fourth column of the expedition now operating against the Black Mountain tribes, died on the 24th inst. at Haripur, from the wounds he received in the skirmish at Kotkai a fortnight ago. He was the eldest son of the late Captain B. C. G. Crookshank, of the 51st (King's Own) Regiment, was born in 1841, and entered the 35th Regiment in 1859. Thence he was transferred to the Bengal Staff in 1868. His promotions are dated—lieutenant, 1862; captain, 1871; major, 1879; lieutenant-colonel, 1881; and colonel, 1885. He served with the Jowaki Expedition in 1877-78, and for this he received the medal with clasp. Immediately afterwards in the Afghan War of 1878-80, he commanded the 32nd Pioneers. He was present at the operations in Southern Afghanistan, including the advance on the Helmund and the reconnaissance of Thull Chotiali, in the occupation of the Jellalabad Valley, and the action at Mazeena. For his services in this war he was three times mentioned in despatches, and received the medal and the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel. While he was engaged on these two expeditions he also held the post of Assistant Military Secretary to the Government of India (1876-1886), and the year after he left that post he was appointed to raise the 34th Pioneers, of which he was commandant at the time of his death, and was rewarded with the Companionship of the Bath. When in September last the expedition against the Black Mountain tribes was organised under General McQueen, Colonel Crookshank was entrusted with the command of a fourth column. Within two days of the beginning of active operations the fourth column, which was acting along the river, experienced serious resistance, and Colonel Crookshank received his fatal wounds while making a reconnaissance.

COLONEL H. S. STABB.—Colonel H. S. Stabb, who was recently appointed to the post of Justice of the Peace in Zululand, died suddenly on the 22nd inst. of heart disease. Colonel Stabb entered the service in April, 1856, obtaining his lieutenancy in August, 1856, captaincy in November, 1861, majority in March, 1875, lieutenant-colonelcy in June, 1881, colonelcy in June, 1885, and was placed on half-pay in June, 1866. He served as adjutant of the 32nd Regiment during the Indian Campaign of 1857-58, and was present with Colonel Maxwell's column in the operations before Calpee early in 1858, and proceeded with it to the Alumbagh during the taking of Lucknow in March, 1858. He took part in the capture of the entrenched position at Dhaigha and fort at Tyrhool, actions of Doadpore and Judgespore, surrender of the forts at Ahmetie and Shunkerpore, and pursuit of Benhi Madho across the river Gogra (medal). He also served in the latter part of the Zulu War of 1879 as deputy-assistant Quartermaster-General, 2nd Division, and was present in the engagement at Ulundi. He commanded the expedition that erected in Zululand the "Queen's memorial cross" on the spot where the Prince Imperial was killed, and was thanked by command of Her Majesty, and received the medal with clasp.

MAJOR R. L. PRICE.—Major Robert Locke Price, B.S.C., of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry, died on the 30th ult. at Indore, India, of cholera, aged forty-five. He was appointed a lieutenant in the Bombay Staff Corps in July, 1863, and obtained his captaincy in 1875, and his majority in 1883.

LIEUTENANT A. F. YOUNG.—Lieutenant Arthur Frederick Young, 1st Battalion East Lancashire Regiment, son of Major-General C. M. Young, R.A., died on the 8th inst., at Ferozepore, of enteric fever, at the age of twenty-one.

LORD DUFFERIN has presented to Mr. Rodgers, of Amritsar, as "a personal and private recognition of his interesting researches amongst the coins of India," his Excellency's Bronze Medal, as "a souvenir and as a numismatic specimen."

THE rate of exchange for the pay and remittances of British troops serving in India has been fixed by Her Majesty's Government at 1s 4½d. the rupee for the second half of the current official year, commencing on October 1st.

ONE of the reasons advanced in support of the argument that the Hazaras Field Force is of excessive strength is that the tribesmen to be punished are a mere handful of shepherds living in wretched huts on the Black Mountain. Now it is true enough, observes the Pioneer, that the Parari Saiads, who are supposed to have been chiefly concerned in the murder of Major Battye and Captain Urmston, number only 400 fighting men; but the tribes who have given us so much trouble on the border during the last twenty years—and against whom the punitive expedition is really sent—can muster 9,000 or 10,000 men, without counting the contingents which Buner and Swat might send. The country to the west of the Black Mountain is roughly divided into two parts by the Ranga Paiza spur, which runs from the Machai Peak to the Indus. The ridges and glens to the south of the spur are held by the Isazai clan, and those to the north by the Chagarzi. The Isazais are split up into the Akazais (700 men), Hassanais (2,000), and Mada Khel (3,000). The Chagarzais on this side of the Indus can turn out some 3,340 fighting men, while their kinsmen beyond the river number 2,000. Where the northern point of the Black Mountain range touches the Indus is the village of Thakot, and in this neighbourhood there are about 1,400 men who must be counted as possible enemies. The Thakotis are a section of the Swatis, and further to the north are the Allaiwals (8,700). The Deshiwals (700) occupy the eastern slope of the mountain to the north of the Machai Peak, and still further eastwards are the Nandiharis (1,500) and the Tikariwals (900). All these are Swatis, and with the exception of the Thakotis and Deshiwals they are not likely to join in the fighting, at least at the outset. Putting these aside, however, it will be seen that some 12,000 fighting men may oppose General McQueen, and there is, therefore, full justification for using 8,000 troops in the expedition. If the country were open half that number would be sufficient, adds the same journal; but it is a mass of hills, and the operations have to be carried on under exceptional difficulties. If one, or even two columns, were to be sent over the Black Mountain the tribesmen would play a waiting game, harassing convoys, attacking outposts, and generally indulging in guerilla tactics. But with four columns, each about 2,000 strong, on the move from various points, every glen can be swept clear of its occupants, and the whole country traversed from end to end, from Darband on the south, in fact, to Thakot on the north. It is not certain that any serious resistance will be offered, but in operations of this kind it is of the first importance that our troops should not receive even a temporary check, but should move with the greatest possible quickness, from point to point, giving the enemy no rest. The Ambeyla campaign showed the danger of acting on the defensive. The tribal combination then formed was a really formidable one, and if the present Hazara Field Force were to be cut down to smaller dimensions, we might see the Swatis and Bonerwals beyond the Indus hastening to join the Isazais and Chagarzais. The march of the River Column from Darband northwards will probably prevent the Trans-Indus tribesmen from even attempting to give aid to the Black Mountain clans, and thus General McQueen will be able to localise the fighting. If our troops were merely told off to raid across the border, burn a few huts and then return, the work could of course be done with 2,000 or 3,000 men; but the Government of India are anxious to settle the frontier permanently, and hence the necessity for employing so large a force.

It is often proclaimed that society in India is more lax than is permissible in the West. People say and do things which in this country, even in these days of happy-go-lucky morality, would be quite inadmissible. But is the charge well founded? There is more than doubt on this point. It must be recollected that society in India is both small and concentrated. Europeans, at any rate as regards the sex female, are mostly huddled together in a few large centres; moreover, individuals are all in the prime of life, for no one goes to the East in the teens, or remains when hair begins to grey and eyes to dim. Admitting that in such circumstances life runs freely, gaily, and with all the energy of youth, yet does not all the world in those climes live in glass-houses; and can it be imagined that much goes wrong that is not known in a few hours from one end of the bazaar to the other. With the tongue of scandal ever busy, with natives always ready to spy an intrigue and proclaim a failing, how could that secrecy be maintained which alone could enable impropriety to reign unchecked and allow freedom to pass unchallenged? That little trifles are magnified, that "busy tongued gup," makes great things out of small, that irrepressible gossip creates pictures and spreads abroad unauthorised tales, is, perhaps, the reason why the East seems worse than the West; but human nature is the same all the world over, and there is not the difference which many think between the matron of Calcutta and the head of the household in London—between the gay, fashionable, husband-hunter of the cantonment and her sister adventurer in the fashionable circles of a military garrison in England.

But, it may be argued, if all this be true, what about the plot and plan of "A Moral Bigamist?" There, at least, there is plenty and to spare of fiery passion, of semi-illicit loves. Men are ensnared by women, women entrapped by men. The very atmosphere of the work is contaminated by unrighteous improprieties, if not in deed, at least in thought. Admitted. But mark the surroundings which the author is compelled to introduce to make such things possible. A hard, clear-brained Scotchman marries a most beautiful and exquisite maiden of a few summers, shrouded with all the glories of loveliness, with all the seductions of flattery. The lord of creation to whom Fate has assigned her sees not that such a dangerous gift from the fitful Fates brings a corresponding responsibility upon the recipient of the bounty of the skies. To him his work, not his wife, is the aim and object of his life. He is kind, gentle, loving, but indiscreet to the highest degree. What wonder if, this being so, things go wrong, and ere long the gentle, dim flame of love, never at the first too brilliant in the breast of his wife, dims and fades to an almost imperceptible flicker. Once again the moral bigamist is blessed or cursed, according to the light in which her actions are viewed, with a drunken, devil-me-care sort of husband, indifferent to the sighings of his spouse after forbidden lovers and indefensible loves; that with such surroundings a careless, giddy wife should have opportunities of flirtations unbounded and toyings without limit is not to be denied. But surely all society in India is not composed of ill-matched couples, of careless husbands, of brazen-faced wives! And if, to make a tale piquante, such characters are introduced, it goes far to prove that without them the sunny East deports itself much as the sunless West. Some are bad, some good, but the latter, it may be hoped, predominate, at least so far as outward behaviour and external deportment are concerned.

These remarks have extended to such an undue length that we have only space to add that the work is full of life; that though oftentimes the rock of impropriety looms ominously near, nought happens to shock or raise a blush. As a picture of Anglo-Indian manners, and a satire upon the foolish innovations of rulers in high places, it may well be read with profit by those who should know what are the facts of the case as regards the grand Radical notions which it is tried to graft upon the stem of Conservative India.

SCOTTISH MOORS AND INDIAN JUNGLES.†

"Many years ago, in India, a horse I was riding reared, fell back with me undermost, and left me with a fractured spine. I eventually recovered my health to a great extent, but remained quite paralysed in the lower limbs; and from that day to this have been quite unable to walk, or even to stand." Such was Captain Newall's misfortune. Yet, withal, he still continues to carry on the amusements of early life; and a shattered wreck, so far as physical frame is concerned, he still manages to indulge in all the sports with as keen a zest and with pretty nearly as much success as when he was thirty years younger, scouring the plains of India in search of excitement and health. Of course "pig-sticking"—par excellence the sport of all sports for the many who do not get a chance of "stripes," lions, elephants, and the such-like—would be out of the question; but Captain Newall still continues to do much that seems impossible. Fancy a paralysed man being carried in a sort of chair constructed for the purpose while he stalks deer!—the most difficult, delicate, and troublesome enterprise which can well be imagined. The very air, indeed, betrays the presence of one solitary man; and what must be the case where there are at least four persons in close company? The moving of a twig is at times fatal to success. How, then, it may be asked, do a hopeless invalid and his bearers accomplish a task which taxes to the utmost the energies and skill of men in the zenith of vigour and health? One answer can only be given—read Captain Newall's most captivating book, and find out the truly marvellous secret.

But not only does the author indulge in the pastime of deer-stalking; other lesser pursuits come equally handy to this enigmatical wonder. Grouse are bagged brace after brace; hares have no chance; snipe are "potted" freely and rapidly; woodcock fall beneath the fatal barrel, and even that most arduous of tasks, fly-fishing, does not seem to present insuperable difficulties to a man who appears a born Nimrod amongst men. Again, we repeat, how it all happens is well-nigh incredible. That Captain Newall is a keen and skilful sportsman is made evident from the second portion of his work, which, by a strange whim of the author, is placed last instead of first; for it relates to his Indian experiences when he had not been disabled, and when his prowess and strength of arm were sufficient to stick a pig right through from mouth to tail! The whole volume is most readable; the author has a simplicity and freedom from arrogant self-assertion, which are so very rare amongst men accustomed to the homage due to success in sport, and public recognition of deeds of prowess in the saddle. An air of modesty pervades its pages from end to end, and seldom does the public have a more favourable opportunity of spending an hour or two in company with a sportsman of keen enterprise, of unbounded energy, and of unconquerable love of all that is grand and glorious in Nature's beautiful world.

THE ANGLO-INDIAN CODES.*

Mr. Whitley Stokes has recently published the second volume of the Anglo-Indian Codes. The various laws which this volume contains are, as before, preceded by an introduction, in which a masterly analysis is given not only of the Act itself, but of the circumstances which led up to it. It is scarcely possible, and indeed it would, perhaps, be far from advisable to attempt to review in detail what Mr. Stokes has written; it must suffice to say that his statements and explanations are clear, concise, and, above all things, accurate. And his "Code" should find a place on the shelf of everyone who has occasion to refer to the laws which it contains.

The Century Illustrated Magazine for November is specially noticeable for the admirable article on the Guilds of the City of London, accompanied by some excellent illustrations. There is also a further instalment of the series of descriptive essays designed to throw light upon the convict system in Holy Russia; and all that can be said, if, after the terrible exposé which The Century has given on this point, any persons henceforth believe in the Northern Colossus, "neither would they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

BOOKS FOR REVIEW.—"Star Atlas," by Dr. Klein; "Manual of Parochial Work," by Rev. J. Ellerton; "The Stepmother's Will," by A. Eubule Evans; "Roger Fildyke's Secret," by Mary E. W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the Hygio-Electric Belt, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigny's Medicated Pumilio-Pincol Felt. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bona fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

VOLUNTEERS IN INDIA.

MANY years ago there was published, from the pen, it was believed, of a gallant cavalry soldier, who signed himself "Henry Hardbargain," a little glossary of military terms, in which the word VOLUNTEER was interpreted as "Man of weak intellect." The book was supposed to convey useful hints to subalterns as to how they could most easily obtain leave of absence, and how best shirk regimental duty. The author may or may not have intended that his information and advice should be taken seriously, but those were days before the system of competitive examination was dreamt of—days before the military crammer was ready to fill the aspirant for glory with all military knowledge, and his own pocket with abundance of money. The "Volunteer," as known and respected in these days, had no place in the military organisation then. He figured a little in Punch, as developing his few military instincts in his suburban back garden at Brook-green; but the Volunteer—our "cheap defence" of our national homes and hearths—whom the country now delights to honour, and whom the coming Lord Mayor would have marching in civic grandeur of mien and thought through the City on the 9th November, had not been called into full existence. He came to the front, immediately, and in noble numbers, when that cloud, "no bigger than a man's hand," but still an ominous one, hung over for a moment between France and England, when the Colonels of the Second Empire were clamouring to Louis Napoleon to lead them against perfidious Albion. The Volunteer movement here has become a very stable institution, and we had believed that it had become an equally stable institution in India also. We had been led to believe that, from Sunny Simla to Burma swamps—through the length and breadth of the land in the Presidencies where Englishmen gathered together—there the Volunteer was to be found "ready to do his duty." We are shocked to find, however, that there is one spot in India where he is not prepared to carry out that simple programme. And that spot is not some heated and mosquito-haunted station in the plains, but one of the brightest and most delightful stations in the East—the much-favoured and much-belauded station of Poona. In the health-giving atmosphere of that pleasant retreat, "where every prospect pleases," it is terrible to learn that the Volunteer "alone is vile," but we are forced to this conclusion if the complaint we read in the Bombay Gazette, which comes to us by the present mail, be true. This is what we read of the Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps concerning its action on a day that should be a red-letter one with all English Volunteers wherever paraded:—

The Battalion Parades held on and since May 24, the Queen's Birthday, were with very little exception bad, the attendance being insufficient and unsatisfactory. On Queen's Birthday Parade a company of forty strong sent six to duty; another fifty-eight strong sent the odd eight; a company of fifty-six sent ten. The total on parade amounted to one hundred and ten. There were only four parades since, at which the maximum number present was one hundred and forty, and the minimum one hundred and nine. With regard to company drills, which were fixed for twice a week, the so-called efficient did not attend, although they should have done so. At company inspection drill the attendance was small. The company officers had no drills of their own, the smallest company drill necessitating the presence of the Commandant and Adjutant, which was justly termed an absurdity. At the inspection the General condemned the company officers, and the Commandant addressing the battalion, stated that the men should be got out, even for five at a time, for the sake of practice. But nothing of the kind has been done since.

Colonel Probert, the Commandant of this useful force, and who had come, as he told them, three hundred miles for the honour of commanding, had addressed them in touching words of appeal strong enough to have made even their rifles go off of their own accord, if merely to show that they at least were prepared to fire a feu de joie in honour of Her Majesty. But the gallant Colonel had to confess that "he looked back with feelings of sorrow and disgust to the Queen's birthday that ought to have left a pleasant memory." He finds now that "neither in obedience to his commands, nor in deference to his entreaties, have more than one-third of the Battalion turned out, and he has to consider himself very proud with three weak Companies at a Battalion parade, and with thirty men to represent two companies at drill. The same men were always present, and the same absentees were always absent."

This is a pleasant position for a Commandant of a Battalion to be placed in, and Poona must have a curious taste if proud of its Volunteer defenders. Pleasures may, perhaps, be taking the place of parades; but, if the lamentable state depicted by the Gazette be a correct one, it is to be hoped that the Government of India will give a hint to the Government of Bombay that it does not intend that Volunteering in India shall become a hill-station farce.

THE CUTCH TRADE OF BURMA.—The Rangoon Gazette, discussing the manufacture and trade in cutch in Burma, says that the export of cutch is the next most important to that of rice, and it has been steadily increasing during the past twenty years. The acacia catechu, or cutch tree, is found in large forests throughout the whole country. The core of the tree is a dark red wood, like mahogany; the wood is chipped, boiled, and the cutch thus extracted. It is the "inspissated extract" obtained by boiling the chips. It is an industry that can be carried on by anybody with a pair of hands, a knife, and a cooling pan, and accordingly it is very generally followed by poor persons. In October the cutch boilers begin to make their arrangements; they form themselves into small companies, and select a spot where there are good robust trees. The boiling pans are firmly fixed in holes in the ground, the trees are felled, and the branches lopped, the bark and outer wood removed, and the core reached. The children chip the dark red wood, which is placed in the pans with a little water, care being taken that it does not get overheated or burnt. When of the required consistency the contents of the pans are spread out on mats to evaporate, the woody refuse being thrown away, and the sap alone retained. In a short time the mats can be manipulated into small blocks of a regular size. The colours are red, dark red, or black, the shades depending principally on the quality of the chips and the time taken in boiling. The light red and red cutch is considered the best, and with betel nut and other ingredients is chewed by the Burmese and is exported to India for the same purpose. The dark red and black are prepared largely for the markets of Europe and America. The characteristics of pure, unadulterated cutch are uniformity of appearance, bitter, acrid or pungent taste, smell like opium, and friability. Formerly the quality could, as a rule, be relied on; but of late years, owing to the steady demand, keen competition and enhanced prices, a greater stimulus has been given to the trade, and greater liberties have been taken with the cutch in mixing and adulterating. A spurious cutch is used; fibrous matter, sand or earth are sometimes added to increase the weight, and the Chinese dealers have a habit of putting good, bad, and indifferent into one consignment, which is then sold for a good sample.

surance are furnished on application.THE "VOICE OF INDIA."MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION
TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally doddle and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth;
but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.England—per annum, £1 0 0. In advance,

ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions."The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements.""The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux
of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . .
there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman,
October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KARE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—
Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service,
desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 19th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 17th October; and from Calcutta to the 16th October.

At the meeting of the Viceregal Council held at Simla, Oct. 18, the Hon. Mr. Scoble introduced a Bill to amend the law relating to the fraudulent marks on merchandise. In his speech on the subject Mr. Scoble said that the same reasons which had led to the passing of the Merchandise Marks Act in England apply to this country. The Bill had been formed upon the opinions of the recognised organs of the commercial classes in India. The Chambers of Commerce of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, the Bombay Mill-owners' Association, the Calcutta Trades Association, and the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce had all expressed approval of fresh legislation on the subject of the fraudulent marks on merchandise in India. Similar views were held by the mercantile community in England who were interested in the Indian trade.

LORD DUFFERIN, following the example of some of his predecessors in office, is placing on record a memorandum about his administration.

LADY DUFFERIN and Ladies Helen and Hermione Blackwood have proceeded for a short trip to Baghi Forest. Major Cooper and Lieutenant Henderson are the aides-de-camps in attendance.

THE Viceroy during his forthcoming tour, after leaving Patiala, on Nov. 22 proceeds by rail either to Sahibgunge or Rajmahal on the Ganges, and there takes steamer for Dacca, where he halts for twenty-four hours, and then goes to Calcutta.

THE Viceroy will attend the St. Andrew's Dinner at Calcutta on Nov. 30. Sir Alexander Wilson will occupy the chair.

AN investiture of orders of the C.S.I. and C.I.E. took place at Simla on Oct. 13.

THE Rajah of Sirmur was invested with the insignia of the First Class of the Star of India.

THE HON. MR. J. B. LYALL received the insignia of the second class, and the Hon. Mr. J. Westland and Mr. A. P. Macdonnell the badge of the Third Class at the same time.

THE same evening Nawab Nawazish Ali Khan and Messrs. G. L. Molesworth, F. R. Hogg, and Sirdar Attar Singh were invested with the insignia of the Second Class of the Order of the Indian Empire.

MESSRS. A. J. LAWRENCE AND H. IRWIN were likewise decorated with the badge of the Third Class.

THE Viceroy has courteously declined the offer of some of the leading men of the Tonk State to accompany the Cabul Mission.

LORD CONNEMARA, before returning to Madras, is making a month's tour along the West Coast.

THE Bishop of Madras is very much better, so much so that he hopes to be able to start on a visitation tour shortly.

WHEN the Hon. Mr. Westland is relieved by Mr. Barbour as Financial Member of Council next month he will go on special duty.

COLONEL BADCOCK, the Commissary-General, is laid up at Quetta from a serious injury to his eyesight, received during his recent journey down from Simla to Kalka by Tonga.

COLONEL H. C. E. WARD has returned to his post as Minister of Bhopal.

LIEUT.-COLONEL CONWAY GORDON, Director of State Railways, has renounced his proposed trip to America, the Secretary of State having telegraphed out his approval of the Railway Bill, and advised a coming despatch.

MR. J. W. CHISHOLM, Commissioner of Chattisgarh, Central Provinces, is about to retire on his pension.

WHEN Mr. H. G. Ross, Commissioner of Kumaon, takes leave next month, he will be succeeded by Mr. J. R. Reid, at present Chief Secretary to the Government of these Provinces. Mr. W. C. Bennett takes Mr. Reid's place till Mr. Woodburn's return in January.

DR. DALLAS, Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals in the Punjab, who is just taking three months' leave, has almost recovered from his recent slight paralytic attack.

MR. H. S. BOYS, Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow, intends retiring from the service. His place will be taken by Mr. F. Baker, now Magistrate and Collector at Agra.

MR. S. W. EDGERLEY, of the Sindh Commission, has been appointed to officiate as Under-Secretary in the Home Department, in place of Mr. J. P. Hewett.

MR. F. C. DAUKES is to be Deputy Commissioner of Assam, but continues to officiate as Secretary to the Chief Commissioner.

MR. W. NETHERSOLE, of the Central Provinces Commission, has been killed by a fall from his horse. He had just been on privilege leave for three months, and was returning to his work in Sambalpur at the time of the unfortunate accident.

MR. A. H. GILES, Deputy-Inspector General of Police, Bengal, has been ordered to Ceylon temporarily, the Government of that Colony having applied for his services.

THE Government of India have resolved on a successor to the late Sir Ganpat Rao as President of the Council of Gwalior. The choice has fallen on Bapu Saheb Jadu, the senior Sirdar of the State, and the grandfather of the young Maharaja Scindia. The mother of the Chief is Bapu Saheb's daughter, and is to be the Regent of Gwalior during her son's minority.

THE committee appointed in connection with the Public Works Department, to reduce the office work of Executive Engineers, will meet at Lahore in the beginning of November, and then visit Allahabad, Bombay, and Calcutta, spending about a month at each place. The idea is to cut down the number of returns and other office work, so that Executive Engineers may have more time for their outdoor work. The committee will be delighted to receive the evidence of anyone who has had experience in the department, but evidences of novices will not be entertained.

MR. R. G. MACDONALD, president of the above committee, will also carry on an investigation with a view to reducing work in the Examiners' Offices in every branch of the Public Works Department, but chiefly the railway branch. The committee, appointed some time ago, consisting of Messrs. Logan, Macdonald, Lewis, and Buckley, to fix the standard of examination for admittance to the superior and subordinate grades, Public Works Accounts Branch, and also for occasional appointment in the Financial Department, have sent in their report. The examination will be competitive among nominees, being equal to the B.A. of the Calcutta University, but the subjects will have a distinctly modern side.

THE Mysore Exhibition was opened by H.H. the Maharajah on Oct. 18th. In the address presented by the Committee it was stated that over 30,000 exhibits had been received, every taluk being represented. The Dewan replied on behalf of the Maharaja, and stated that similar exhibitions will be held in various parts of the province.

SPEAKING at Mahe, the Governor of Madras, replying to a toast in honour of the Queen, desired that his thanks be conveyed to the Governor of Pondicherry for the enthusiastic reception accorded to him. His Excellency added that during the long service in the Foreign Office he had learnt to regard cordial relations between France and England as the best guarantee for peace. He would lose no opportunity during his tenure of Governorship to promote friendship between the Madras Government and the French establishments in India.

SEVERAL men who had been told off to keep a portion of the Southern Mahratta Railway line clear for a train in which the Duke of Connaught was travelling fell asleep, and were injured by the train.

MR. CANDY, the Sessions Judge of Poona, has confirmed the conviction and sentence of the magistrate in the Hanmantrao case.

TWENTY-FIVE persons are reported to have been killed by an explosion of gunpowder during a village festival near Chidambaram, in Madras.

THE Travancore Government proposes establishing a Council of State. Its business will at present be confined to meeting once a year, and discussing the budget submitted to the Dewan.

It is intended to establish a new Mint at Hyderabad.

TWO Parsees have been sent to prison, without the option of a fine, for creating a disturbance at a Salvation Army meeting.

LANCE-SERGEANT CLABBY, Poona Volunteers, has won the Bombay Presidency Rifle Meeting Gold Medal.

It is expected that the report of the Currency Commission will be issued in the second week of November.

THE price of grain in Kattywar is rapidly going up.

THE Gazette of India will cease to be published at Simla from the 10th of November.

A RUSSIAN BULL ABOUT THE AMEER.—The Russian papers give prominence to the following statement of the Mémoires Diplomatiques:—"Abdurrahman Khan, whose troops have just inflicted a sanguinary defeat on Ishak Khan, has demanded a new subsidy from the Government of India, pretending that all his resources are exhausted. The Ameer allows it to be seen that, if his demand is not immediately taken into consideration, the English must definitively abandon the project of their diplomatic and military mission to Cabul. The Afghan Sovereign demands the sum of £500,000, without which he declares it to be impossible to maintain order in his capital and in the Northern provinces. As the Government of India has a powerful interest in assuring the succession to the Afghan throne, it is believed that there will be a pecuniary transaction between the Ameer and the Viceroy of India, and that the Anglo-Indian representatives, accompanied by their suite, will start immediately on their journey to Cabul."

THE GRAVE OF GENGHIS KHAN.—In a recent issue of the Missions Catholiques of Lyons, the well-known traveller and savant, Abbé Armand David, says that the mortal remains of the great conqueror Genghis Khan, or Genghis Bogoto, as he is called in Mongolian, are preserved at a place called Kia-yen, in the land of Ordos, a desolate region in a bend of the Yellow River in Mongolia. They are contained in a large silver coffin, which the Mongols will not show to strangers without some good reason. The coffin is wrapped round with rich stuffs, and numerous pilgrims come to kiss these and to pay the same respect as they would to a living Emperor. The coffin is not in a lamasery, or lama monastery, but in a special building which is guarded by a Mongol prince. It is said that this massive silver coffin was at first carried about all over Mongolia in order to save it from eager enemies of Genghis, and at length was brought here and deposited in Ordos, because the latter was a country which on account of its remote situation and its poverty, was safe from all hostile invasion.

NOTES.

THE most important news received from India to-day is regarding the state of the crops in certain districts, threatening the advent of that terrible but too frequent visitor of the poor in the East—famine. According to the Times telegram this morning the crops are withering in Guzerat, Kattyawar, and Nassik, whilst scarcity bordering on famine prevails in Orissa. The Punjab, Central Provinces, Rajpootana, and Hyderabad are all said to be suffering from drought. The outlook is a gloomy one, and, although we may hope that the preparations which have been made by the local authorities will serve to avert the disasters of former years, there must be considerable suffering and distress in all the districts named. It would, indeed, be a sad commencement to a Viceregal career for Lord Lansdowne to have to grapple with India's most terrible foe almost before he reaches that country, for which, it is understood, he leaves England on the 16th instant, via Brindisi.

It may be, and we hope it is so, that the Times correspondent at Calcutta has taken a somewhat too gloomy view of the situation. The financial difficulties are at present great enough in all conscience, but a year of famine without a sufficient reserve fund to fall back upon will be disastrous indeed. The correspondent's statement that in view of these difficulties the Government should reconsider the disastrous result of the cotton import duties is of course the echo of the old complaint from the Chambers of Commerce of Calcutta and Bombay, but it is a complaint which has been made so often and has been so little heeded by the "powers that be" in England that it is hardly likely to be attended to even in the face of graver financial difficulties, whether occasioned by war or famine.

It is satisfactory to find that the Black Mountain Expedition, which it was feared would develop into "another little Frontier war," long and troublesome, has been brought so quickly to a close. The correspondent who telegraphs the good news is evidently a man, however, of a pessimistic turn of mind, being of opinion that unless the Secretary of State reverses the policy of the Indian Government, and directs the permanent occupation of Kandahar, the expedition will have been in vain, and the cost of it wasted; but this opinion may be contested by those who have better experience of the frontier tribes than the Times correspondent has.

THE Sikkim Field Force is not to be broken up for some little time to come, as it is desirable that the Chinese ampla should see for himself what the military position is on the Thibet frontier. General Graham's small brigade has proved quite equal to dispersing the 12,000 or 15,000 men whom the Lamas with so much trouble collected about the Jelap Pass, and it is well that the open and visible signs of our strength should remain in evidence while the political negotiations are proceeding.

THE Press of India, European and Native, has commenced perning "farewells" to the departing Viceroy. The Englishman concludes a leader on the subject thus:—"The Viceroyalty of Lord Dufferin is within a very few months of its ending. Burma has been annexed to the Crown. The northern frontiers of the Empire have been consolidated and strengthened by an alliance with a firm and friendly ruler in Afghanistan. The period of his lordship's reign has been one of conciliation, progress, and peace; but, in after years, when this chapter of Indian history comes to be dealt with by the historian, the noble scheme inaugurated by Lady Dufferin, and carried out in the face of caste prejudices, religious jealousy, and the general spirit of inertness that creeps over most things Indian, will occupy one of the highest places among the great social movements of modern India. The bringing of health and healing to the women of India by the women of England, the letting in of the light and the blessings of modern science—medical and sanitary—to the homes of the secluded women of this Empire are no inconsiderable achievements to even for a lifetime.”

As a corrective to the above, the Indian Mirror (published in English) administers a different dose to its readers. Lord Dufferin is cursed from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head, in his domestic, his foreign, and his financial policy; for all that he has said and not said; for every measure that has been passed during his rule, and for every pie of Income-tax collected during the same period. He is damned for the Finance Committee, doubly damned for the Public Service Commission, and trebly damned for giving his assent to the Calcutta Municipal Act. Most of all, he is devoted to infamy for subtly setting Hindus against Mahomedans “by a policy perfectly Machiavellian in its scope and tendencies.” “Curiously enough,” comments the Pioneer, “he has not been condemned for the floods in Lower Bengal, or the ‘atrocities’ of Assam emigration; but, as we have only seen the first part of the commination service, we still hope that these things may be added.”

LORD DUFFERIN, according to the Mirror, has “smothered the legitimate aspirations of the people”—a fine phrase for the benefit of the Congress orators. Not a virtue is allowed to the departing Viceroy; but we agree with our Allahabad contemporary that the old Oriental fault of want of proportion mars the indictment, and that the abuse is too comprehensive, as it leaves nothing for other writers to say except “vain repetitions.” “There is nothing in the production,” says the Pioneer, “that is unknown to Lord Dufferin; but it will be read with interest and profit by the coming Viceroy, who will see therein his own fate writ clear.” If Lord Lansdowne does read it we hope it will be with profit. He might then know how to deal with Babudom.

MR. F. C. DAUKES is gazetted Deputy-Commissioner of Assam from 20th inst., but continues to officiate as Secretary to the Chief Commissioner.

THE journey upon which General Prjevalsky met his death was a curious one, and its object has never been quite clearly explained. It was reported from St. Petersburg just before he started that he was most unwilling to go, as he was tired and ill, and he thought, after years of exposure and hardship on the Central Asian highlands, that he was entitled to rest. Still, he was despatched by the Russian Government to Lhasa, and the conception of the expedition was coincident with our own little troubles with the Tibetans in Sikkim. “I do not go so far,” a correspondent writes, “as to say that the two were connected; but the fact is that when it became quite clear that peaceful negotiations to get the Tibetans out of Sikkim were useless, and after the first battle fought with the invaders, the Asiatic Department of the St. Petersburg Foreign Office suddenly became curious about Tibet, and especially about Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, and despatched their veteran traveller to find out all about it, and to reach it if possible. The object of the journey, as generally stated at that time, was not to continue his explorations in the Thian Shan or Kuen Lun Mountains, or in Northern Tibet, or in Chinese Turkestan, but to reach Lhasa, and still more strangely, so great was the urgency, he was despatched with the winter coming on, and in the month of November at Ver-noe was engaged in getting ready his expedition, although most expeditions in these regions—Prjevalsky's former ones among the number—always remained in some sheltered spot during the winter and resumed their work in the spring. One can only speculate now on the route he would have pursued to reach Lhasa in the shortest time; probably he would have gone through Ili, thence across the Thian Shan range, crossing the Tarym a little to the west of Tob Nor, and so across the desert to the Kuen Lun Mountains, which he attempted to cross in the last and perhaps the most difficult of all his journeys, down to the Tengri Nor, to the north-west of Lhasa. It shows the jealous seclusion maintained in Tibet that the greatest Central Asian traveller of the century, the greatest, perhaps since Marco Polo, in spite of his years of wandering all over these regions with powerful escorts and the patronage of the White Czar, should never have seen the sacred city of Lhasa, although he was in and around Tibet in many places and at various times, especially on his last journey, when he all but fought his way across the Kuen Lun range into that country. The full narrative of this last journey has not yet been published, although its general results have been laid before the Geographical Society of St. Petersburg.”

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 4.

Madras has been visited by a severe cyclone. A train numbering nineteen carriages was capsized. The steamship Bhundara, carrying 627 coolies, was disabled, the fires having been put out by the water shipped. Five coolies were killed and fourteen seriously injured. It is hoped that general rain will result from the storm.

In the meantime preparations are being made to meet the threatened famine. In Guzerat, Kankan, Kattyawar, and Nassik the crops are withering, and in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Rajpootana, and Hyderabad they are suffering from drought. Great scarcity, bordering on famine, prevails in Orissa, while the Ganjam district appears to be quite disorganised. Robberies of grain on a most extensive scale have been perpetrated—to the value of Rs. 10,000—and seventy-two arrests have been made. A public meeting has been held at Aska, and resolutions were passed to memorialise the Government for the opening of relief works and for military protection. The collector of Vizagapatam has telegraphed to Vizianagram for troops.

In view of the financial difficulties to be encountered next year it is imperative that the Government should reconsider the disastrous result of the abolition of the cotton import duties.

The Punjab Sanitary report for 1887 draws attention to the excessive mortality among female infants. This result is attributable to the systematic infanticide practised to avoid the heavy marriage expenses.

In October the deaths from cholera in Calcutta numbered 130. The Government of India urges on the Bengal Government, in a recent letter, to adopt sustained and energetic measures to remedy the sanitary difficulties in Calcutta. The Lieutenant-Governor is requested to impress the Municipal Commissioners with the absolute and immediate necessity of rendering the sanitary inspection efficient, and of the rectifying every insanity condition. It is pointed out by the health officer that the Viceroy is convinced that Dr. Simpson's reiterated demands for sanitary inspectors are reasonable, and that his lordship desires that those demands should be complied with.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 4.

The latest news from Cabul is that the Ameer intends to winter in Afghan Turkestan. He will probably visit Maimeneh and Herat, and return by way of Candahar. His recent victory has had a marked effect in pacifying Afghanistan in every direction.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 3.

A strong force, acting under the direction of Sir George White, will be despatched from Bhamo at an early date against the Kachyen tribes above Moyoung. It is intended to give them a sharp lesson, such as will finally convince the Kachyens of our superiority. The force to be sent against the Kachyens is likely to have some severe fighting with these warlike tribes. They have been emboldened by the small measure of the success which has attended our previous attacks on them, and it has become absolutely necessary to stop their raids into our territory.

The Chief Commissioner has also proposed to the Government of India to send a force into the Chin country to punish the tribes that raided last summer into the Chindwin Valley in great force, seized the loyal Tsawbwa of Kale, and murdered and carried off a large number of British subjects, whom they still retain in captivity. Captain Raikes, officiating Commissioner of the Central division, after this great raid of the Chins, sent an ultimatum to their chiefs announcing that if the prisoners carried off were not surrendered, together with an Alompra pretender who had accompanied the raiders, troops would be sent into their country to inflict severe punishment. The Government of India has, however, decided that as the Chin country is unknown, and an expedition would probably be costly, the authorities are not to despatch troops. The frontier is to be strongly held by a force including two regiments of Sepoys and a regiment of Goorkhas, with some artillery and mounted infantry. It is believed here that an expedition into the Chin country will be found absolutely necessary. Their raids are daily becoming more frequent. A raid into the Kubo Valley is reported to-day, and within the last few days the Chins have killed some 30 persons and made about 100 captives.

With the cessation of the rains there has been a renewal of the dacoit disturbances in Upper Burma. The Kyouksai district is much troubled by large bodies of dacoits led by a Pretender Prince. Mandalay appears to be in a somewhat excited state. The Mandalay Herald reports that the streets are patrolled nightly by cavalry and mounted infantry.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

KAZEGBA CAMP, NOV. 3.

Yesterday a detachment under General Channer carried the Gorapher peak of the Chaila Mountain at a height of 9,500ft.—a position never before successfully assaulted by a hostile force. The ascent was from knoll to knoll, which, to our surprise, were undefended, then through a thick forest, and finally up steep, stony crags, which ran out like a buttress from a precipice in the forest where the enemy's skirmishers waited concealed. Our leading troops advanced within forty yards before firing was opened. Our casualties were only one man killed and one wounded, both privates in the Northumberland Fusiliers. On emerging from the forest the summit, whereon the mountaineers were seen in greater force, was rushed by the first companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers and the Khyberees, racing up neck and neck. There were no further casualties. The position was an exceedingly strong one, and if the enemy had defended it with courage they must have caused us heavy loss.

The troops bivouacked here for the night, three miles within the Allaiwal territory. The advance will be continued to-morrow. The march has been delayed, the supplies, owing to the difficulty of the road, not having yet arrived. The troops were without food and water yesterday.

8 40 P.M.

To-day about 1,000 of our men, with three guns, proceeded to Pokul, the Allai chief's village, at a distance of eight miles up an ascent of 4,300 feet, and after destroying the village have returned to the camp. There was much firing during the descent, but no casualties are reported among the advanced troops. In the rear one Goorkha was killed and one was wounded. There was the usual rear guard action on the retirement, during which three Khyberees were wounded.

The withdrawal of some of our troops was effected to-day, and the remainder will leave to-morrow. The enemy's loss to-day was considerable.

The arrival of an Allai jirga has just been reported.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 4.

There is little of importance to report from the Black Mountain Expedition. General Channer occupied Thakot without opposition. Subsequently fire was opened on the column from Dawut, on the opposite bank of the Indus, from behind boulders at 600 yards' range, and from a ridge to the left. This ridge was cleared by the Khyberees, who killed eleven men. Next day Dawut was shelled and destroyed, and subsequently Lowera was burnt. Five Khyberees were wounded during the retirement. The troops returned to Maidan, and thence marched to compel the Allaiwals to submit. The Hassanais have paid their fine, and brought in Hashim Ali as a prisoner. The General threatened that unless the prisoner was delivered up he would burn Kotkai and all their other villages. Kotkai was burnt accordingly, and next day the prisoner was brought in. His ankles showed signs of the irons. He was greatly delighted at his escape. This will entirely destroy Hashim's prestige. Major Battye's sword was delivered up by the chief of Nand.

The Commander-in-Chief has visited Kanhar. The force will be withdrawn so soon as the Allaiwals shall have submitted. All the troops will be withdrawn by about the 15th inst., unless the Secretary of State should reverse the policy of the Indian Government and direct the permanent occupation of Kanhar. It is doubtful whether the expedition will have any lasting effect if the troops are now recalled, and if it have no lasting effect our heavy expenditure will have been practically wasted.

SIKKIM.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 4.

A telegram from Gnatong reports a heavy fall of snow. The force is rationed to November 7. The Ampa is proceeding very leisurely, and the lamas, it is believed, discourage all negotiations for peace. It is rumoured that the Ampa will refuse to cross the Sikkim frontier, and it is proposed that he should be persuaded to go to Darjeeling, or at all events to Gnatong, in order that he may be in direct telegraphic communication with Pekin. If the Chinese and Indian Governments settle the final peace conditions by telegraphic reference to Pekin, the lamas will be frightened into submission.

General Graham's despatches are published. The following officers are mentioned:—Colonels Bromhead and M'Cleverty, Majors Halkett and Keith, Captains Robinson, Travers, and Mansfield, Lieut. Holland, and Surgeon Carew. The thanks of the Government have been accorded to General Graham and the expeditionary force.

The Government has published a memorandum as an authoritative statement of the facts relating to Sikkim affairs. It contains very little that is new or important. The home authorities are held entirely responsible for deputing Mr. Macaulay to visit Pekin. A very unnecessary explanation is given, possibly with a view of satisfying the hostile criticism of the Native Press, of the necessity for expelling the Tibetans from Sikkim. Forbearance, it seems, was carried to such an extraordinary extent that after several letters had been returned to the Government of India unopened a further note was despatched in February, 1888, written direct to the Dalai Lama, in which he was told that unless his troops retired within the frontier before March 15th the British Government would be constrained to make good by force its treaty rights in Sikkim. But even in that case the Dalai Lama was actually assured that if force had to be employed the British Government had no intention, unless further provoked, of sending troops into Tibet, or of pressing on the Thibetan Government any trade convention that was not agreeable. It is scarcely to be wondered at, in face of the direct encouragement afforded by the nerveless tone of this correspondence, that the Thibetan authorities should have been emboldened to try conclusions with so very hesitating, cautious, and considerate a foe, especially as they were warned beforehand that the result of compelling the British Government to resort to force would merely amount to the gentle removal of the Thibetan troops from Sikkim, and that Tibet and the Thibetans would be religiously safeguarded from counter attack and reprisals. It requires very little experience of the East and Eastern peoples to understand how diplomatic endeavours conducted on such lines necessarily failed to promote peace.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE ASSAM FRONTIER FORCE.

(Englishman.)

Soon after it first started the Assam Frontier force became very popular, but of late this popularity has much decreased. The strength of the Force was larger last year than before, and there were more recruits, but of an inferior stamp to those previously enlisted, which will probably account for the increase in desertions. The falling-off in the recruits was partly due to the restriction of enlistment among the most efficient castes of Gurkhas to the regular army, while many of the best men of the other castes were attracted by the much higher rates of pay obtainable in Burma. The leave rules are bad, and consequently unpopular, but some improvement may be expected, as the Government of India has consented to receive proposals based on the rules in force in the Native army, which the Chief Commissioner will lose no time in submitting. But the chief reason of the unpopularity of the Force is, no doubt, the low rate of pay. Last year the pay of the lowest grade of sepcoys in the Naga Hills force was raised to Rs. 9 per month, but as from this a sum of Rs. 6 is deducted for rations, and there are also other deductions on account of uniform, pension fund, and other things, the balance remaining is but small for the purchase of clothing suitable to the climate of the hills and of the minor necessities of life. The men naturally contrast their position with that of the Native troops in the same district, and they find that the latter receive better rations at a cost of Rs. 3-8 per month instead of Rs. 6, and that the batta allowed is Rs. 2-8 a month, while it is only Rs. 1-8 in the Frontier Force. The consequence is that the best class of recruits always prefer to enter the Army, and the Police have to be content with men of an inferior stamp. But at present there does not seem to be much chance of any increase in pay. It must be remembered that the men also have a good deal of hard work and exposure, and in the Naga Hills District they were also required to perform the duties of the Civil Police; but this has been discontinued, as it was found not to work well. As regards the drill and discipline of the Force, the Inspector-General expressed himself as highly satisfied, while there was a large average increase in the figure of merit in the annual musketry course, which has now risen from 82.8 to 101. Good progress has also been made in signalling. The behaviour of the men had also improved, and the percentage of punishment was less throughout the Force, while the Chief Commissioner was highly satisfied with their smart appearance, both in doing escort duty with him when on tour and at their head-quarters, three of which he personally visited. The chief expeditions undertaken last year were by the men of the Naga Hills battalion in accompanying Mr. McCabe in his march through the Ao Naga Valley, and by the Luckimpur detachment, when accompanying Mr. Needham towards the Hulong Valley, where they cheerfully marched in the highest equipment through the most difficult country, at times cutting their way through dense jungle, hutting themselves, going for long periods on short rations, and manfully enduring hardships of every description. The men of the Surma Valley Force were only employed on active service in the pursuit of Jogendra Singh, the Manipur rebel, for which they received a reward, while the men of the Garo Hill Force saw no active service, but were kept in good training by their Commandant by long route marches.

MAHOMEDAN AND HINDU.

(Pioneer.)

It really seems to be the case more in this country than in most that it is the unexpected that happens, and particularly so in the religious quarrels which occur from time to time between the two great races of India. Last year everyone was on the look-out for disturbances, but everything passed over in perfect tranquillity. This year there was not the slightest anticipation, so far, at least, as is known to the public, of any trouble at all. The Mohurram and Ramlila were no longer to take place at the same time, and, if one may use the expression, there was not the slightest occasion for any quarrelling. An opportunity, however, is never wanting to those on the look-out for one; and, as our readers are aware, the Mohurram has not passed off without the clearest proof of the strained relations subsisting between the Mahomedans and Hindus. In some cases resort to force has been found necessary; in others the Mahomedans have sullenly refused to take out their tizias, the significance of which lies in this, that it is held to be a solemn protestation before God and the world that they are not at liberty to carry out the ceremonies of their faith, and that consequently it is their bounden duty to take the first opportunity which promises success of making war upon the Government under which they live. It is not for a moment pretended that every Mahomedan who refuses to take out his tazia will, as a matter of fact, make war upon anyone, but nevertheless the meaning of the refusal is perfectly recognised. It cannot be denied that the state of things is not a pleasant or satisfactory one. Everyone sees that the relations between Mahomedans and Hindus are more strained than they were ten years ago; and the practical question is, who is responsible for the state of things? On the one side it is alleged that it is due to what is called the Hindu revival, and particularly to the crusade against cow-killing. On the other that it is caused by the increasing bigotry of the Mahomedans, by their soreness at being gradually ousted from public employment in consequence of their inability or unwillingness to comply with the educational requirements now laid down, and to their refusal, except under compulsion, to concede to their Hindu fellow-subjects the liberty which they themselves have long enjoyed in matters of religious ceremony. By many, of course, the responsibility for everything that goes wrong is laid upon the Government; and this matter is no exception to the general rule.

The fact is that the Government is in a position of singular difficulty, and one in which ultimate success can only be achieved by a high measure of statesmanship and prudence. It has hitherto been the aim of the British Government to treat the two faiths with perfect impartiality, but the difficulty here lies in this, that this is precisely what the Mahomedans object to. They do not want to be treated with impartiality. They want to be treated as a dominant and superior people, possessed of special privileges and entitled to special consideration. They see plainly that if they are only to be regarded as a tenth fraction or so of the Indian population they must eventually go to the wall whenever their wishes and aspirations clash with those of the Hindus. They have for many years enjoyed a consideration and position out of all proportion to their numbers, and this they are not disposed to abandon. They have, too, an uneasy feeling—often existing doubtless without any real foundation—that the Government is ranging itself on the side of the majority. All these things are worth careful consideration. In spite of the British caucus things in this world cannot always be decided by mere counting of heads; indeed, no Indian Government is likely to fall into such a delusion. It is easy enough, however, it may be said, to point out doubts and dangers; the real question is, what course is to be adopted? If the Government treats the question as one of numbers, and compels the minority to give way to the majority, it permanently alienates the Mahomedans. If, on the other hand, it especially favours them, it exposes itself to the reproach of having abandoned the position of impartiality in which it has always been its wish to stand. There may not be much that is novel in the advice, but one cannot help thinking of Lord Melbourne's favourite maxim in difficult cases: "Let things alone." If Mahomedans and Hindus are determined to fly at each other's throats, it is not possible permanently to prevent them from doing so. Indeed, the sooner they have it out the better. It is not the business of Government to regulate the details of ceremonies and routes of processions; and it is no disparagement to the able and zealous officers concerned to say that when Government abandons its own proper functions the eventual result is always disastrous. If it were distinctly laid down once for all that Mahomedans and Hindus must settle their religious ceremonies among themselves, and that if they failed to do so the ordinary law would be put in operation against those shown to have broken it, and that repeated public breaches of the peace would be followed by prohibition of all public processions and ceremonies in the streets in the guilty place, there is little doubt that we should be more likely to establish a reasonable modus vivendi than we are at present. If a procession cannot take place without being guarded by troops and bodies of armed police, it is surely common sense to say that it should not take place at all.

The English Government has its own difficulties, and heavy ones too: but it has not the difficulties of an alien Government like that of India; yet the English Government would never dream of accepting the responsibility which has been accepted with so light a heart here. Troops were not detailed to accompany the Salvation Army processions, and as in many places the public would not stand them they had to be stopped. The principle holds just as good in India as in England. A better beginning in instruction in local self-government there could not be than to leave the people to settle their religious disputes among themselves.

BORDER ECCLESIOLOGY.

A SHORT DISCOURSE ON THE PATHAN CHURCH.

(BY STARAIMASHI.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The superstition of the Pathan is said to have no limits, but perhaps in this respect he does not, after all, differ very materially from the Christian of the Middle Ages, who notoriously "lived in an atmosphere charged with the supernatural." On the Border, miracles, charms, omens, are believed as a matter of course, just as the miracles of the Church, magic and witchcraft, spirit-rapping and table-turning, were—in some cases it might even be said still are—accepted by the average worshipper in the West. There is no necessity, therefore, to be too severe on the former in respect to his belief; the wonders accomplished by Pir Baba in Buneyr, or Kuka Sahib in Khattak, are not more incredible than the stories about the fish thronging to hear St. Anthony preach, the restoration of amputated limbs by the Virgin of the Palace at Saragossa, or the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius at Naples. In spite of much outcry about the spirit of the age the progress of Rationalism is slow; prayers, alms, fasts, pilgrimages, reverence for saints, and respect for their modern representatives, are among the binding and fundamental duties of the Pathan—as of several other people much nearer home. All classes and both sexes resort to the "sacred shrine," interesting devotees confess their sins, talk of their "pure prophet," and "blessed religion," and yield as implicit obedience to their holy men, as, for instance, an Irish peasant does to his parish priest.

Wherever the demand for miracles is so considerable, the supply is pretty certain to equal it. The Border Muhammadan has few or no relics, and no images, pictures, or crucifixes—in fact, hardly one of his sacred shrines boasts any building more imposing than a big heap of stones, and the collection of rags that resemble dilapidated scarecrows is the only outward and visible sign of the offerings of the faithful. But a visit to some of the zidrats of the Border, equivalents to the Saint Cuthberts, Becketts, Nicholases, or Dunstons, will ensure a cure from fever, ophthalmia, rheumatism, and most of the ills to which mortal flesh is heir. Others will protect the believer from the evil eye; render his cattle prolific, or, on too frequent occasions, vouchsafe the desires of intriguing lovers. The earth from the grave of Akhund Darwaza at Peshawar, or of Akhund Musa near Jelalabad, is a specific for burns or snakebites; and lunatics can be restored to mental health by going to the last resting-place of Mian Ali at Ali-Boghan. Women, who are not blessed with children, can obtain their wishes at quite a number of shrines; and the pious pilgrim, who cannot afford a journey to Mecca, can do himself almost as much good by paying a round of visits to holy places in his own locality, and feeling the local institutions.

He has his own primitive fathers, compared to whom Clement, Ignatius, or Polycarp are quite modern creations. The Pathan, like the Irishmen again, dates back to the early patriarchs, and, apparently, the older they are the longer their graves have become. Near Balabagh in Nangraha, the grave of the patriarch Lot, Hazrat Lüt, is over 380 yards long. The Ziarat of Mehtar Lam, who corresponds to Lamech, the father of Noah, is in Laghman; and the ark of Noah himself is said, after the deluge, to have rested on the Kund Mountain, the adjoining valley being called Dara-i-Nuh, the Vale of Noah, to this day.

The prophets Ayub (Seth), Sis (Job), and others are nearly as famous, and of proportionate dimensions. Fifty feet is a moderate length for a prophet of this importance. Minor dignitaries who have fallen as martyrs (Shahid) or warriors (Ghazi) fighting against the infidel Hindus, or Kafir British, are honoured in a similar way. Nao-Gaja, "nine-yarders," is the term by which they are known in the Punjab. As their sanctity increases so does their reputed stature; one celebrity, buried in Peshawar Cantonment, kept on growing till his tomb bid fair to entirely obstruct the thoroughfare, and the district authorities had to put a wall round him. "Shrines of the mighty" they literally are, but not even the most austere Puritan could complain that anything had been wasted upon art or decoration. A long, low heap of stone or brick masonry, or even mud, suffices to cover the most famous. The reputation of the Border Saint does not depend upon either palaces or shrines made with hands, any more than his officiating priesthood does on canonicals.

THE BATTLE OF KOTKAI, OCT. 4. (Pioneer Correspondent.)

As the battle of Kotkai is certain to live in history, and will, in time to come, furnish no uninteresting page in the records of our dealings with the wild mountain tribes, a few further details may be of interest to your readers.

The tribes had long boasted that they were not only ready and anxious to meet us, but would oppose us in fair and open fight; but few of those best qualified to judge credited the report, and fewer still imagined that they would have maintained their position long in the face of the heavy fire brought to bear on them, and presented such a determined and even desperate resistance to our advance. General Galbraith, foreseeing the probabilities of resistance, for once dispensed with the order directing that each regiment should march as an independent unit with its own baggage attached. All the baggage animals, with a sufficient guard, were sent to the rear, thereby enabling him to have the whole of his fighting force immediately under his hand and unfettered to strike at any point required. The advantages of this formation became fully apparent later on in the day. We came in sight of the enemy's position about twelve noon, and, after a brief consultation between the General and Colonel Crookshank, it was determined at once to attack. From the first moment of coming into action Major Morgan's battery did excellent service in keeping down the harassing fire from the large sungur overhead on our right front, while the flanking movement of the 4th Punjab Infantry, under Colonel Hawes, which bolted some hundred or so of the enemy's sharpshooters from the same quarter on the mountain side, was admirably executed, the hillmen clinging obstinately, however, to their almost inaccessible shelter, some dozen or so, occupying a small cave overhead, being particularly difficult to eject.

The rush of the Hindustanis from their ambush was executed with all the reckless dash and fanatical indifference to life for which the Ghazis are noted; and so unexpected and sudden was their appearance that nothing but the excellent conduct and steadiness of our men could have averted disaster, directed as the attack was on our left and weaker flank, which at the time was rather thrown back and impeded by a deep nullah and thick scrubby bushes. But, shooting with the utmost coolness and precision, the troops met the enemy's charge with a withering fire, which allowed but few of the foe to get to close quarters.

I have omitted to mention an incident which, though the person principally concerned evidently regarded it as an excellent joke, might have been attended with serious results. After the fanatic rush, the troops having been reformed and standing at ease General Galbraith, having dismounted from his pony some 100 yards in front, was refreshing himself with a pull from his waterbottle, when suddenly two Ghazis who had been shamming dead sprang from a nullah fifty yards off, and, sword in hand, rushed on the General, who at the time was standing alone. One was promptly shot down by the Royal Irish, but the survivor came on headlong, and as he advanced the General, resting his revolver on his left arm, fired two deliberate shots at him without effect. When within twenty paces or so he was shot down, by whom is not certain, and though doubtless the General single-handed would have given a very good account of him, I think we were all relieved to see our friend opportunely laid by the heels.

Palosi, or, to be more accurate, Maidan, the stronghold of the Hindustanis, which lies a mile or so further north, appears from all accounts to be the city of refuge for every cut-throat and murdering scoundrel in India; and that they are well armed there can be no doubt, the crack of the Martini and whiz of the projectile being so different from the dull report of the firelock as to be easily distinguishable by the most inexperienced. They are to a certain extent drilled and disciplined, and the neighbouring tribes, though disliking them, are afraid of them. But this is a digression. The rush of Hindustanis having been repulsed the kernel of the nut still remained untouched, and the loopholed walls of the rocky village fortress to be stormed. For this service Colonel Crookshank detailed two companies of the 29th, and with the Royal Irish in reserve, advanced to the assault. Here the Gatling was brought into action with admirable effect; the awe-striking rattle of the gun, as its echoes multiplied ten-fold, reverberated through the mountain gorges, and the splutter of the bullets round their heads at length told with demoralising effect on the stubborn defenders, who, breaking cover, abandoned their shelter and took to headlong flight, leaving Kotkai in our hands. Individual marksmen, however, concealed around still kept up a dropping fire, and not till evening was drawing in was the last shot fired and this long day brought to a close. Considering that our troops were under fire from twelve noon until half-past five the number of casualties on our side was extraordinarily small; and this fortunate result must be regarded as owing solely to the fact that the enemy were firing from a considerable height, their bullets for the most part flying high over our heads. But the day was a long and trying one for the troops, and it may be doubted whether men ever more honestly earned their dinner and night's rest than did the force which that night bivouacked on the field of Kotkai.

BENGAL. (Oct. 16.)

THE LADY DUFFERIN ZENANA HOSPITAL FUND.—It is stated that subscriptions are being raised for a suitable building in connection with this institution, to be erected by the side of the Medical College Hospital, Calcutta. The amount estimated for this undertaking is nearly a lakh of rupees, of which Rs. 42,000 have already been subscribed. The Executive Committee have requested the Committee of the Calcutta Jubilee Fund to make over the large sum now lying in their hands to this public institution.

A CALCUTTA paper says:—"Some four years back the Government of India were compelled to prohibit the further emigration of Indian coolies to the French colony of Réunion. The French authorities persistently refused to allow measures to be taken for the protection of the emigrants such as the Government wished to see put in practice, and such as are in force in all British colonies to which coolie emigrants proceed. The question of coolie emigration to the French transmarine colonies has ever since been much debated between the authorities of these dependencies and the Government of India. The latter has all along taken its stand on the ground that measures which are enforced in British colonies for the welfare of the coolie should likewise be practised in the French possessions. To this reasonable proposal the French have consistently objected, until at last the Government of India have been compelled to issue the order that the emigration of coolies from British India to all French colonies is to be prohibited. There are now some 1,000 coolies under engagement for Guadalupe, and these will be allowed to carry out their engagement at their own risk; but thereafter the movement is to be entirely stopped until such time as the French colonial authorities are willing to accede to the very reasonable requests of the Government of India."

MADRAS. (Oct. 17.)

THE Deputy-Governor of Cochin-China, M. Picquet, has been appointed Governor of French India, and is expected to arrive early next month at Pondichery. He has had twenty-five years' administrative experience in China, and was, it is believed, previous to joining the Colonial Service, an officer in the French Navy.

THE revised Estimates of the Land Revenue of Mysore give a total of Rs. 80,75,000, which is nearly four lakhs more than the aggregate estimates of last year, and in excess of any of the previous years. The Forests Estimates show an increase of Rs. 1,40,000. The Excise Revenue will also, it is believed, show an increase. Altogether the State should receive six lakhs more than last year. The outlook for the current year was for some time gloomy, owing to the failure of seasonable rain; but rain fell last month in most districts of the State. The Sirkar intends, it is believed, to expend the greater part of the surplus on irrigation works.

BOMBAY. (Oct. 19.)

THE Manora breakwater light has been placed in position. COLONEL C. T. HEIG, R.E., Deputy Surveyor-General, has been allowed furlough to Europe for one year.

DR. MYLNE, the Bishop of Bombay, has left for Poona en route for Belgaum.

THE Rev. R. H. E. Slacke is appointed Domestic Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Bombay during his Lordship's tour of visitation.

LIEUTENANT L. M. FOSTER, Staff Corps, Wing Officer and Adjutant, 28th Bombay Pioneers, has been granted leave for one year.

THE services of Mr. E. Lawrence, C.S., are placed at the disposal of the Government of India in the Department of Finance and Commerce.

MR. S. W. EDGERLEY, of the Sind Commission, has been appointed to officiate as Under-Secretary in the Home Department, in place of Mr. J. P. Hewett.

THE Mecca pilgrimage has terminated without any outbreak of cholera or other epidemic disease, and the general health of the pilgrims was satisfactory.

A PUBLIC memorial, signed by one thousand citizens, representing all sections of the community, praying for cancellation of the order of transfer of Mr. Modi, Deputy Collector, has been forwarded to his Excellency the Governor in Council.

DURING the vacation Mr. Justice Scott and Mr. Justice Jardine will preside on the Original and Appellate Sides of the High Court respectively. Mr. Justice Bayley has gone to Madras, Mr. Justice Birdwood to Simla, Mr. Justice Parsons to Mount Abu, and Mr. Justice Nanabhai Haridas to Surat.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay season reports:—Rain during week slight in parts of Hyderabad, Upper Sind Frontier, Ahmedabad, Panch Mahals, Broach, Surat, and Tanna, but good throughout Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, where crops and grazing are much improved. Total rainfall generally deficient and more needed urgently throughout Gujerat, Kattywar, and Konkan, where crops are suffering. Harvesting of early crops progressing in parts of Hyderabad, Kaira, Surat, Khandesh, Nasik, Rutnagherry, Satara, Canara, and Kattywar; and sowing of late crops in parts of Hyderabad, Kaira, Surat, Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur, Belgaum, and Kattywar. Cotton damaged by insects in Wadhwan and standing crops by blight and storm in parts of Hyderabad, by storm in parts of Upper Sind Frontier, and by blight, insects, rats, and crabs in parts of Kurrachee. Fodder scarce in parts of Kurrachee, Kaira, Khandesh, Nasik, and Kattywar. Agricultural stock suffering in parts of Kurrachee, Hyderabad, Broach, Nasik, and Kattywar. Scarcity of drinking water felt in one taluka of Ahmedabad and parts of Broach. Prices rising in parts of Kurrachee and Surat.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB. (Oct. 17.)

MR. W. H. RATTIGAN, of the Punjab Chief Court Bar, has accepted a brief in the great Burdwan Succession Case, and will act with Sir G. C. Paul and Mr. Evans, of the Calcutta Bar.

COLONEL BADCOCK, Commissary-General, is laid up at Quetta from a serious injury to his eyesight received during his recent journey down from Simla to Kalka by tonga.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY has consented to receive the Rajah of Sikkim at Darjeeling, but thinks it desirable that before an interview takes place he should return to Gantok and endeavour to come to an understanding with the chief Lamas and laymen, and to make arrangements with them for the future administration of the State. The Rajah accordingly proceeds to Gantok.

WE (Morning Post) recently reported a case of suttee in the Cawnpore district. News of an almost similar incident reaches us from the Lucknow district, the difference between the two being that, whereas in the former no connivance on the part of the relatives was shown to exist, in the latter the friends of the deceased and of the widow took an active part in the ghastly ceremony. The woman, writes a correspondent, met her death quite calmly, preserving this demeanour even when enveloped in flames. The scene of the tragedy was a village named Raar.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE services of Lieut. E. B. Farquharson, 1st Battalion East Surrey Regiment, have been placed at the disposal of the Government of Bengal for employment as an extra aide-de-camp to the Lieutenant-Governor from the 15th of next month to April 15, 1889.

It has been settled that battalions of Madras and Bombay Infantry, as in Bengal, be sent on active service at a strength of 912 native officers, non-commissioned officers and men.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the issue of eighty Martini-Henry rifles and eighty sets of accoutrements adapted for these rifles to five regiments of Madras Infantry and two regiments of Bombay Infantry.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the transfer of the Deputy Surgeon-General of the Sirhind division to Quetta, and of the Administrative Medical Officer of the Quetta District to Umballa, with effect from Nov. 1.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL H. S. ANDERSON, C.B., Bombay Staff Corps, has been appointed President of the General Court-martial on Lieutenant-Colonel H. T. Bulkeley.

THE following after-order by General Galbraith appeared on Oct. 5th in Brigade Orders:—"I feel it impossible to express my sorrow in having to announce to the troops the death of Captain Beley, D.A.Q.M.G., from wounds received in action. The Service cannot boast a more gifted and gallant officer. Modest as brave, he was beloved by all who knew him. His death wounds were received as become a British soldier, singly but fearlessly facing a host of foes and leading a noble example to his comrades. As a personal friend, and trusted adviser his loss is to me irreparable, and I feel sure that my admiration for his character and sympathy with his bereaved relatives are shared by all ranks, British and Native, in the Hazara Field Force."

RECRUITING in the Native Army is being pushed on with all possible vigour, orders having been received by Commanding Officers to draft all the men they can into the Reserve.

THE Director-General of Ordnance in India will leave Simla and proceed on tour on or about the 30th Oct. for the purpose of inspecting the Arsenal at Quetta and Karachi, returning to Calcutta about November 24.

A SITE for a rest-camp has been selected at Jhansi. The necessary arrangements will be made as soon as practicable, and it is understood that a troop-siding near the camp will be provided.

CAPTAIN J. M. GRIERSON, Royal Artillery, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Peshawar District, will succeed the late Captain Beley as Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General with the Hazara Field Force.

I. M. S. "DALHOUSIE."

The Indian Marine steamer Dalhousie, under the command of Captain W. Aves, I.M., arrived in harbour at 3 o'clock on Saturday morning, Oct. 13, from Aden and Kurrachee, with detachments of the F-2 R.A. The details included 166 men, ten women, and 14 children (Europeans), 191 native Sappers and Miners from Aden, and several volunteers for Indian service from other corps; also one corporal of the R. E., and his wife and two children. The officers from Aden were Lieut. Moss, 3rd B. N. I., Lieut. Prentice, R.E., Lieut. Brownrigg, R.E. From Kurrachee—Capt. Gardiner, Lieut. Radcliffe and Lieut. J. L. de Berry, F-2 R.A.; and Surgeon Hayman, Medical Staff. The Dalhousie sailed on Monday for Kurrachee with 12 officers, one lady, one child, two warrant officers, 150 men belonging to the Worcester Regiment, and other details. The following are the names of the officers:—Capt. Hancock, Lieut. C. B. Westmacott, Lieut. W. G. Windsor, Vet. Surg. W. A. Crow, A. V. Dept., Civil Chief Master Armr. Yardley, Ord. Dept., Lieut. Paton, 2nd R. Lanc. Regt., Rev. F. N. Hill, Eccl. Dept., Lieut. L. A. C. Gordon, R.A., Surg. Russell, Med. Dept., Lieut. Head, 4-1 South I Div., Lieut. M. W. Sherard, 6th By. Cav., Lieut. Piers, 10th By. Infy. On her return from Kurrachee the Dalhousie will be docked for cleaning purposes, and on the 24th of November she will convey H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught to Cutch.

DEPARTURE OF THE TROOPSHIP "EUPHRATES."

Her Majesty's Troopship Euphrates, Commander J. R. E. Pattison, sailed on Saturday, Oct. 31, for England with officers and men of the Royal Artillery and time expired men. Part of the troops were brought by train to Sassoon Dock on Friday morning from Deolalee, and other two troop trains arrived at Sassoon Dock on Saturday at 6 and 6.50. ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP "CROCODILE."

Her Majesty's Troopship Crocodile, Commander Richard Evans, arrived in harbour on Monday, Oct. 16, from Portsmouth, which she left on Sept. 19, calling at Malta on the 27th, Port Said on Oct. 1, and Suez on Oct. 3. She brought officers and men of different regiments, the passengers including 49 officers, 20 ladies, 3 children, 1,126 men, 42 women, and 28 children. Among the officers was Prince Adolphus of Teck, who will join his regiment, the 17th Lancers. During the voyage, on Sept. 27, there was one death, that of a child, from natural causes. The Crocodile had fine weather throughout. The troops disembarked on Tuesday at the Sassoon Dock, and were sent to Deolalee by two special trains at 6.50 and 7.50 P.M. respectively, for distribution as follows:—1st Dragoon Guards to Rawalpindi, 2nd Dragoon Guards to Sealkote, 3rd Dragoon Guards to Muttra, 7th Dragoon Guards to Umballa, 1st Battalion Royal Infantry Fusiliers to Cherat, 2nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers to Kuldunnah, 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment to Topa, 2nd Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment to Gharial, 17th Lancers to Lucknow, 2nd Battalion Devonshire Regiment to Jhanshi, 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade to Bareilly. The Crocodile sailed on Oct. 25 for England. The following are the names of the officers:—

Recent reports from Indo-China again call attention to the miserable accommodation which is provided for the troops in most places; and these cost much in repairs. If proper barracks were provided the cost would entail a considerable expenditure certainly, but the cost would be recouped in two years by decrease in hospital expenses, reduced charges for returning so many invalids to France, &c.

A correspondent of the Tokyo Dempo residing in Söul, points out the manner in which Russia is striving to extend her influence in that country. Whether Mr. Denny is really acting in the way the correspondent imputes we know not, but considering the way in which he has thrown over Chinese interests no one would be astounded if it were so, and Li Hung-chang must now regret the day when he foisted his protégé on the puppet kingdom. Meanwhile Mr. Denny's pamphlet, to which we have before alluded, relative to the relations between Korea and China, continues to create considerable excitement. The funniest thing is that there seems to have been some effort made to keep it secret, at least out here, for it is almost impossible to obtain a printed copy in Korea for either love or money, and the same complaint comes from China. So great is this difficulty that one gentleman who desired to send a copy home was obliged to transcribe the whole of it himself.

BEAUTIFUL JIM.*

To be tried for your life on the charge of murder—the murder of a brother officer, a dearly-loved comrade, an intimate companion, and an affectionate friend—can anything be more harassing, more provocative of feelings of an anger and revenge? Such, however, was “Beautiful Jim’s” fate! Needless to say he was acquitted, as there was not a shadow of evidence to link him with the heinous guilt of shedding the blood of a fellow-creature. Thus far the matter is simple enough. Fortunately it is but seldom in the annals of life that a high-minded English officer is charged with the foulest of foul accusations. Still there is nothing impossible or, indeed, extremely improbable that such a misfortune should befall some luckless wight. What is strange is that Mr. Winter has conceived the notion that when the so-called culprit walks forth an innocent, stainless man, and subsequently discovers the true murderer, he sedulously refuses to proclaim the wretch’s guilty. And why? That is the plot of the work; but so well does the noble-hearted Jim keep his secret, that the slayer of man died an honourable death on the field of battle.

The work stands by no means low in the ranks of fiction. Jim, the beautiful Jim, is a fine heroic character, endowed with all the characteristics of honour, manliness, and truth, which go far to make the terms “British officer” and “gentleman” well-nigh synonymous. His bride, the lovely Nancy, is no less adorable than her husband. She in turn was one of nature’s gentlewomen, albeit of birth sufficiently high to have carried its own commendation in the eyes of the world; kind, affectionate, alive to the calls of duty and the promptings of love, she shined in the hours when the sickness of him she loved needed a nurse’s help and a wife’s devotion. Far different was her brother, a young prig, as unprincipled, as loathsome a specimen of humanity as “they are usually made.” His death comes as a relief to the reader, who intensely recoils from a character which jars against all the better instincts of humanity.

The accounts, too, of garrison society, of life within barracks, of the small coteries in provincial towns, are all light, amusing, clever, and attractive; and Mr. Winter has succeeded in producing a very readable and fascinating novelette, which is likely to be well received by the many-headed public, insatiable as it is as regards works of fiction and tales of love.

THE LIFE OF THE RIGHT HON. STRATFORD CANNING.*

More than a quarter of a century has passed since an assembly of British residents at Constantinople met together on the brow of the hill at Pera to lay the foundation-stone of a memorial church to commemorate the brave Englishmen who had fallen in the Crimean War. The occasion was one of no small import in the annals of civilisation. The very reason which brought together this miscellaneous concourse was of itself pregnant with significance. What could testify with greater force to the religious freedom which had taken root, and to some extent flourished, in the capital of the Muhammadan world than the circumstance that the creation of an Anglican Church in close proximity to a Muslim mosque had become not only a possibility, but a fact. The occasion, too, was the leave-taking of the venerable diplomatist to whose unwearied exertions, to whose persistent efforts, this advance in civilisation was due. Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was the hero of the hour; and as he stood hand-in-hand ready to adjust the keystone of the fabric, it was felt a fitting end to a great and grand career. For years he had laboured, not only to uphold the dignity of the Government, whose representative he was, and whose mouthpiece he was proud to own himself, but to cure the “sick man” of the East of the canker which was eating away the very vitals of the nation. He succeeded, not, indeed, to the fullest degree—that was well-nigh impossible—but to an extent which placed him far and away ahead of all rivals. Never since Turkey was an empire had a foreign representative held such sway as fell to the lot of the “great Elchi.” The destinies of the empire were for years in his keeping. His word was law, his nod an ordinance.

This was the man, this the mighty diplomatist whose life Mr. Lane-Poole has just given to the world. It has often been said, but it may well bear repetition, that few literary tasks can compare as regards difficulty with a biography. The case in point may fitly illustrate the aphorism. When the biographer approached his work he found, as may well be supposed, reams of correspondence. Letters, memoranda, notes, [explanatory statements, were counted not by ones or twos, but by the thousand. Careful and painstaking to a degree, Mr. Poole set himself to read this vast array of undigested matter—and what was the result? Just this. That he laboured amidst such a record of the intricate and crooked wiles of diplomacy with which Lord Stratford de Redcliffe had to contend, that he himself became impregnated with the atmosphere of entanglement which has always characterised the “Eastern Question.” So in place of a concise, clear, and easily comprehensible narrative which he who runs may read, there is an involved prolix and intermingled flow of language which needs perusing and re-perusing before the bewildered reader can find a ray of light to illumine the most obscure of all obscure questions. Take the Crimean War as an example. Eleven courses were either recommended to the Porte, or suggested as fit to be thus recommended. What happened? What became of these diplomatic bantlings, only one of which apparently ever came to maturity, is none too clear. All that is clear, and the fact—at any rate from a biographical point of view is admittedly important—is that the great Elchi strained every nerve to prevent that most disastrous of wars. The attitude and proceedings of the Home Cabinet seem to us wanting in firmness and decision; but as this is the traditional policy of the Liberal party as regards foreign problems, the circumstance will not occasion much wonder or surprise.

As regards hero worship there is, perhaps, not much room for adverse criticism. Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was a great man—in the line of diplomacy he has never, perhaps, been surpassed; and if Mr. Lane-Poole does like to do “poojah” to the subject of his biography, the offence is pardonable, the error is easily overlooked; but whether he has made the most of the materials at his disposal, whether he has not at times got out of his depth is, perhaps, open to argument; and we can the more readily pon this criticism, in so far as we are ready to admit that when, now and again, he uses the opportunity of giving life by passages of description to the dry bones of bare fact which form the magna pars of these ponderous tomes his style is attractive and popular, and of a nature to lend an interest to the narrative which the author desires to elucidate and explain.

Is the Art Journal for November quite as good as usual? Invariable excellence spoils, and critics become fastidious after long indulgence. The picture of the “Water-Wheel” is of its sort very first-rate; but obviously a “photogravure,” however beautifully executed, cannot, could not, possibly rival an etching. The illustrations of Japanese art are very fairly good; but as regards the article on Jean Jacques Hermer, the nude figures are neither attractive per se, nor does the reproduction do justice to the artist’s fancy.

The Art Annual for 1888 is confined to the works of J. C. Hook. Of the many illustrations which grace this brochure incontestably the best is the engraving of the well-known picture, “A Passing Cloud;” this is bright, effective, and full of life.

We have much pleasure in calling attention to a statistical chart, prepared by Mr. Morris, and published by Effingham Wilson and Co. It shows at a glance a variety of details as regards the leading countries of the Universe, and it will save a deal of labour and research for the many who have occasion to hunt up information respecting the matters on which it touches.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigné's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bond fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s. when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1888.

SANITATION IN INDIA.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram from Calcutta published this morning, the Government of India has been obliged to call the attention of the Government of Bengal to the insanitary condition of the capital of the Empire, and to insist on the local municipality taking steps to carry out the recommendations of the Health Officer, whose "reiterated demands" appear to have been hitherto neglected by the local self-governing body. Cholera, according to the latest accounts, is carrying off its victims in the City of Palaces, but in the meantime the Government Supreme and Local appear to be powerless, except in the way of expostulation and Minute writing. It would seem as if the authorities in India, who are really responsible for the well-being of the people there, are afraid to interfere in any stronger way, lest the cry arise that the great principle of local self-government is being interfered with, and that the cherished privilege of Native municipalities to encourage filth and spread disease around is being endangered, and the memory of the good Lord Ripon's rule being disgraced. Better that many should sicken or die than that the political agitators of the Congresses and the vernacular Press should be given an opportunity to speak or write evil against the Paramount Power. It is difficult to believe that English rule can have come to this complexion in India, but we cannot help saying that from the latest accounts we have read it looks very like it. Baboodom in Bengal and Parseedom in Bombay appear to be having it all their own way, so far as questions of local sanitation are concerned. The official Health officers are being roundly abused by their unclean enemies, and they are failing to find a friend in the Government they serve. The Calcutta Municipality lately rebuked the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal for declaring that their noble city "stank." Such an opinion reflected, they considered, upon their dignity. The Sanitary Commissioner of Bombay having been rash enough to state that the condition of the harbour foreshore was a standing disgrace, and vile enough to create (if the truth were known to foreign Governments) a perpetual quarantine against Bombay has also come in for rebuke. But, in his case, the rebuke is actually from the Local Government, to which he looked for support. An official "Resolution" declares that "the Government cannot admit that the general condition of the foreshore is as defective as Mr. Hewlett's remarks would imply, and the last sentence is wholly unjustifiable." But the English Press of Bombay advises the Government to go down and sniff the foreshore for itself—a very practical way—however rude may be the advice—of testing the value of the Sanitary officer's opinion. But Mr. Hewlett has not only offended the Local Municipality and Government—he has brought down upon himself and his opinions the greatly pent-up wrath of that powerful body, the P.W.D. of India. He has expressed his conviction that the acquaintance of many of the officers of the Department with sanitary engineering was elementary, and he has stated that he himself had been obliged to return plans of a large public building, already approved of by the Superintending Engineer of the Division, because "the most ordinary rules regarding soil-pipes, ventilators, traps, and sewers had, through absolute ignorance, not been followed." And so, as an Indian contemporary pithily puts it, Mr. Hewlett, "being unwilling to introduce sewer gas into the bedrooms of people who had done him no harm, suggested that Government might in future either import a trained sanitary engineer from England or give the Public Works Department men some instruction in the same unsavoury but important craft before they went out to India." The anger of a Department celebrated for its confidence in itself and its general irresponsibility towards anybody else, may be, in reporter phraseology, "more easily imagined than described." And it has been powerful enough to influence the Government of Bombay to again rebuke Mr. Hewlett, who is officially informed that he has made "an unjustifiable attack" on the officers of the Department. He is told that "almost the whole of the last section of his report is either entirely irrelevant or improper in tone"—the "irrelevancy" being a ghastly description of a Deccan village in all its primitive filth. But then it is hinted that the Bombay Government considers that such writings as Mr. Hewlett's—clever, terse, and wickedly true—are best reserved for sanitary magazines. No wonder that more than one English newspaper in India expresses wonder and indignation at the weakness of a Government which thus treats its officers labouring only for the public good. The Pioneer sums up the position pointedly :—

To our thinking the case stands thus. Government buys the services of a medicine-man in order that he may point out the shortcomings of sewers and the like. He is a trained specialist, and he deals with matters affecting directly the health and the lives of men. As in a well-conducted regiment the word of the doctor is, in affairs affecting health, beyond the word of the colonel, and by the colonel disobeyed at his own risk, so should the word of the Presidency medicine-man be beyond that of the Government. He is not paid to compliment it or to have regard to its feelings. If he says the thing which is not, the misstatement can be proven against him, and he can be discredited. If he is an enthusiast, given to painting with lamplblack when sepia would suffice, he should be borne with, for it is better, considering the stolidity of an average Government, to possess too energetic a medicine-man than one over-respectful.

The logic of this is unanswerable, and it may surely be asked if the fear of the abuse of Native agitators in Press or on platforms ought to be allowed to weigh against it?

THE following telegram from the Viceroy, dated November 3rd, has been received at the India Office :—
"Lieutenant Ewart, 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders, severely wounded at Allai on 2nd November."

Lieut. Ewart was wounded while escorting a baggage train to the force on the Goraphor Pass. One man was killed in the encounter.

THE Civil and Military Gazette writes :—At the last moment, when men were on the march down country for the first troopship of the season, an order appeared changing the procedure for the settlement with time-expired men and invalids. It appears strange to outsiders how dilatory the military authorities are in making up their minds to do a thing, when a little energy might save so much trouble all round. Take, for instance, the order changing the rate of exchange at which the soldier's pay to be paid after October 1, which, although issued in the India Army Circulars for August, was not published until October had begun, and the order will not be in the hands of those concerned at Quetta, Aden, and Bhamo before the 15th Oct., causing no end of confusion and expenditure in telegrams to effect the necessary settlement with the men about to embark, as there is an order that no soldier having claims against Government should be put on boardship. In former years the change in the rate of exchange has been notified in a special Army Circular. For reasons unknown, this course was not followed this year; and the consequence is that those men who are going home with savings bank balances are being unnecessarily mulcted a penny in every rupee, owing to somebody blundering. Had those men known that their savings would be thus affected, they would have taken steps to remit in September at the 1s. 5½d. rate. Let us take a case. A. B. has 1,000 rupees in the bank; he is sailing from Bombay on October 14; for the 14 days he receives an extra 9½d. and Government takes out of him one thousand pennies, or £43s. 4d. ! This is surely enough to make the soldier howl.

MAGAZINE THAT GIVES EXPRESSION

TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth;
but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.England—per annum £1 0 0 In advance,

BROAD ARROW
AND*NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service
Inventions."The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements.""The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux
of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ...
there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic.
Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman,
October 1888.... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—
Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGH, COLD, ATHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) discovered a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances dying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This is necessary, as many persons have purchased by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. J. T. DAVENPORT, 336, Russell St., W.G.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBTLE IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. SOLE MANUFACTURER.

Cheques and Post Office Orders must be made payable to J. B. DENT. Catalogues Free.

Wanted, at home and abroad, travellers, agents, canvassers, shopkeepers, timekeepers, foremen of works, clerks, and others, to obtain orders for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved, to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Our naval and military agents when leaving the service, desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers are invited to apply for the post. The means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1888.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 26th October; from Allahabad and Madras to the 24th October; and from Calcutta to the 23rd October.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council held at Simla on Oct. 25 the following Bills will be passed:—A Bill to amend the Punjab Courts Act 1884; a Bill to make further provision for administration of the late King of Oudh's estate; a Bill to supplement the provisions of the Upper Burma Laws Act 1866, with respect to the Shan States; a Bill to repeal certain enactments relating to the purchase of regimental necessaries from soldiers.

THE following Bills were introduced:—A Bill to consolidate, amend, and add to the law relating to railways in India; a Bill to provide for the appointment of the Financial Commissioner for Burma, and define his functions; a Bill to amend the Burma Municipal Act 1884; a Bill for the establishment of a village system, and to amend the law relating to rural police in Lower Burma.

AFTER laying the foundation-stone of the Lady Aitchison Hospital at Lahore, Lady Dufferin will, on Nov. 20, lay the foundation-stone of a lying-in-hospital at Agra, and on Dec. 5 the foundation-stone of the new Lady Dufferin's Zenana Hospital at Calcutta.

SOME thousands of copies of Lady Dufferin's pamphlet on the work of the Fund will shortly be published both in English and Urdu.

LADY LANSDOWNE takes over the Presidentship of the Fund on Lady Dufferin's departure, and there will be a balance of Rs. 30,000 in hand at the close of this year, besides the capital. Two new lady doctors will shortly arrive in India.

ON the departure of Lord Dufferin for Europe Lord Binning, A.D.C., joins the staff of Lord Connemara, in succession to Captain W. Yordham Quin.

THE Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Lady Roberts and Captain Rawlinson, A.D.C., left Simla on Oct. 17th for his tour to the North-West Frontier. The Adjutant-General joined his Excellency at Umballa, as also Colonel Pole-Carew and Dr. Taylor. The Quartermaster-General joins at Quetta early next month. Lady Roberts will pay a visit to the nursing sisters at Oghi and Darband, where hospitals for the Hazara Field Force have been formed.

THE latest Kabul news, dating to the 12th October, fully confirms the previous reports of Ishak's flight. The Amir's troops have occupied Andkhoi and Shirbarghan, and the whole of Afghan-Turkistan is now quiet. The fight in which Ishak was overthrown was a very stubborn one.

ORDERS have been formally issued cancelling all arrangements made for the Kabul Mission, full confirmation having been received of the Amir's intention to visit Afghan-Turkistan forthwith.

GENERAL MACLAINE reports from Herat that all is quiet in Northern Afghanistan, the news of Ishak's defeat and flight being now accepted by the troops and people as beyond all question.

ORDERS have been issued to provision the whole of the Sikkim Field Force up to November 15th, after which date a considerable reduction will probably be made in the strength of General Graham's Brigade.

THE question of dealing with the Chin border westwards of the Chindwin is now engaging the attention of the Government of India. As the cold season advances there may be a repetition of raids, and it is highly advisable that due precautions should be taken beforehand.

THE Central Committee of Lady Dufferin's Fund has given Rs. 30,000 to the N.W.P. Branch, Rs. 22,000 of which is for the building of the lying-in hospital at Agra, and the rest for the completion of the female medical school building. Ten thousand rupees has been also given to the Punjab Branch as a contribution towards a boarding-house for female medical students in Lahore. This will supply a much-felt want.

THE special duty on which Sir Mackenzie Wallace is engaged in connection with the review of Lord Dufferin's administration will probably be completed by the middle of November, thus enabling him to accompany the Viceroy to Lahore.

FAMINE in the Aska district of Madras appears imminent.

A TRIPLE murder was committed at Dadur, a suburb of Bombay, on Oct. 25th. A well-to-do Parsee widow, her daughter, and grandson having their skulls fractured with an iron pestle by a Native servant, who has since been arrested and confessed his guilt. Plunder was the object.

SERGEANT-MAJOR FINLAY, Royal Irish Regiment, committed suicide by hanging himself in the dépôt at Colaba a few days after landing from the troopship Euphrates.

BABU GURU DASS BANERJI, of the Calcutta High Court-Bar, has been selected to fill the vacancy in that Court caused by Mr. H. S. Cunningham's retirement. The Bench, as then constituted, will consist of five Barristers, five Civil Service, and three Native Judges—all Hindus—or the full Statutory complement of thirteen Judges.

THE Commission appointed to inquire into the charges of corruption against Mr. A. T. Crawford, C.S., C.M.G., met at Poona on October 23rd. The indictment contains thirty-three charges having reference to sums amounting to Rs. 47,000 alleged to have been received as bribes from the accused's subordinates and Native chiefs whose States were under his jurisdiction.

LORD CONNEMARA is to be installed Master of the Lodge "Perfect Unanimity" at Madras on November 23rd, and District Grand Master of Madras, in all probability by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, the next day.

THE Allahabad University will in future participate in the benefits of the six Government scholarships in England.

THE Insurance Agents of Calcutta have formed an association, and fixed a uniform tariff, affiliating their organization with the local Chamber of Commerce.

THE Government of the N.W. Provinces has definitely adopted the scheme of a Volunteer Reserve.

AN inquiry into the condition of the lower classes in British India has been made with satisfactory results, it being gathered that the condition is not one which need cause any very great anxiety at present.

MR. W. R. LAWRENCE, Under-Secretary, officiates as Secretary in the Agricultural Department during Sir Edward Buck's two months' absence on privilege leave.

COLONEL PRIDEAUX, late Political Agent with the deceased King of Oudh, on return from leave in England, will be posted as Political Agent to Jeypore.

MR. C. CHAPMAN, Deputy Commissioner of Pertabgarh, died at Lucknow on Oct. 22rd, after a brief illness.

MR. A. C. TUPP, on his return to India, will be posted as Accountant-General to Allahabad, when Mr. Barrow, who has been officiating, goes as Deputy Accountant-General to Bombay.

THE Government of India having found that great diversity exists in the administration of jails in different Provinces, and even in the same Province, has deputed Dr. W. Walker, Surgeon-General with the Government of India, and Surgeon-Major A. S. Lethbridge, Inspector-General of Jails, Bengal, to inspect and report on the jails in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, Bengal, North-West Provinces and Oudh, and the Punjab.

MR. IRWIN, the architect who has done so much for Simla, has been appointed Public Works Secretary to the Agent to the Governor-General, Rajputana, vice Colonel Marshall, who is proceeding on furlough.

THE Raja of Kapurthala has announced his intention of giving a further donation of five thousand rupees to the Aitchison College, Lahore, on the occasion of the Lieutenant-Governor's visit to Kapurthala, thus bringing up his total subscription to the institution to Rs. 25,000.

GENERAL CHESNEY was to start on his cold weather tour on November 6th, his dates being Quetta, 10th to 15th; Kurrachee, 17th to 21st; Bombay, 23rd to 26th; and Poona, 27th to 30th. He will arrive at Calcutta on December 5th.

COLONEL BADCOCK has returned to Simla from Quetta, Dr. Owen accompanying him on account of the state of his eyes. He is convalescent now, but had a narrow escape of losing the sight of one eye.

It is notified that six scholarships, tenable in England, established in February, 1886, will be shared by the Indian Universities as follows:—Allahabad and Madras, in 1889; Punjab and Calcutta, 1890; Bombay and Allahabad, 1891; Madras and Punjab, 1892; and Calcutta and Bombay, 1893.

NOTES.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram this morning there may still be some more fighting on the Black Mountain, as the Chagarzais do not seem willing to submit. It is probable, however, that they will very soon come to a different frame of mind when they become assured that the Expeditionary force which has brought the other tribes to their senses intend to apply the same methods of reasoning to them. There can be no doubt of the result, although it is painful to think that it may not be accomplished without the loss of valuable lives on our side.

"SCOTLAND for ever!" The pipers and drummers of the Khyberes (so runs the legend in to-day's telegrams) played the Seaforth Highlanders out when leaving Maidan. It is now some twenty-five years since the Khyberes first heard the sound of a "regulation" Scottish bagpipe, when the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders formed part of the garrison at Peshawur. The "war notes of Lochiel," if not altogether appreciated by other ears in that station, fell like echoes of heavenly music upon those of the Khyberes, who declared that they had never listened to true melody until then. In their rapture they asked permission to learn the divine instrument at the hands of the regimental pipe-major, which was granted, and the mountaineers of the Khyber used to come and practice regularly with the Highlanders of Sutherland; for although they had a musical instrument of their own which could produce very similar effects to those of the bagpipe, it lacked the "drone," and could not give out all those wonderful combinations of sound which the latter is capable of doing. Southerners have dreaded this music, but the Khyberes revelled in it.

At the conclusion of the business before the Supreme Legislative Council at Simla on the 25th ultimo, H.E. the Viceroy said:—"It will be a matter of regret to all members of this Council to have heard the sad intelligence of the death of a very distinguished officer, in consequence of the wound which he recently received during the operations of Her Majesty's troops on the Black Mountain. You were all personally acquainted with Colonel Crookshank, and it is well known that for a very considerable period he served the Government of India in the important capacity of Deputy Secretary in the Military Department. Not only so, but he also has had a distinguished career as a soldier, and he has now lost his life in the discharge of his duties as Colonel Commanding one of the four columns, which were despatched against the rebellious tribes of the Black Mountain, and in command of the Pioneer Regiment. It is unnecessary for me to add with what deep regret the Government of India has learned the loss of so distinguished a servant and soldier."

WE read that Colonel P. H. Henderson, C.S.I., will take three months' leave shortly, during which time the suppression of Thuggee will be left to his Deputy, Mr. McLachlan. It would appear from this that the office of Superintendent of Thuggee, or whatever the Department is called, goes on in India even when there are no Thugs to superintend or suppress. Many years ago the "chaff" at Simla used to be that the Government of India was keeping one old Thug alive by "hospital comforts" and attentive nursing in order that the Department (and salary) presided over by Colonel Henderson might not lapse, and form a reason for the Secretary of State to abolish it. But surely that old Thug must have gone to join his fellow-murderers and thieves long ago? Can he have left an heir, and is Colonel Henderson now acting as regent during a minority?

THE Civil and Military Gazette says:—"An action which has not hitherto been recorded, and of which details are not even yet to hand, took place on the 6th Oct., when the 1st Column, whose proceedings have attracted less notice apparently than they deserved, distinguished themselves. About fifty or sixty of the enemy were killed on the spot, and the action appears to have been at excitingly close quarters, revolvers being freely used; while the band-master of the 5th Fusiliers obtained mention for distinguished gallantry."

AN extraordinary rumour appears to have found its way into the papers in Lower India to the effect that one of the Native regiments engaged in the Black Mountain Expedition had deserted to the enemy, owing to the discovery of many relatives and friends amongst the hostile tribesmen. It need hardly be said that there was not the slightest rumour for this canard, which was hatched in the Rawal Pindi bazaar. Our Native soldiers on the frontier have possibly family relations beyond it in some instances, but in no instance have they proved unfaithful to their salt. If their relations choose to fight against the British Government, they hold to the sensible logic that it is so much the worse for their relations.

THE Pioneer has some very sensible remarks against the hasty withdrawal of our forces from the advance positions they have gained:—"The 'coming-in' of the various jirgahs among the Black Mountain tribes must, of course, delight the souls of the Political Officers on the spot; but we trust that there will be no hasty closing of accounts with the offending clans that have plagued the border for the last twenty years. A little time before the expedition started we drew attention to Lord Lytton's opinions regarding punitive expeditions; and we venture again to reproduce the words of his 1877 minute. 'Under no circumstances,' he wrote, 'should the troops be withdrawn until all opposition has absolutely ceased; they should never be required to turn their backs to an enemy who is still firing at them.' That this view is a perfectly sound one every soldier on the frontier will acknowledge. The ignorant tribesman, who harasses the rear-guard of our strong force, thinks that he is really compelling his enemy to retreat; just as he believes that reluctance to attack a particular position which he and his fellows have taken up implies fear of defeat on our part. It is in vain to say that our troops have marched through and through the country, breaking down all opposition and destroying the villages of the most notorious offenders; so long as men can be got together to hang about the retiring columns, the local feeling will be that our retirement is a forced one."

THE dissatisfaction felt at Chittagong over the Government's acquiescence, or, at least, lukewarmness, in the matter of Lieut. Stewart's murder has taken the shape of a public meeting, and of a memorial asking for a reconsideration of Government's decision against a punitive expedition. Statistics have been furnished that 43 persons had been killed, 13 wounded, and 136 carried away into captivity since 1882 by the wild tribes. These figures, says the Englishman, fairly establish a case against the offenders. These seem to be the times for punitive border expeditions; and the necessity is to be regretted. But it is useless ignoring the higher duty of maintaining our subjects in security, and in punishing such insults to our power as tend to degrade it in the eyes of the lawless. No kind of logic but that of arms can convince the rude border tribes of their insignificance, and the wisdom of letting British subjects alone.

THE Bombay Gazette to hand to-day calls attention to a very serious grievance:—"The people in Calcutta continue to be exercised by the delay in receiving the English mails which occurs when the steamer is signalled in Bombay, even twenty minutes after the hour fixed for the departure of a special to catch up the mail train. The arrival of the mail steamer a fortnight ago one hour beyond the time arbitrarily fixed for the sending on of the mail bags by a special train from this city resulted in twenty-four hours delay in the receipt of English letters at Calcutta. This week the case is even worse. The P. and O. steamer arriving twenty minutes beyond the time in Bombay the special train was not despatched, and again the Calcutta public had to wait an extra twenty-four hours for the receipt of their own letters."

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 11.

The most important event of the week has been the publication of a long letter, written by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, explaining in cogent but moderate language the weighty political reasons on which the Congress agitation in India must be held to be both objectionable and mischievous. He comments at length on the character of the political tracts issued with the report of the Madras Congress. In these the British Government and the English officials are described as "unjust, inconsiderate, and reckless," and while the administration in India is thus grossly misrepresented there is no recognition of the true condition of India—of India under education, India compelled to submit to impartial justice, India consolidated by road and rail, the India of religious toleration, commercial India, competing successfully in the foremost markets of the world, India assured for a term of years unknown to less fortunate Europe of a profound, unbroken peace. Both the measures and the methods of the Congress are condemned.

A letter from the Secretary of State has been published, urging a modification of the existing financial arrangements of the Imperial and Provincial Governments, in view of the embarrassed condition of the finances. The Government of India has addressed certain important proposals to the various Governments, and these will be discussed at a conference of representatives at Calcutta early in December. The fall of twopence in exchange, it is pointed out, has enhanced the burden of sterling charges by Rs. 2,20,00,000, and the military charges by a like amount. The system of provincial contracts is to be so altered as to lay on the provinces a more complete obligation to share in the growth of Imperial liabilities. Expenditure of a local character must be provided for out of local revenues, while the entire revenues of each province will be made over to the management of the Provincial Governments, subject to an obligation to contribute a percentage towards the general Imperial expenditure, such percentage being liable to vary from time to time, according to the necessities of the Imperial Treasury. The Government proposes to assign in future not varying shares of the revenues at present assigned, but a uniform percentage of the whole of the revenues. Each Provincial Government will be responsible for the whole of its revenues, and will credit a fixed percentage to its own account to meet its own expenditure and credit the rest to the Imperial account. Contracts will be continuous, subject to revision according to the necessities of Imperial expenditure. The total general Imperial expenditure amounts to about Rs. 41,00,00,000 to meet which the provincial revenues available amount only to Rs. 21,50,00,000, leaving Rs. 19,50,00,000 to be contributed by the provincial revenues. Under the proposed new system the Provincial Governments would have to meet all the provincial obligations, for public works and others, out of the percentage of the revenues allowed to be retained, and would be permitted a free hand in expenditure within this limit.

These proposals, if adopted, will set aside, after two years, arrangements which were intended to last five years.

No news has been received in Sikkim of the approach of the Ampa, and it is believed that a spring campaign will probably be necessary before peace can be assured.

A zenana hospital was opened in Quetta, in Beloochistan, on the 2nd inst. Lady Dufferin's valuable work is thus bearing valuable fruit.

Rain has fallen generally over most of the districts that were threatened with famine. Scarcity will prevail, but it is hoped a famine will not occur.

Two Native women have been murdered in Calcutta in circumstances of exceptional brutality.

On the 5th inst. a large number of lives were lost by a collision of a ferry steamer on the Hooghly with a tug. The Native captain of one of the vessels is being prosecuted for culpable negligence. The number of the deaths is uncertain, but the steamer was crowded.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

CALCUTTA, NOV. 11.

The Black Mountain campaign is not finally closed. The Chagarzais have declined to make formal submission, and they have gathered with twenty-four standards near Bidal. It is pronounced hardly politic to withdraw the troops so hastily. Shots are still fired into the British camp at night, and it is argued that more must be done before these wild tribes will be reduced to complete submission. General Channer remains for the present at Maidan. The pipers and drummers of the Kyberees played the Seaforth Highlanders (the Duke of Albany's Ross-shire Buffs) out when leaving Maidan, and they sent curry and rice to the men of the Suffolk Regiment, whose rations had not arrived.

The total length of road constructed is 228 miles, with varying gradients.

General Channer attacked and destroyed Pokal on the 3rd inst., after a sharp resistance. The enemy lost sixty men killed. Several regiments have already returned to British territory.

BURMA.

RANGOON, NOV. 10.

The weekly official summary of events for Upper Burma states that nothing important has occurred except a slight conflict with dacoits. The local newspapers give a different account of affairs. Their up-country correspondents furnish a long list of attacks on and by dacoits last week. The pretender Prince has issued a proclamation which has been widely posted up in Mandalay. He states that the English have occupied the country and dethroned Thebaw to the great dissatisfaction of the people. He is coming down in force, and orders his Burmese servants to behead their masters, and have the heads ready for his arrival, on pain of having their families and villages destroyed. Great uneasiness prevails in Mandalay, and the streets are cleared at 10 o'clock p.m., and patrolled by mounted police. Lieutenants Gastrell and Alban are pursuing the pretender.

Lieutenant Atkinson's wound, which was reported last week, is not a very severe one.

Major Harvey, of the South Wales Borderers, who killed Boshway, will command one of the columns to be sent against the Eastern Karennees. The force will include 150 men of the Rifle Brigade from Myingyan.

The rice prospects are not so good as they appeared to be a short time ago, owing to the deficiency of the rainfall at the end of October and the beginning of November. Large areas have, moreover, been damped by floods. If rain fall at once there will be a heavy crop. The prices for Burma new rice run about 10 per cent. higher than those of last year. The threatened scarcity in India tends to raise prices still higher.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATIVE RANK.

(Pioneer.)

The recent promotion of Surgeon-Major McLeod, of the Bengal Medical Service, to the rank of Brigade Surgeon, is an instance of good fortune worthy of remark. Surgeon-Major McLeod has only completed a little over 23 years' full pay service, while the officer promoted immediately before him had almost 28 years' service. The explanation is that, about the year 1860, there was much doubt as to the continuance of the Indian Medical Department as a separate service, and for nearly five years the Secretary of State for India admitted no Medical Officers of the Indian Army, their places being temporarily taken by officers of the Medical Staff lent to the Indian Government. In September, 1865, the Indian Medical Department again commenced to recruit. As Brigade-Surgeon McLeod was the first man of the new batch, he now obtains promotion with nearly five years, less service than the man who stands immediately above him on the list. In three or four years more Dr. McLeod may reasonably hope to obtain administrative rank, and then will commence a supersession of the officers of the Medical Staff that will probably attract a deal of attention if it does not cause some friction. The age at which officers of the Home Medical Service obtain administrative rank is close on fifty-five—indeed, the last officer promoted only escaped being retired under the age clause by a very few weeks—while there is every probability of their promotion getting slower, in consequence of threatened reductions in the Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General grades. On the other hand, the men of the Indian Medical Service now gravitating to the top are, on an average, five years younger; indeed, many of them will have to retire at fifty-two or fifty-three, on completion of five years' service in the administrative rank: so that ere long we shall have the curious anomaly of the officers of one branch of the service being retired as Deputy Surgeons-General two or three years before those of the sister service can hope to attain to the same rank. It has been frequently brought to notice how old the executive officers of the Medical Staff are on promotion, and this evil seems more likely to increase than diminish, with the demon of retrenchment on the warpath and the cutting down of the senior ranks.

A PERIPATETIC GOVERNMENT.

(Times of India.)

No one who carefully watches the signs of the times can fail to see that the official centre of gravity in this Presidency is gradually shifting more and more from Bombay to Poona. Time was when Bombay was the real seat of Government and the administrative capital of Western India. The Governor and his councillors used, we are told, once to dine together in Bombay Castle: and that ancient and historic fortress was really the centre and seat of Government. But tempora mutantur et nos mu tamar in illis: the glory of Bombay Castle has departed; and though the name and tradition still lingers in official documents as a picturesque historical memento, the Castle is only a name, and Bombay itself, though the mercantile capital of Western India and the second city of the British Empire, is gradually ceasing to be the actual seat of Government. But although neglected by Government, Bombay still remains in every other sense the real capital of the Presidency. Where, then, it may be asked, does the Executive Government ordinarily reside? The question is a natural one, but it cannot be answered off-hand. The fact is that the local Government have, as matters now stand, no real head quarters in the strict sense at all. The Government resides sometimes in one place and sometimes in another, but, strange to say, least of all in Bombay, the place where you would naturally expect to find it. Roughly speaking, it may be said that the head-quarters of Government are, as, a general rule, to be found for one season of about four months at Poona; for two separate seasons, aggregating about three and a-half months at Mahabeshwur; for about one and a-half month on tour, with a brief episode of about three months in the year at Bombay—an episode, by the way, which some Governors, and notably Sir Richard Temple, used to shirk as much as possible. Even as it is, the annual Bombay season appears to be popularly regarded by many high officials as more or less of a nuisance and an inconvenience. Few of them think it necessary to take houses of their own, or to mix, except as visitors, in the general life of the place. As a class, they live completely apart from the permanent residents, and usually hail with delight the first indications that the Bombay season is drawing to a close, and that the Mahabeshwur exodus and the Poona season is approaching. The habit of regarding Bombay as a necessary evil, and the Bombay season as an episode to be shirked or shortened as much as possible, is not, we think, wise or in any sense desirable. If a certain proportion of the high officials were desired to make Bombay their head-quarters, and were required to keep up houses there, a very great difference would soon be observed in the relations between the officials and the permanent residents, and Bombay would speedily resume its rightful place in the counsels of the Government. At present the marked jealousy of officials and the increasing disposition to criticise Government and Government measures in a hostile spirit is a noticeable sign of the times. This disposition may be attributed in very great measure to the practical isolation of Poona and to the increasing alienation of Bombay from the small official set which pulls the strings, but is entirely out of touch with all the rest of the Presidency.

CONDITION OF ASSAM COOLIES.

(Pioneer.)

Everyone is familiar with the exaggerated accounts of the Assam tea-planter's brutality which are constantly appearing in the Native papers; but those who seek to refute them labour under the disadvantage that the witnesses they cite on the other side are for the most part either planters themselves or officials. The evidence is, as a rule, perfectly trustworthy; but the professional calumniator is none the less able to discredit it on the presumption of prejudice. For this reason a singularly candid and fearless letter which a Baptist missionary has written to a Calcutta newspaper deserves to be brought prominently to notice. Mr. Herbelet is a missionary in Orissa, and some time ago, having accompanied a party of coolies connected with his mission to the tea-gardens, he made a point of observing the treatment they and their fellows experienced at the hands of the planters. The testimony he gives on this point can hardly be viewed, even by the distorted vision of the typical slander-writer in the Native Press, as other than absolutely bona fide; for a Missionary of Mr. Herbelet's class would be inclined, if anything, to take a view contrary to that of the planter and the official. And what does Mr. Herbelet say? He tells us he found the condition and prospects of the coolies better than that of the great majority of the ordinary labourers in Orissa, and far to be preferred to that of thousands in Bengal. "The coolies earn more, wear better clothes, and have better food than tens of thousands in these parts. House accommodation is provided for them; they have medical aid in case of illness, and while sick and unable to work are entitled to receive half-pay. In these respects, having privileges not enjoyed by the labouring classes in Orissa, they can all save money and buy cows (great numbers of them do so)—two things quite beyond the reach of the many with whose condition I am contrasting theirs." On the whole Mr. Herbelet's sojourn in Assam satisfied him that, although there may be individual cases of harsh dealing and injustice, "there is nothing to justify the highly-exaggerated accounts that are circulated in order to deter labourers from proceeding to Assam. The lamentable feature in the case is that the poor wretches in the overcrowded districts of Upper India who can scarcely keep body and soul together, are so deterred.

AN ESTIMATE OF LORD DUFFERIN.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The strangely malevolent estimate of the retiring Viceroy and his works, which appeared the other day in the leading and least reasonable of the Native papers in Bengal, would claim the scantiest of notice were it not that an attempt is being made to pitch the opinion of the Natives elsewhere in regard to Lord Dufferin in an almost similar key. Of the paper in question it may be necessary to say that it has not spoken fairly or dispassionately of a single act of the retiring Governor-General, and it must in part be for symmetry's sake that its final estimates of him are being written without generosity or judgment or good sense. We wonder if it is even yet too late to point out to the political school whose worst characteristics the paper in question embodies that there is such a thing as overdoing it, even in the condemnation of the wicked. Here we have a denunciation of the Viceroy which stops short of nothing in the whole range of political accusation. There is no need to take up in detail the charges that are made against him; it should be enough to ask if the public life of the British Empire is such a miserable sham that a nobleman whose career had been a long succession of failures would have been able for a quarter of a century to retain the places of prominence and honour and responsibility which have been confided to Lord Dufferin. Our statesmen at home are not fools; they are at least as good judges of character and political capacity as the half-fledged journalists who are trying to shape a public opinion in Bengal; and when a nobleman is entrusted in succession with the Governor-Generalship of Canada, the Embassies of St. Petersburg, of Constantinople, a special Commission to Egypt, and finally with the Viceroyalty of India, the public will need something more than the rancorous deprecations of a studiously hostile journalism to persuade them that a man of such antecedents should be the incompetent, insincere, and entirely deceptive person that the Calcutta people are asked to believe him to be. These à priori considerations may be put first, as appealing to the English section of the community, whose judgments in such matters as this are not yet quite irrelevant, and who, with some knowledge of the principles on which the higher appointments of the Empire are made, will resent somewhat the imputation that at a serious moment in the history of India Her Majesty was advised to nominate for the most responsible post in her gift an incompetent and untrustworthy statesman. The ill-informed effrontery of the criticism we are alluding to cannot well be allowed to pass in silence. An increasing number of the Natives of India are learning to pronounce the phrases of English political life, but we are not sure that knowledge on these matters is more abounding to-day than ever it was, and there must be many students of the lower criticism who do not understand that for a statesman of the class that we are asked to believe Lord Dufferin to be there is absolutely no room in the Imperial system. He would have disappeared from view long years ago had he been the monument of incapacity and unreality that the malevolent imaginativeness of people who are pleased to consider themselves his enemies represent him to be.

Will the Bengali enemies of the Viceroy try to understand that in accusing him of every political vice within his reach they are much overdoing it, and are making themselves not a little ridiculous? It is part of their game to endeavour to convict Lord Dufferin of general misdemeanour by putting him in comparison with his predecessor. Well, the Statesman who sent Lord Ripon to India also sent Lord Dufferin, and we have lately had from his lips an estimate of the merits of one and the other which certainly leaves Lord Dufferin at no disadvantage. As one of the chief failures of the retiring Viceroy is said to be "the frontier demarcation and the Afghan business," it may be well to recall the fact that this enterprise was resolved upon and even commenced before Lord Dufferin set foot in this country. The ease with which the Russians will be able to break down the frontier marks is not greater than it would have been had they been put up in the time of Lord Dufferin's predecessor. Lord Ripon, so far as we are aware, did not contemplate the erection of a Chinese wall along the Russo-Afghan frontier, so that the observation that Russia may at any moment step over the frontier is irrelevant and childish. The incident of Penjdeh has left behind it a legacy of taxation; but to hold Lord Dufferin personally responsible for that is characteristically unfair. The business has not cost India any more than it cost England, for within a week of the brush between the Afghans and Colonel Alikhanoff Mr. Gladstone obtained from Parliament a vote of eleven millions sterling—a proof that representative institutions are not quite such certain safeguards against lavish expenditure as some of us seem to think. Whether or not the precautions taken for the strengthening of the frontier have been excessive is a question open to discussion. Our own belief on that point has been expressed often enough and plainly enough to entitle us to bespeak a reasonable judgment of the acts of Lord Dufferin's administration in regard thereto. The important additions to the frontier fortifications, and above all to the frontier roads and railways might, we have always held, have been in themselves deemed to be additions to the effective strength of the army, without resorting to the large numerical reinforcements which have made such considerable additions to the military budget. But the point is one fairly open to debate, and we certainly can find nothing in the new expenditure to give colour to the cock-sure opinion that the Viceroy has failed as a financier. If the new fortifications and the new works were necessary the extra expenditure is to be justified by the best of all reasons. There is one feature in the financial history of Lord Dufferin's administration which claimed something different from the foolish judgment that it is "a red-hot engine of oppression, which is slowly but surely consuming the people." "The people" who contribute to the Income-tax number about 300,000, and if there is one thing that the returns put beyond doubt it is that the only classes who contribute to it in reasonable proportion to their incomes are the official classes and the Europeans. Whether it be an engine of oppression or not, the introduction of the Income-tax has removed privilege from the Indian financial system, and has brought within the taxable area a large array of incomes, and especially European incomes, which otherwise would have contributed nothing to the new burdens which events have imposed upon the Indian Budget.

There is not a little malevolence in the spirit which could present to the world two such episodes as the income-tax and the demarcation of the Afghan frontier as samples of folly and failure. There is no arguing against a criticism such as this, but we must not ignore it in any account that we may take of the various elements that go to make up public opinion in India. We do not know whether Sir William Hunter would count the feline asperity with which some of the Bengal politicians have turned upon a Viceroy who is, at least, generous and broad in his sympathies as one of the forces with which English statesmanship has to reckon in India. If, however, the solution of the problem of the day in India is to be found in rallying around the administration all the men of good-will and good character and good sense, who can add to its authority and its knowledge and its influence, we should say that until Bengal gives utterance to a worthier voice than that which finds expression in its newspapers it will be able to play no part in this great enterprise. The prating of loyalty to the Sovereign which is a perfunctory item in some of the programme of the day is an obvious hypocrisy when it comes from men who show a dishonest hatred for the statesman by whom the sovereign wields rule in India. A statesman who has shown absolutely no party preferences in India, and has been as impartial as the Empress herself, has been attacked with the virulence which partisanship usually reserves for the chief of an opposing faction, and in discreditable disregard of the representative character which the very title of Viceroy imposes upon him. The absence of any provocation to this way of dealing with him is one of the peculiar features of this denunciatory criticism. No word has fallen from Lord Dufferin that has clashed with real Native sentiment. The chivalrous courtesy of his demeanour in the face of all men has been the conspicuous characteristic of his public appearances and of his public utterances. He has disappointed some expectations only because they were conceived in folly. The men who are distinguishing themselves in these tirades of rancorous depreciation hoped that he would take sides in racial disputes which they themselves have done their best to provoke. He has known the obligations of his office too well to depart from an attitude of strict impartiality in the presence of these differences. His refusal to put down Mahomedan resistance to certain movements which a good many Mahomedans, at all events, do not like is costing him the good will of men who claim the full measure of English political liberty, while they show a ludicrous incapacity to understand so rudimentary a thing as liberty of discussion. In Bengal the antagonism to the Viceroy is, to an extent that it may be difficult to understand, in some other parts of India, an expression of Hindu jealousy of the Mahomedans. There is, so far as we have ever been able to see, no foundation for the belief that Lord Dufferin has favoured that community at the expense of their neighbours. But it exists, and it has been the motive for some of the unworthiest denunciations that a public man was ever subjected to. One question arises out of the criticism we have before us which it may be worth while for the publicists of Bengal to turn over in their minds—the question whether these exhibitions of their wilful determination to pass misleading and vindictive judgment upon statesmen sent to India to represent the Crown before the people of this country will help them to obtain from the English Parliament—which after all knows much more of Lord Dufferin than it does of them—powers to carry on in the legislative arena the pranks which some of them are playing in the journalistic.

THE BORDER CLERGY-LIST.

A FURTHER DISCOURSE ON THE PATHAN CHURCH.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Recently I showed that the shrines of the Border Saint, although occasionally of exuberant dimensions, cannot be described as overornate. They are severely chaste in design as in construction, being but heaps of stones continually prolonged by the simple efforts of the Faithful. Although, however, the reputation of the Border Saint is independent of architectural gewgaws, and though the officiating priesthood don no canonicals, it must not be thought that the Pathan treats his church with indifference. Of modern ecclesiastical offices and dignities he has a goodly number with sufficiently long-sounding names; and if a Pathan clergy list was to be published, the Valor ecclesiasticus might perhaps be broadly defined somewhat as follows:—

Astanadars, literally holy place-possessioners, might stand for Lay Rectors with a traditionary devout reputation, or the descendants who, by virtue of the sanctity of an ancestor of pious memory, enjoy the present endowments or benefits of the Astān, Ziārat, or shrine. Theoretically the Syud is the direct descendant of 'Alī, the son-in-law of Muhammad; practically he is a bishop or primate of the Church, who would be usually addressed by the title of Shah, "Your Grace," and to whom the Pathan would figuratively take off his hat.

Pirs would, however, stand almost at the top of the precedence list, for they would be saluted as Badshah, "Your Excellency." "The congregation should rise when a Pir joins the assembly, and remain standing till he is seated." He often has charge of a shrine, and the Pathan Burke would show him as descended from a saint of repute. Ecclesiastically he is as powerful as the Dean and Chapter, having all sorts of exclusive hereditary rights and privileges, receiving a tithe of the fields and flocks. "His social position is independent of his merits," and, says Bellevue, "all Pirs are comfortably off, if not rich."

A Mian might have the status of a Rural Dean, in that as a prelate he is becoming more or less obsolete. The Mians have abandoned the world in order to devote themselves to teaching the doctrines of Islam, but they still hold positions of dignified ease, luxurious benefices, the Barchesters of the Frontier. Some of them possess special powers to combat pestilence and famine; others are experts in discovering who are the sinners among their neighbours, and in pointing them out with the finger of scorn.

Sahibzadas, the sons of holy men, occupy about the same position in regard to Syuds, Pirs, and Mians, as Colonial Archdeacons do to Deans or Bishops, though all four classes are equally place-possessors, often comfortable place-possessors.

It is not necessary that any of the foregoing should be on the active list, but the Mullah is the ordinary hardworking Parish Priest, who has taken holy orders, perhaps with the title of Maulvi, the Muhammadan D.D.; has to attend to the services of the mosque, teach the creed, and look after the schools. The most numerous of all, he is the most important factor in ordinary Pathan life, and his influence is immense. The Residential Canon or Precentor may be represented by the Imam, whose business is to intone the service and lead the congregation. The Fakir is a mendicant Friar, generally a Dominican or Black Friar. The Shaikh, an elderly gentleman, who has relinquished worldly pleasures, or whom worldly pleasures have left stranded, and who has become a Lay Brother, or the disciple of a saint. And, last of all, comes the Talib-ul-ilm, or seeker after wisdom; a Curate with a taste for dining out; or it might be said, the reverse of an Almoner. The latter dispenses alms and distributes doles; the seeker-after wisdom does just the contrary.

If the Border curate is the bottom of the scale, the nearest approach to the head of this Church is probably an Akhund, literally a teacher; but the famous Akhund of Swat was, for almost half a century, practically the Border Pope—a character so famous as to deserve a discourse all to himself.

LONDON MURDERERS AND INDIAN MURDERERS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It was inevitable that the horror created by the atrocious murders and mutilations—made even more terrible with the long immunity of the unknown assassin—in the East of London should give rise to a great many theories as to the manner of man who did those foul deeds, and as to his presumed motive, if motive he had. The supposition at first entertained was that the deeds had been done by a lunatic labouring under a fearful form of homicidal mania. Medical experts regard the complete success with which the danger of detection has been minimised, and the manifest care which must have been taken to choose time and place and favouring circumstances to secure immunity from disturbance during an elaborate procedure occupying at least a quarter of an hour, and then of escaping unobserved, as completely negating the supposition a maniac was at work. The notion that a medical student had committed the crimes was absurd on the face of it. Medical students do not require to commit murder in the streets to procure bodies for dissection. The Middlesex coroner placed before the jury a suggestion that the murders were committed to supply a demand assumed to exist in America for certain organs, the upshot price offered for which was £20 a piece. As the object in view was stated to be presentation of the specimen to each subscriber to a new medical book about to be published in New York, it is not easy to understand how the worthy coroner argued out the theory which he asked the jury to accept. Obviously the outlay on the medical work must have been considerable, if with each copy a gift costing in London at least £20 was to be given away. How many subscribers were the publishers prepared to supply with those appalling inducements to take in the work? Little is now heard of this extraordinary effort of imagination, which surpasses even the most marvellous flights of Mr. Rider Haggard's genius. But instead we have a gentleman of long experience in India, who writes to the Times to say that, acquainted as he is with the methods of Eastern criminals, he has been struck with the probability that the White-chapel murders have been committed by a Malay or other low-class Asiatic of the class termed Lascars, of whom he believes, or at all events asserts, there are considerable numbers in Eastern London. Had the correspondent been contented to make this suggestion without giving any reasons for it, it might have passed with others for what it is worth, but he is incautious enough to give reasons for his belief. "The mutilations," he writes, "cutting off the nose and ears, ripping up the body, and cutting out certain organs—the heart, &c.—are all peculiarly Eastern methods and universally recognised, and intended by the criminal classes to express insult, hatred, and contempt; whereas, here the public and police are quite at a loss to attach any meaning to them, and so they are described as a mere senseless fury of a maniac." The writer goes on to say that perhaps a man of this class, who had been hounded and robbed of his savings, had been led by fury and revenge to take the lives of as many victims as he could. This, London is told, is entirely consistent with Eastern ideas and practices of the criminal classes in this country. Nothing more completely erroneous was ever written. A Malay, inspired by the demon of revenge, would very probably run amuck; he would slay as many victims of any and every class as came in his way. He would feel it a duty he owed to himself not to pause for a moment in his career of vengeance, while his own unhappy existence was not determined by the stroke of fate which he would at once invoke and defy. A Malay, under the influence of his vengeful passions, does not stop to mutilate, or even to count, his victims; he goes right on, slaying as he goes, having no room in his mind for thoughts of evasion or escape. The Native of India, even when he takes to Thuggee, does not mutilate his victims. He is careful not to shed blood uselessly, and therefore employs the proverbial rumal for his deadly purpose. His motives are two—first to acquire the property of the victim; his second is the pious desire to propitiate a goddess who delights in victims. Dacoits are cruel, and in Colonel Henderson's interesting report just issued he mentions several cases in which gangs in Gwalior have recently slain men and women in order to rob them, and have carried their homicidal fury so far as to fling little children into the air and catch them on their sword points as they fall. But it is not alleged even by the head of the Thuggee and Dacoity department that either class have added mutilation to murder. When mutilations are resorted to the object is not to insult the dead, but to wreaking vengeance on the living. A brutal husband of the lower or criminal classes, cuts off his wife's nose, but then he does not kill her first. Mutilations of men are resorted to for purposes of intimidation, or to gratify revenge. The Deccan sowcars whose ears or noses were cut off by their debtors some years since, were subjected to the indignity when their lives were not threatened. So it is throughout the whole chapter of criminal experience in India. Mutilation is generally the alternative to death, and not its sequel or its purpose. The correspondent who wrote to the London paper that it is entirely in consonance with Eastern ideas and practice to murder men and women with a view to insult the body by taking away and secreting a portion of it, has a very confused and misleading recollection of what he had heard while he was in India.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 23.)

ON Sunday, October 14, a serious collision took place between Mahomedans and Hindus at Beldanga, in the Moorshedabad district, in which the former were the aggressors. The Hindus, having heard that they would be molested on passing the mosque on their way to the river to immerse the Doorga, they asked the protection of the police, and two constables were told off for duty; but this had no effect. The Mahomedans commenced pelting stones, and on being remonstrated with came in a body armed with sticks, attacked the image, and broke it to pieces, inflicting dangerous wounds on some of the processionists. Three Mahomedans were arrested on the spot, and a police inquiry is being conducted. Exceedingly strained relations exist between the Hindus and Mahomedans.

MR. FRANK WESTON, late agent for Reminyi, and now expecting a large company of players from Australia, met with a serious accident on October 21 while driving a trap. The horse bolted, and the trap was upset. Mr. Weston was picked up unconscious and removed to the General Hospital, where he remained insensible for some time. The base of his skull is severely injured.

ALL the fire insurance offices in Calcutta, with a view to promote common interest, have formed an Association under the name of the Calcutta Fire Insurance Agents Association. It has been affiliated with the local Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. C. H. Ogbourne, of the Commercial Union Assurance Company, has been appointed chairman. The new Association has framed a tariff of rates under which all the fire insurance offices will charge an uniform rate.

MADRAS.

(Oct. 24.)

THE budget estimate of charges in connection with the Anglican Church in Madras for 1889-90 amounts to Rs.3,00,000. The average for the three years ending 1887-88 is Rs.2,96,554, and as both in the year last mentioned and in 1886-87 the charges were below the average by two or three thousand rupees, the Government considers that an assignment of Rs.2,98,000 will be found to suffice.

At a polo match at Secunderabad on Oct. 11th a very ugly accident befell Lieutenant G. H. Arbuthnot, 3rd Light Cavalry. Playing on the same side, both Mr. Logan-Horne and Mr. Arbuthnot were making together for the ball, when their ponies collided, with the result that the latter's pony rolled over falling on the rider's leg and fracturing the thigh just above the knee. Luckily there were medical men on the ground, and Drs. Osborne, Hathaway and Hehir came at once to Mr. Arbuthnot's assistance. He was removed in a dhooli, and the limb was subsequently set by Drs. Kernan and Hathaway.

NINE thousand bags of food-grain were lying on the beach at Bimlipatam on the morning of Oct. 18, when it appears that, owing to a reported raising of the price of food-grain and the wretched crop prospects in the districts, looting commenced, and three hundred bags were pilfered. The town police force of sixteen men was unable to put a stop to the looting, so the local Volunteers were called out, and, together with other European and Eurasian residents, gave the police excellent assistance. All was quiet two o'clock. It is probable that the occurrence was rather accidental than premeditated. The collector has forbidden any enhancement of the prices, and the police force has been augmented temporarily by fifty constables.

BOMBAY.

(Oct. 26.)

MR. B. M. MALABARI has recently handed over to the trustees of the Victoria Technical Institute a sum of Rs.1,500, the interest on which will be applied in an annual prize of Rs.60, to be called the Marquis of Ripon Prize, in connection with the Ripon Textile School.

GOVERNMENT have, it is stated, granted a plot of ground behind the Elphinstone High School, measuring 1,600 square yards, for a building for the Bombay Gymnasium, together with a grant-in-aid of Rs.7,500 for the building. The Hon. Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit having offered a sum of Rs.10,000 for the gymnasium, it is to be named after him in future.

LIEUTENANT WHITE, of the 17th Bombay Infantry, is reported to have had a narrow escape whilst on a shikar expedition, twelve miles from Mhow, a few days ago. A tigress had been wounded, and Lieutenant White and Lieutenant Gordon, of the Carabineers, were out in search of her when she suddenly appeared, and made for the former. Lieutenant White fired, but the barrel of his gun burst, and the infuriated brute was within a yard of him when his companion took aim and sent a bullet through her heart. A miss would probably have meant the death of both sportsmen.

THE s.s. Clan Macdonald, which arrived at Bombay on Oct. 21, brought out a local pack of foxhounds for next season. The hounds (twenty-five couple) have been landed in excellent order, and are in charge of Walter Bell, the kennel huntsman at Worlee. They are reported to be a nice level lot, almost all young hounds, and promise well for many a good gallop over the Bandora country later on.

A NEW religious weekly, the Indian Standard, is about to be started in Bombay, under the management of the Rev. Scott, of the Free General Assembly's Institution. The new journal, it is announced, will seek to advance every cause of social well-being and true reform, and to exhibit the thought and work of Evangelistic Christianity.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDH, AND PUNJAB.

SOME new rules have been published in the Punjab in connection with the Famine Code, which have been approved of by the Governor-General. If these are strictly followed, thinks a local paper, by the local officials, and due precautions taken to note the first symptoms of the approach of distress, there ought to be no difficulty in dealing effectually with the sufferings of the people. At present there does not appear to be any actual distress, but the crops are suffering from want of rain in Lahore, Dera Ismail Khan, and Sialkot, and prices of food grains are rising in six districts, so the publication of these rules may be looked upon as a precautionary measure.

THE Indian Mirror finds itself in rather an awkward position, says the Morning Post, which adds:—"In a recent article on the regeneration of India, it is insisted that one of the chief objects the National Congress had in view was the encouragement and development of indigenous arts and manufactures. It appears, however, that the Executive Committee have indented on England for 1,000 chairs for the use of the delegates at the December conference in Allahabad at an estimated cost of Rs.4 per chair. We must say," writes the Mirror, "that we cannot praise the prudence of the step. The Congress aims at furthering the growth of Native arts and indigenous manufactures, and it is, we think, inconsistent on its part to patronise foreign carpenters. We are sure there are Native carpenters in Calcutta, or even in Allahabad, who would be glad to undertake to supply the Congress with the required number of chairs, even at a less cost than it would have to incur in order to get them all the way from London to Allahabad. We wish the orders for the indent could be revoked." "It is passing strange," remarks the Post, "that they were ever given. It is simply farcical for the supporters of the Congress to rail at the Government of India for obtaining so much of its stores from abroad when the only order the Executive Committee is likely to give for a year goes to England."

India in Parliament.

POSTAL CLERKS IN BURMA.

MR. BRADLAUGH asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the ordinary pay and allowances of postal clerks in Upper Burma were, until recently, 40 rupees per month and free rations; whether the free rations of postal clerks had been recently suppressed; whether half of the ordinary salary of a postal clerk was retained by the Government until it amounted to 800 rupees, kept as security against individual dishonesty, so that a postal clerk on a nominal salary of 40 rupees per month for forty months actually only received 20 rupees per month; whether other, and what, deductions were also made from the salaries of postal clerks for a guarantee fund against dishonesty as well of themselves as of other employes; whether he was aware that the suppression of the free rations had reduced some of those postal clerks to a condition of great misery; and whether he would state the salary of the Deputy Postmaster-General, and if it was correct that, in addition to his salary, the Deputy Postmaster-General received an allowance for rations, or on what other account, of 200 rupees per month.

SIR J. GORST: The first five questions relate to questions of local administration, respecting which the Secretary of State is not in possession of any official information. The salary appropriated to the office of Deputy Postmaster-General in Burma at the present time is 1,000 rupees, rising to 1,400 per mensem. The question whether a special allowance is to be made to the present holder of the office to raise his salary to an amount approximating to what he was receiving as first assistant to the Postmaster-General of India—viz., 1,280 rupees per mensem—is now under consideration.

THE HON. A. HAY'S APPOINTMENT.

SIR G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was true, as stated in the public journals, that the Hon. A. Hay, recently an officer in the Scots Guards, had joined the Burma police force as a superintendent of police; whether that officer now belonged to the Indian Staff Corps or to any of the regular services; if he had been appointed to the Burma police, who appointed him; and whether he had passed in the Native language, and his fitness for the post had been tested by examination, or otherwise.

SIR J. GORST: 1. Yes. 2. No. 3. The Governor-General of India. 4. The Secretary of State is not aware what examinations Mr. Hay has passed. An examination in the Native language has to be undergone before a right to permanent employment in the police is attained.

THREATENED FAMINE IN INDIA.

DR. CAMERON asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether any information had been received at the India Office regarding the threatened famine in Goojerat, Kankan, Kattyawar, and elsewhere; and whether it was true, as stated, that "great scarcity, bordering on famine," already prevailed in Orissa; that the Government had been memorialised from Aska to open relief works and provide military protection; and that the collector of Vizagapatam had telegraphed for troops.

SIR J. GORST: In reply to a telegram from the Secretary of State, the Government of India reported on the 30th of October that in Goojerat (which for the present purpose includes Kattyawar) the situation was unsatisfactory, but nowhere critical. Distress in Khurda and Orissa had diminished and position improved, owing to heavy rain, but the paddy crop was not yet out of danger. Condition in Ganjam (North-East Madras) was critical, and distress might come later, but prices of staple food had fallen. No information has been received of any scarcity in Kankan. Since that date telegrams have been received from the Government of India, dated 3rd, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th of November, reporting heavy rainfall in North-East Madras and Orissa, which still continue. Reports have been received by post showing that, owing to a failure of crops to the Khurda sub-division of Orissa, a relief system was organised early in August last, and seventy-six relief works were opened, gratuitous relief being given to about 1,000 people daily who were unable to work. The Secretary of State has no information as to a memorial from Aska, nor as to any necessity for military intervention.

Nov. 9.

THE HYDERABAD MINING COMPANY.

Sir R. LETHBRIDGE asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether, in view of the fact that the whole time of the House had been placed at the disposal of Her Majesty's Government, any opportunity would be afforded to a private member this Session to raise a discussion on the report of the Select Committee on the affairs of the Hyderabad (Deccan) Mining Company.

Mr. W. H. SMITH said that time at the disposal of the Government for public business during the remainder of this Session was very limited, and he regretted that he could not afford the facilities desired by his hon. friend in regard to that important question until next session.

ENGLISHMEN IN DUTCH INDIA.

Mr. WEBSTER asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether representations had been made to the Government of His Majesty the King of the Netherlands with the view to exonerating Englishmen resident in Netherlands India from the local militia, or Schuttery.

Sir J. FERGUSSON: As I have on several occasions informed the House, there is no stipulations in the treaties between Great Britain and the Netherlands, exempting British subjects from service in the militia in the Dutch colonies. Unless, therefore, it can be shown that other foreigners are exempt, Her Majesty's Government cannot properly make any representations against such service.

A CAMPAIGNING PHRASE BOOK.

[The German Government are distributing to the Austrian and German armies a Special German, Polish, and Russian dictionary with the pronunciation in use in campaigning.—Vide Home Paper.]

The Indian Government, we understand, have in the Press a somewhat similar dictionary intended for the use of the British soldier in his little expeditions. We are enabled to publish a few extracts from the "Manual of Conversation," which, it will be seen, is compiled for the most part in Regimental Volapük. Thus:—

Who is this person?
Kone O tum, yonder?
 Where is the enemy?
Kidderabouts Paythan?
 Is he in that nullah?
Nullah mallum? Kooch anybody there hai?
 Is he behind that mountain?
Lumber hill woller junter? T'other side ooper hai?
 Is he in force?
Kitna them beggars?
 Is he going to fight?
Shindy ho-jaiga?
 Indicate his position.
Just you bloomin' well butlao.
 Your information is incorrect:
You're a bloomin' jute bart woller, you are.
 You are not a Malik, and I cannot treat with you:
Mullick be damned hai! Orf'cer ke pars ow, an' 'e'll mullick yer.
 Be good enough to stop:
Hi yi! Tyro! Halt there! Baito or I'll blow yer hugly 'ead orf!
 Drop your gun at once:
Bundook let go, slippy!
 I am not going to kill you:
Hum nay marraga.
 Are you afraid? I shall not hurt you unless you run away:
Durro tum! Boat, eh? Boat acchy! Don't you dowro an' I won't marrow. But if you dowro I'll marrow you Jehannum ki marfik. Sumjer?
 Private of a Goorkha regiment, kindly direct me to the refreshments:
Hi you, Johnny, Canteen kiddar? Come along.
 I am hungry:
Khanna hai? Grub got it? All right, chupatti'll do.
 I want a sheep:
Baba mankta. Ba-ba!
 Have you not got a fat sheep? I will pay for it.
Baba not hai? Paisa hai. Kissiwasty no baba? D'you take me for a chor?
 That sheep is urgently required:

Just you dado a baba—moter waller an' none o'your lip?
 Why have you brought me a child?
Kissiwasty lurker hai? Take 'im away.
 Why do you fly from me?
Kyko cuttin' about ither-uther? Phere ow? I aint goin' to marrow you.

Take your women away from this place:
Nickle-jao Bibi-log. Pulton owega. Ah! That laoded you.
 Are you wounded? I will get you water.
Bullet got it, inside'im? Boat acchy. Hum pani hai Tum bait.

Put up your hands:
Chor do that chury. Ooper you—your sneakin' 'ands! Issimarfik! More ooper, or you don't get no pani!
 You must not shoot at a man who is giving you water when you are wounded:

Dekko! Yee bundook hai: yee your big thick head hai: yee pani hai. Now which'll you've?

You are still obstreperous; you must be quiet:

Abby dick givin', eh? You baito choop.

I am going to deprive you of your arms:

Bundook broke hai. Pistol no use hai. Chury hum smashega; an' there you are!

You must come into camp as my prisoner:

Sung ao! Isturuf. Quick march, Paythan. Tum pucker row hai. Hum puckrower. Iswasti chello!

Here is a camel, load him up:

Hi! Dekko this old 'ummin'-bird oont! Uski portmanteau pack kurro.

He is loaded all on one side and too tightly roped:

Sub cockeye, slew jam hai. Arsty with that there russey.

D'you want to cut 'im in arder?

Does he always make this disgusting noise?

Ham 'sher bubbly squeak bolter? What a jarnwar!

The camels are blocking the path of the infantry:

Hi you oont wallers argee! 'Ole bloomin' campaign kiwasty 'ere baitega? Charing Cross nay hai; picnic nay hai. Hoo-kee chell!

This campaign is now concluded:

'Can't you larrai kurro no better than this jat? Hum barrick ko jaiger. Tum choop or we'll be back phere an' make you sit ooper. Salamm!

R. C.

CAPTAIN SIR HENRY MORLAND has filed a suit against the G.I.P. Railway Company for one lakh of rupees as damages for injuries sustained by him recently at the Bombay Victoria Terminus, owing to the alleged negligence of the defendants in leaving a heap of stones in the road, and leaving the place unlighted, in consequence of which his carriage was upset. He also claims Rs. 10,000 for Lady Morland from the railway company for the injuries sustained by her on the same occasion.

The Deccan Times understands that the Government of India has decided to recall Mr. Hughes, of the Geological Survey, and place his services at the disposal of the Chief Commissioner of Burma duty either at the Ruby Mines or at Perak, in the Malay Peninsula, to study the system of tin streaming adopted by the Chinese, and apply it, if practicable, to the working of the metalliferous deposits of Tenasserim.

A CALCUTTA paper says:—"A small pamphlet has been issued for private circulation by Mr. D. R. Lyall, Commissioner of the Chittagong Division, and Mr. A. F. Dowling, of the Kornafuli Association, on the Trade and Financial prospects of Chittagong, together with notes of a railway to Chandpur and Silchar. The statistics are very carefully compiled, and the authors state their case with force and moderation. The contention of the pamphlet is that Chittagong is the natural outlet for the produce of Eastern Bengal and Assam; that the port is easy of access and not dangerous; that the proposed railway would have a large immediate traffic, and would improve our communications with Assam and Burma; that there is a large amount of produce seeking a better outlet than that already existing; and that, with the exception of a bridge across the river Fenny, there are no engineering difficulties in the way."

THE report is gaining ground, says a Karachi paper, that the amalgamation of Sind with the Punjab is a settled measure, and will be carried out very shortly. The scheme in all its details is said to be lying cut and dry in the India Office, and the Secretary of State is only waiting for the recommendation of the Government of India. Unless the final decision is arrived at before the new Viceroy enters upon his office, the agitation against the annexation may be revived with better chances of a good hearing. It is our sincere conviction that the amalgamation of the two provinces will be a misfortune to Sind. All that the annexationists ask will be had as soon as the line between Delhi and Kotri is opened. To expect anything else from the Punjab Government, hampered as it is, with its own multiplying responsibilities and diminishing funds is a chimera and a mirage.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

SCIENTIFIC RELIGION.*

It was known that the quondam man of letters and diplomatist, Laurence Oliphant by name, has abandoned the paths of fame, and betaken himself to a quiet retreat, there in due course to undergo the pains and perils of giving birth to a new creed. The infant thus launched into the world received at baptism the name of "Scientific Religion." What is it? What is its nature? How can others adopt it? Five hundred pages of the most abstruse explanations fail to reveal to an ordinary reader the faintest outline of what the author wishes to convey. At every turn there are the strangest of words. Who would know, unless told, that Sympneumata means "evolutionary forces, now active in man," and who could give a terse description of the purport of the latter phrase. What is a "hypnotic suggestion?" What is a "duplex cerebral action?" What is a "sphymograph?" What is a "dynasphere?" What is a "protyle?" What is a "biogen?" Take, again, sentences at random. "Hence it is that we have seen within the last few years a movement in the direction of ancient oriental mysticism, which would not have been possible did not a very powerful society exist in the invisible world, which has taken advantage of the increased attenuated condition of the odyllic sphere of the one to make an inroad into it." Once again. "And having also decided that matter can never touch matter, every atom being prevented from doing so by its own 'dynasphere' (nobody knows what a dynasphere is made of), and being further satisfied that the atomic abyss is as unfathomable as the interstellar space is immeasurable," &c., &c.

Does not the brain reel and become giddy under such a superincumbent mass of inexplicable terms, of meaningless phrases, of ponderous assertions, and of enigmatical dicta? The tongue of criticism lolls helpless in the mouth when such un-understandable a farrago of incomprehensibility appears page after page in never-ending sequence. How can a religion expressed in such terms make headway? How, too, can a creed take root which needs the seclusion of absolute retirement in a quite nook on Mount Carmel in company with the spirit of a departed wife? The great virtue of the Christian faith is its simplicity. "Love your neighbour, fear God, honour the King," are injunctions, the meaning and purport of which cannot for a moment be open to doubt; but scientific religion first bewilders, then perplexes, and, finally, overturns the intellect of its votaries. What manner of man must a person become to throw aside the cares of a life, to seek solitude, to lisp nonsense, and dream that in so doing he is serving God and raising up a new creed? If, as Mr. Oliphant proclaims, he cannot write save when the spirit moves him, it were devoutly to be wished that the good folks of the upper or nether world would leave the poor man alone, and allow him, as heretofore, to wield the most pleasant of pens, and indite the most fascinating of books. The sprites might have "run amuck" with some less gifted son of Adam, and left the world happier, and the gainer.

INTERNATIONAL LAW.†

What is International Law? The question is easy to ask, but the answer is so difficult that probably no two lawyers of eminence will agree as to its nature. A few moments' reflections will serve to indicate the peculiarity of the case. "Law implies," says Lord Coleridge, "a law-giver and a tribunal capable of enforcing it, and coercing its transgressors. But there is no common law-giver to sovereign states, and no tribunal has the power to bind them by decrees or coerce them if they transgress." What a vista of difficulty and doubt do these short, pithy sentences open out! Internally a nation can, of course, make laws for its own subjects; but how can any particular people lay down regulations for the guidance and direction of the denizens in other climes? Can England legislate for France, Russia for Germany, and America for Canada?

These few observations will serve to show the extreme delicacy, the never-ending uncertainty, which enshroud the matter which the late lamented Sir Henry Maine took in hand when he delivered his "Whewell" lectures before the University of Cambridge. Possessed as that eminent jurist was of the most clear, most logical, most subtle intellect of the present century it may be well understood that he has treated the intangibility of International Law with a lucidity, a penetrating acumen, which reflect the highest credit upon his capacity and powers of thought. It is not within the range of an unprofessional journal to examine critically the arguments of the writer. It must suffice to direct attention to a most masterly analysis of one of the most intricate and perplexing phases of law. There is an entire absence of technical phraseology. "He who runs may read," and even an everyday citizen of the world might, with advantage, peruse a volume which throw no inconsiderable a degree of light upon a matter the study of which is not of necessity confined to the denizens of Lincoln's Inn, or the citizens of the Temple.

COMPENSATION—THE PUBLICANS' CASE.*

This little brochure states with considerable ability and with remarkable force the case of the publican as regards compensation. It is, perhaps, a necessity that the matter should be cogently and reasonably argued, albeit it is pretty well understood that the opposition which the compensation clauses created in the House of Commons was due to the circumstance that the Separatist party were not possessed of sufficient patriotism to resist the opportunity of gaining a victory of sentiment by the aid of the temperance party. The events of the case had little, if anything, to do with the action of the disruptionists.

NOTES ON THE PRINCIPAL PICTURES IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY AT VENICE.†

Travelling is now so much the fashion that there is scarce a person it the upper circles, if not, indeed, in the middle classes of society, who does not at time run across the Channel and visit the cities of the Continent. Amongst the many localities which lay claim to high attraction perhaps few are more prominent than the City of Gondolas—the grand, the beautiful, the romantic Venice. Of course, too, every visitor to that lovely city repairs to the Royal Academy of Fine Arts and Public Picture Gallery. Such being the case, Mr. Eastlake, well-known as the keeper of the National Gallery at London, has done wisely in compiling a catalogue raisonné of the far from insignificant collection of pictures which grace the land of the Doges. That such a work by such an authority is trustworthy is not open to question; it has evidently been prepared with care and diligence, and the author has wisely abstained from any consideration of the authenticity of the pictures of which the origin is more or less open to doubt.

The Indian Magazine for November (London: Kegan Paul; Bristol: Arrowsmith) does not seem to have suffered from the absence in India of its indefatigable editress. In particular, we have a very sensible article on "Marriage Reforms among Mohamedans in the Punjab," by Mohamed Shah Din; the writer seems inclined to think that, though "Musalmans are, as a rule, very touchy on matters religious, and the very name of reform in this direction (general ceremonies) is enough to doom the reformer," yet that, as to the marriage expenses, "the current of popular thought, like a stream that gradually changes its course, is drifting into the right direction." The well-known, and distinguished, Mr. Chan Toon contributes a very readable account of Nat worship in his Native country, Burma. The Burmese display the same fondness for giving to each rock, each stream, each grove, its own deity, which is so conspicuous, and which imparts such vivid individuality to, the works of the earlier Greek poets. From Burma we have also a well-translated extract (by Mr. St. John) from the "Great Jataka of Mahosahita." The review of Dr. Busested's "Echoes from Old Calcutta," will call the attention of many old "Qui-hyes" to the days when the glory of the present City of Palaces was not, and when the first and greatest of Governors-General bore sway in India.

We have received from Messrs. Over of Rugby an excellent little brochure containing a full and precise account of that noble school which has been immortalised as the scene of Dr. Arnold's life, and which has been so admirably and forcibly described in "John Brown's Schooldays." Considerable care has been expended on this compilation, and it serves a useful purpose for the many who have boys to educate, and sons to place out in life.

W. G. JOHNSON, F.R.H.S.,

The Pioneer of Electropathic Treatment, and who has had nearly twenty years' experience, has designed and patented the HYGIO-ELECTRIC BELT, which combines the well-known efficacy of a portable Voltaic Battery of unique construction with the Hygienic properties of Dr. Daubigne's MEDICATED PUMILIO-PINOL FELT. Recommended by the Medical Faculty in England and abroad.

This Belt is the most scientific and bond fide Electric Belt ever invented, and is guaranteed to show the chemical experiment, "decomposition of water" in a "Voltmeter," the ONLY TRUE TEST of a genuine Electric Appliance.

Patients who may desire the old style of Belt made with alternate discs of zinc and copper can for the future be supplied with them (ANY AND EVERY MAKE) at half-price.

Why pay 21s., when you can procure the same article for 10s. 6d.?

Every man and woman suffering from any of the above-mentioned ailments should possess one of these marvellous remedial agents. It will preserve or restore your health, as the case may be, and is a marvel of efficacy and cheapness.

MR. W. G. JOHNSON may be consulted daily (personally or by letter) free of charge, on all subjects relating to Health and the application of Curative Electricity. An experienced lady is also in attendance from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1888.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN AND THE CONGRESS.

THE Times correspondent at Calcutta has for some time past been anxious that the Government of India should express some opinion upon the aims and bearings of the so-called National Congress towards English rule in the East. The same correspondent would have the Supreme Government take repressive measures against the brutal frankness of the Native Press in its abuse of that rule. The Governor-General in Council has, however, avoided giving expression to any public opinion on these matters, and this silence has been commented upon not very favourably by the Anglo-Indian Press in the three Presidencies. It has remained for Sir Auckland Colvin to take the initiative in breaking through the trammels of official reserve, and, according to the telegrams to-day, he has done so in no halting terms. Holding, as he does, very advanced opinions as to the widening of the bounds of political freedom and representation, young Bengal and the friendly agitators who support him may well have been surprised at reading the Resolution which we learn that his Honour has just published concerning the Congress. The following goes straight to the mark, and will be very difficult to answer:—

It is infinitely more agreeable to clamour for place and power than to adopt rigorous social reforms. The Congress party has been compared to the infant Hercules. It is well to remember that such infant prodigies, confined to the domestic circle, should be employed in the extirpation of poisonous life and in crushing the reptiles infesting it; the cleansing of Augean stables and the pursuit of golden fruit being reserved for maturer years. The Congress party represents only a small section of men, educated under the English system, who would be more usefully employed in educating the people than in educating the authorities. It is unreasonable to ask that a large system of representation should be introduced at the demand of an extremely small and peculiar section of the community; that the methods of administration familiar and agreeable to vast masses should be changed for those as much out of harmony with Indian political atmosphere as the banyan tree would be out of place in Parliament-street.

The claims of this minute and exceptional class are of such a character that no Rajpoot or Brahmin of Upper India would sacrifice a single hair of his whisker to attain them. It is objectionable in the highest degree that, in order to introduce these changes in the administration, the Government of India should be held up to hatred as standing between the people and the benevolence of the Government in England, as endeavouring in its own interests to obstruct measures having for their object the welfare of the people, and as embodying the tradition and practices of oppression and disregard of popular claims. All this, while utterly untrue, is calculated to further the designs of those who are disaffected towards English rule in India, and who gladly utilise the Congress mechanism for stirring up discontent, as well as to serve a propaganda for spreading the doctrine that the British rule in India is calamitous.

Even the most advanced Natives are merely in the stage of political babyhood. No nation, least of all an Eastern nation, can be trusted in less than the lifetime of a living man to adopt and put in practice conceptions of political life which are confined at present to the Anglo-Saxon race, and were elaborated by them only after long and painful centuries.

Whether Sir Auckland has done wisely in publishing this Resolution is a question open to comment. That his views, and possibly his character, will be violently attacked in the Bengali Press may be accepted as a matter of course; but it may also be urged that he has put a weapon in the hands of his opponents. It will be said, perhaps, that the appearance of such a protest as his is the offspring of fear, and that in giving publicity to his opinions he has confessed that the Congress is a real political local power, which the Paramount Power has to treat with on a basis which must be recognised. If it has come to this Native opinion in India has certainly made rapid strides of late. But is this so? Does the Congress really represent the views, hopes, wants, or feelings of the peoples of India? This is the question the answer to which lies at the root of the whole matter. Those who are best acquainted with the inner life of the millions of India scout the idea that the orators and agitators who have engaged Mr. Bradlaugh as their representative in England are in any way representatives of the multitudes whose "wrongs" and "sorrows" they are so anxious to redress. The Lieutenant-Governor, who has just come forward to protest against them, unfortunately lifts them to a prominence which they themselves would have found some difficulty to climb to. We are afraid that the resolution which he has published will give the enemy "cause to blaspheme" him. They will say that had not the power of the Congress been great and to be feared a man of the character and opinions of Sir Auckland Colvin would not have thus come forward to protest; and we must fain admit that there is some force in such argument. Silence would, perhaps, in this matter, have been more powerful for good than speech.

But if the upholders of the Congress and the Congressmen themselves take to rejoicing on the ground that a Lieutenant-Governor is afraid of them, they may have less reason for self-congratulation if they will only peruse what a representative organ of the Mahommedans, whom they are so anxious to enlist on their side, thinks of them. The Muslim Herald says:—

To call the bulk of the agitators patriots is to put language to basest use. Inordinate vanity, grasping self-interest, and, in many instances, cowardly revenge, underlie all their specious pretences and hollow asseverations. The horizon that bounds their view is a larger number of offices under Government. They are incapable of self-sacrifice. Talk they can and talk they do, and—that is all! Were India in peril to-morrow, not a drop of patriot blood would stain the steel of the invader, although they talk bravely enough now of bombs and guns and wounds. Not only would they be useless in a moment of danger, but they are a danger in themselves. The bulk of them belong to a class that has lost nothing, and to whom the British Government owes no restitution. Sir William Hunter and the political gang now being got together in England cast a glamour around through which objects, insignificant, grow, in seeming, to vast proportions. The Congresswallahs are poor in all but assurance. A homely saw has it—"Put a beggar on a horse, and he will ride to the devil." The "patriots" aptly illustrate this truth. They defile the beard of Government and profess loyalty; they have a free Press which they abuse; they have the right of free speech which they abuse; and if power passed into their hands to-morrow, there is not the shadow of a doubt they would abuse that too.

The portrait is not flattering; but, so long as the Mahommedans of India are satisfied that it is a true one little fear need be felt of the results of Congress talk and agitation.

A CORRESPONDENT at Coonoor writes to the Ooty paper:—"The rumour here is that Mr. Woolley has failed to float the Nilgiri Railway Company in England, and is returning to this country in disgust. The Madras Railway Company, it is said, will take the work in hand, and, perhaps, for the better, as in that case the continuation of the line to Ootacamund may be looked upon as a certainty."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government of N.W. Provinces have definitely adopted the scheme of a Volunteer Reserve.

ONE hundred new Magazine rifles have arrived at Calcutta for experimental purposes.

IN connection with the scheme for the reorganisation of Native contingents, the services of some picked non-commissioned officers will be lent to the Punjab Chiefs to act as drill instructors to troops of the various States.

THE Commander-in-Chief has given his sanction for a military tournament to be held in November in aid of the headquarters' building fund of the 2nd City of London Volunteers, of which General Sir Frederick Roberts is the honorary colonel.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN EXPEDITION.

Writing from Kunhar on the 15th Oct., the correspondent of the Allahabad paper says:—

The flying visit paid us yesterday by General Channer and his staff has enlightened us considerably as to the doings of the other columns, for excellent an institution as is the heliograph, and most valuable the service it has rendered, there are little details and incidents which the hardworked instrument finds no time to record, and which can only be conveyed by word of mouth. So, if my letter of to-day contains more news of the other columns than of ours, you will know the reason why.

It was a sporting performance of General Channer and his staff to descend from their mountain fastnesses and visit us down here, and strange, indeed, that the 2nd and not the 3rd column should be first to "drop in to tea." The fact is the road was considered impracticable, and those who had peeped over the edge of the khud brought back most discouraging reports; but, not to be beat, General Channer annexed a perambulating barber—whose vocation has made him acquainted with all the byeways and edges of the neighbouring country—and giving him the option of a divided carotid or a backsheesh in the event of his showing the way, Figaro wisely chose the latter course, and in four hours time the General was in our camp.

Our visitors complained sorely of the heat, and one might almost have imagined that a band of Esquimaux had descended into our midst. And for the first time we began to fully realise the difference of temperature experienced by our various columns—and wondrous tales they told us of shivering men wrapped in poshteens, of shivering men of the Suffolk not wrapped in poshteens and for five days with only one blanket—of snow they talked and huge fires of crackling pine-logs, till one began to conjure up visions of the hunting of the cariboo in the glorious backwoods of far-distant Canada, and to feel we were almost doing something wrong in sitting coatless gasping under the nearest shade.

It is truly wonderful how quickly the British soldier will adapt himself to the exigencies of any situation—no matter how novel and foreign to the ordinary routine of barrack-life—and whether he be called upon suddenly to row a boat, to bestride that unwieldy brute the camel, or build unto himself huts composed of mud walls and pine branches, as in the present expedition, nothing comes amiss; and from all accounts our men have been managing to make themselves pretty comfortable.

As regards actual opposition, if the other columns have not had the chance like us of meeting their foes in fair and open fight, they have been exposed to a form of guerilla warfare infinitely more harassing and discouraging. To be potted from behind a tree at twenty paces without the slightest chance of retaliation, and in most cases without seeing even a trace of your foe, must be in the highest degree aggravating, and nothing but the extremely bad shooting of these skulking hillmen has prevented our losses from being much more serious than they are. General Channer and Staff, for instance, advancing on a sunghar on the Barchar spur had a volley fired at him from not more than twenty yards' distance, and no one was hit. On the other hand, there are a considerable number of good shots among the enemy well armed—some of them old sepoys—and one reprobate who skulked up on the night of the 5th and shot one of the 40th picquet, shouted, as he disappeared down the khud, that he was a deserter from the 29th. A pity the villain got off scot-free!

This constant liability to stealthy attacks has, of course, rendered it necessary to have strong picquets posted round the camp, and night duty at first fell very heavily on the men, especially coming as it frequently did on the top of a heavy and long day's work, one regiment having as many as 112 men on one occasion on outpost duty. And long hard days have been the rule, not the exception. Take, for instance, the day on which General Channer burnt Seri. He left camp at Nimal 6.45 A.M., with picked men of the 2nd and 3rd columns, descended to Seri 5,000 feet, fired it and blew up towers, returning the same evening without a single man having fallen out, and reaching camp at night—a good day's work. On all hands I hear great accounts of the valuable services rendered by our active Khyber allies under their cheery leader Major Aslam Khan. They number 250 strong, and on their first arrival at our camp, a motley crew without blankets or ammunition, there was, I hear, a general turning up of noses—and a sort of feeling that the sooner the whole lot were packed off and sent back to their native wilds the better. But they soon changed all that, and for this particular form of hill warfare proved themselves invaluable auxiliaries and the best flankers the most exacting commander could desire. Their method of procedure is as follows. As soon as the wily foe has discharged his piece from his ambush, while the Sikhs open-mouthed stand gaping over the khud, the little Khyberis, without giving him time to reload, dash down on his lurking place like a pack of beagles, shouting and yelling like fiends, and discharging their pieces here, there, and everywhere, but seldom, if ever, failing to bring the astonished hillmen to bay. These tactics, I am told, have entirely disconcerted the Hassanzais, who show a decided disinclination to face this new style of warfare, and outwitted at their own game have almost entirely desisted from their unpleasant attentions.

THE DEFEAT OF ISHAK KHAN.

Latest Cabul news, dated the 12th Oct., fully confirms the previous reports of Ishak Khan's flight. The Ameer's troops have occupied Andkhoy and Shirbarghan, and the whole of Afghan-Turkistan is now quiet. Particulars of the fight at Tashkurgan go to show that the action was of a desperate kind, very unusual in Afghan warfare. The Ameer's general, Gholam Hyder Orakzai, had at his disposal four regiments of cavalry, each about 400 strong, a number of irregular horsemen, thirteen regiments of infantry, and twenty-six guns, the total force numbering about 8,000 men. Opposed to him was a force much superior in strength as regards cavalry and infantry, but with fewer guns. Cholan Hyder's camp was pitched in the Ghazni Gate Valley, near Tashkurgan, while the rebels held a position in advance of the Saiyadan Gorge, through which the road to Mazar-i-Sharif passes. On the morning of September 28th the Ameer's General determined to commence the attack, as Ishak Khan's troops were seen to be on the move, as if meditating to take the offensive. He broke up his force into two divisions, one under Abdulla Khan, Governor of Badakshan, with General Wakil Khan to assist him; the other under his personal orders. The former division consisted of three regiments of cavalry and irregular sowars, and seven regiments of infantry, with two guns attached to each. Twenty boxes of ammunition were sent on mules with each battalion as a reserve. Abdulla Khan advanced on the left towards some hillocks, which he attempted to occupy, but was met by Ishak's General, Mahomed Husain, who had taken one regiment of cavalry and four of infantry a somewhat circuitous route with a view of making a flank attack. The artillery opened fire at 7 A.M., and the infantry soon after became engaged, getting to close quarters as they charged each other with bayonet three times. Nothing decisive occurred until past noon, when Mahomed Husain's flank attack proved disastrous to Abdulla Khan. Gholam Hyder was directing the fighting against the troops commanded by Ishak in person, when he noticed that the firing had ceased away on his left. He rode over to discover the meaning of this, and found that the division had surrendered, and were almost surrounded by the enemy. Abdulla Khan and Wakil Khan had fled with their cavalry, believing the action was lost, and the rebels were looting the camp. Gholam Hyder states that on his being recognised shots were fired at him, but he killed one man, who tried to intercept him, and galloped back to his own division. This was the first phase of the action which was disastrous enough in its way to the Ameer's troops, but Mahomed Husain failed to keep his men together once they saw a chance of looting, and thus he could not reap the full benefit of his initial success. The second phase of the battle was marked by a determined attack upon Ishak's main body, which proved successful, owing to the continuous fire which the Afghan regulars were enabled to keep up with their Martini-Henrys. Gholam Hyder carried a position which threatened Ishak's artillery, and as his infantry continued to advance the rebels broke and fled towards the Saiyadan Gorge. They were pursued, but their leaders, with a large body of cavalry, managed to escape. The slaughter here from the breech-loading fire was very great, 1,600 killed being reported by the Ameer's General. Ishak's artillery, baggage, and camp fell into the hands of Gholam Hyder, who then forbade his men to loot the camp, and withdrew them from the pursuit in order that they might replenish their ammunition pouches. Having done this he was prepared to meet Mahomed Husain, who tried to force his way towards the Gorge in order to rejoin Ishak. His troops, however, could not stand the fire directed upon them, and, as Abdulla Khan's division was by this time again in fighting order, the action ended in the utter break-up of the rebels. Their losses were again severe, and again the Martini-Henry did terrible execution. On the following day the Saiyadan Gorge was occupied, and on the 30th Gholam Hyder with six infantry regiments and ten guns began his march upon Mazar-i-Sharif. He met with no opposition, and the remnant of Ishak's troops, consisting of three squadrons of cavalry and three regiments of infantry, surrendered forthwith. The pretender, it appeared, had sent his family across the Oxus three days before, and had himself fled to Kerki, in Bokharan territory. His General, Mahomed Husain, was seized by the people of Takht-i-Pul, and brought into Mazar-i-Sharif. Thus ended Ishak Khan's rebellion. He risked a pitched battle, and it seemed at one time that he would have been victorious, but the tide was turned by the breech-loading fire of the Ameer's regular troops, and Gholam Hyder's success in the end was as complete as even his exacting master could desire.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP "MALABAR."

Her Majesty's troopship Malabar, 4,173 tons, Commander A. D. Fanshawe, arrived in harbour on October 24th, from Portsmouth, which she left on September 26th. She called en route at Queenstown on the 28th, Malta on October 7th, Port Said on the 11th, and Suez on the 13th of October. She brought batteries of Royal Artillery. * If necessary, the Serapis on this voyage will proceed to Bombay, via the Cape of Good Hope, to embark the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade.

† The dates of this voyage are subject to alteration if the Serapis proceeds out via the Cape.

THE Siam, which brought the mails last week, says a Calcutta paper, "was signalled off Bombay at 12.30 (midnight), and anchored in Bombay harbour at two o'clock on Monday morning. The mails for this side of India were thus delayed in Bombay from 2 A.M. to 6 P.M., or sixteen hours. They ought to have been sent on by special train to overtake the ordinary mail train which left Bombay at 6 P.M. on Sunday. The natural impression created is that this means was not employed to expedite delivery of the home letters and papers in Bengal, because the Government of India is absent at Simla, and public convenience—the mere non-official wants of the capital—count for nothing in the official mind."

THE Secretary of the Madras Victoria Technical institution lately made an application to the Madras Government for the contribution to the funds, and at the same time made a statement as to their condition. From this it appears that Rs. 1,04,826 have been already subscribed and some Rs. 15,000 promised, making a total of say, Rs. 1,19,826. The following is the order of the Madras Government on the application:—"The Government are prepared to contribute a sum equal to a maximum of half a lakh of rupees, but such special contributions as that of the Mangalore Jubilee Committee cannot be taken into account. The other sums mentioned by Mr. Adam come to Rs. 92,826, and the Accountant-General will at once pay to him half that sum, or Rs. 46,413, to be debited to 26, Scientific and Minor Departments. The only conditions which His Excellency in Council considers it necessary to impose are that the nomination of the chairman or president and of one-third of the members of the Executive Council shall be reserved to the Government; and that an annual report of the working of the institute be submitted to Government through the Director of Public Instruction. The Government members will be nominated from time to time after the other members have been elected."

surance are furnished on application.

THE BROAD ARROW
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on especially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette"
circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies.
It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux
of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ...
there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman,
October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India,
or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—
Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

[Published at Observer Office, Colombo, Ceylon,
on or about the 1st of each month.
Commenced in June, 1881.]

"THE TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST" has now an assured position in its large circulation in Ceylon, Southern and even Central and Northern India,
the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Java, Borneo, Northern Australia, Queensland, Central America, Natal, Mauritius, and the West Indies. From all sub-tropical planting settlements we have had cordial approval of the publication and an encouraging measure of support. The English,

THE "TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST."

As a medium for English, American, and Australian ADVERTISEMENTS of goods suitable for the tropics, India, as well as Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Java, and West Indies—Central America being included in that term), or connected with agriculture, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST stands unrivalled, the work being constantly in the hands of Native as well as European and American agriculturists. Being a Monthly Periodical, the TROPICAL AGRICULTURIST lies on the table and is very often referred to during each month, a fact which advertisers will know how to appreciate.

Mr. W. T. Thiselton Dyer, F.L.S., C.M.G., Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, writing of the T. A., refers to it as "an astonishing repertory of everything relating to the economic botany of the East."

* * For the sale of plants, seeds, machinery, implements, &c., used in tropical (tea, sugar, fibres, &c.) agriculture, no better advertising medium exists.

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

 INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect is now remedied by publishing MONTHLY (in Bombay) a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which provides a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. The Voice of India thus gives forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine advocates no views of its own. It seeks only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative, and it will be seen that the writings thus brought before the English public are characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances are from time to time being set forth; but it is a policy of prudence, no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be subscribed for by Members of Parliament and other public men desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in Clubs, Reading-rooms, Libraries, and Institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

J. B. DENT, Manager.

Wanted agents, at home and abroad, to obtain orders
 for watches and jewellery on our new instalment system, by weekly or monthly payments. Most beneficial to subscribers and agents, as money paid for rent of showy shops and shopmen are thus saved to members joining our instalment system. Also trustworthy men wanted in every ship, regiment, and battery to act as agents, to enable naval and military men to secure good, reliable watches at a small profit above the actual cost.

Naval and military agents when leaving the service,
 desirous of being appointed district agents or travellers, are invited to apply for the post. Means of earning a good income were never before placed so easily in the reach of intelligent, energetic naval or military men leaving the service. Terms on application.
